HOME RULE.

The defeat of the Home Rule Bill in the House of Lords at one o'clock last Saturday morning was an event which, although of considerable importance, was not entirely unexpected. In fact it has long since been conceded that that irresponsible body would not long entertain a measure so directly opposed to the traditions and prejudices of their class, and which came to them fresh from the hands of the Grand Old Man and his intrepid associates. Aristocratic is the complexion of the House of Lords; a measure aiming at the comparative subversion of the power heretofore possessed by aristocratic landlords in Ireland, and which seeks to equalize as far as possible the political position of the several classes of Irish society, naturally aroused their instinctive jealousy, their supercilious pride of position, and that unjust feeling of exclusiveness which is without doubt strongly rooted in their dispositions, and which only requires a slight troubling of the waters to bring it to the surface.

These are the real feelings which animated the Lords to throw the whole weight of their influence, powerful as it is at present, against Mr. Gladstone's cherished scheme; and the fact that these feelings were disguised under the hollow cry of "Separation of the Empire" will not serve to blind the British people to the actual cause underlying their action. It is not the first time in the course of British history that the same body has unreasonably opposed the express will of the British people; but we fail to read the signs of the times aright if it be not the last. At any rate we firmly believe that any persistence in their course in future will imperil their very existence. What course Mr. Gladstone will take just at present is not known, but it is more than probable that, before taking any extreme steps, he will send the bill to the House of Lords again. Should that body repeat the vote of last Saturday, and again reject the measure, there are two courses open to the Premier. He can either create enough new Liberal peers to ensure the passage of the act; or he can dissolve the parliament and go to the country upon the question. The former alternative, though it would finally dispose of the matter, is open to objection on two grounds. In the first place, as the majority against Home Rule in the Lords was upwards of 425, it would necessitate the creation of that number or more new peers, thus vastly increasing the weight of what is already a cumbersome load on the back of national progress. In the second place such a course might appear arbitrary in the eyes of the British people, who are proverbially jealous of despotism, and would probably resent such a course by inflicting defeat at the polls on those responsible for it. The second alternative is open to no such objections. The appeal to the people for their pronouncement upon any public question is the course most in accord with the spirit of the British constitution, and especially at this time of revolutionary measures such as Home Rule. If, after submitting to the people's verdict, Mr. Gladstone goes back to the Lords clothed with a greater and stronger authority from them he will have a moral prestige which it will be dangerous for the Lords to resist. This course then, Mr. Gladstone will probably follow. A second victory at the polls upon the question of Home Rule will leave no doubt in any one's mind that the British people desire it; and with this assurance to strengthen his hand, the Grand Old Man may approach the conflict with the Lords with almost certain prospects of ultimate triumph.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING.

If it be true, as the rumour goes through the city, that the Fredericton gas and electric light company has proposed to the street light committee to make a contract binding themselves to supply arc lights for the city streets at $52 per light, we think the city council, if they are in earnest about the matter, should not much longer delay the proposed improvement. The price named is only a trifle of $2 per light in excess of that named under competition by Mr. Geo. F. Calkin who probably had figured his tender price down as low as he possibly could in order to obtain the award. That the city streets are sadly in need of electric lighting no one will dispute. Those who have been collided with, and jostled and hustled about by crowds on Queen street returning from the various churches on Sunday nights of which there are not a few, will agree with that statement, as will the dwellers on the back streets of the city, who are in almost total darkness after sundown throughout fall and winter and spring. Then, besides the added comfort to the citizens, the electric light would be an added beauty to the city's many attractions, and as for the increased cost, we are of opinion that it will be more than counterbalanced by the considerations just mentioned.

THE LIBERAL LEADER.

Those who have thus far followed Hon. Mr. Laurier's tour throughout the Province of Ontario cannot help being astonished and gratified at the magnificent receptions which have on every side been accorded to him; as well as the general enthusiasm displayed at his meetings. We know that there are some individuals in our own community, chiefly of the ultra orange stripe, who revile at Mr. Laurier because he is a French Canadian Roman Catholic; and who declare that as long as he remains in leadership the Liberal party's attempts to win the day must be in vain. Although we have never in the least given heed to any such uncharitable comments, still we have been curious to know just how the leader would be received in protestant Ontario, where, if at all, his origin and religious beliefs would very naturally bring him into odium. We have narrowly studied the reports of his public meetings appearing in newspapers of both political persuasions; but we have failed to discover the slightest evidence of the least diminution in the respect and esteem felt for Mr. Laurier all along the line. On the contrary, we see the plainest signs that the warm admiration which his honesty and sincerity have always inspired in his nearer personal and political friends has been extended through the whole rank and file of the liberal party, and not a few of the conservatives, and that it has been deepened and intensified as it went. We will venture to say that there is not a public man in Canadian political life today who can begin to compare in this respect with the honoured leader of the liberals. He is a man to be proud of, as he inspires confidence and esteem in his foes as well as his friends. And his splendid personality is going far to make his present tour the magnificent success that it is. When his western journey is finished, we hope that the liberals of New Brunswick will make a strong effort to have him visit this province, and give his followers here the pleasure and benefit which would result from a personal meeting with him as well as from listening to his eloquent expositions of the public affairs of Canada.

THE EXHIBITION.

Everyone will be pleased to learn that the prospects for the complete success of the Provincial Exhibition next week are of the best. The management have worked long and arduously to bring things into proper shape and their labors seem about to be rewarded by results greater than they ever expected. The character of the previous exhibitions, and the favourable impressions made by them on the people of the province, added to the extensive advertisements circulated this year, have all had an effect in attracting attention, and it is probable the attendance next week will be very much larger than ever before. The number of exhibitors, too, is in excess of that of previous years; the exhibiting space is greater than previously; the races for the 20th and 21st promise to be interesting and exciting events, and in fine there will be no department which will not be completely arranged for, and satisfactorily carried on. All that is necessary is fine weather, and we sincerely hope that the committee may be favoured in this respect as well as in all others.

Not Much Fear For the Valkyrie.
 New York, September 14.—The newly elected cup defender Vigilant, weary from her recent battles with the fleet pitted against her, lies at City Island ready to be lifted out of the water and scraped from stem to stern.
 The Colonia is still at Bay Ridge, resting from the long thresh to windward in Monday's race. She has been selected as cup defender in case the Vigilant is disabled. This is somewhat remarkable, in view of the splendid showing of the Jubilee. That veteran enthusiast at Gen. Paine does not seem to be in it this year. Still his ideas have held good, and if it came to a question of Volunteer and Jubilee, it is likely that the bets of the general run of yachtsmen would be cast upon upon the newest Paine boat.
 The old General's red suspenders will not shine in the yacht races this year but he will undoubtedly be given a place of honor on the American boat if he so desires.
 After all, it matters but little which American boat wins. They all fly the Stars and Stripes.
 The Pilgrim and Jubilee left for Boston early yesterday morning, and the Colonia was left in solitary state at Bay Ridge.
 Although the "Valkyrie" has not yet been sighted no anxiety is felt on her account. None of the English cup defenders has made the trip in less than twenty-two days, and it is not likely the "Valkyrie" will strain a point to get over in a hurry. Too much depends on the rigging to strain it unnecessarily, and a "rig" will not drive a boat at racing speed.
 All New York yachtsmen are pleased with the selection of "Vigilant" for cup defender. We selected her because we judged her to be the best boat," said Commodore Smith yesterday. She seems to be equally good in all winds and seas.

The World's Fair Races.
 CHICAGO, Sep. 14.—The first real sporting event of national interest to take place within the Exposition grounds was the swimming contest yesterday under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States. Results: 100 yards dash—1, Arthur T. Kenney. University of Pennsylvania; time 1.12 2/5. 400 yards race—1, Arthur T. Kenney time 5.24 1/5. Half mile race—1, W. G. Douglass, New York; time 13.39 3/5, being one-fifth of a second more than the world's record. One mile race—1, George Whittaker, Milwaukee; time, 28.55 2/5.

A Question.
 How can we raise more corn to the acre? Why, of course by using Putnam's Corn Extractor. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor has given universal satisfaction, for it is sure, safe and painless. Like every article of real merit it has a host of imitators, and we would specially warn the public to guard against those dangerous substitutes offered for the genuine Putnam's Extractor. N. C.
