This same "British pluck" is a characteristic of the native born Canadian, and there are very few walks in life in which it does not bring success as the reward. This much by way of prelude to what bears every indication of being a successful venture on the part of a well-known Canadian house. When it was English, Scotch, Irish announced a few months ago that the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of Brockville, intended establishing a branch of their business in the motherland, there were not a few who were inclined to be skeptical as to the success of the venture, while some boldly predicted failure. "There would be an objection, they urged, "to taking up a colonial remedy, "their business methods differed from those prevailing in Canada;" "the field was al Designs, ready crowded with proprietory remedies long established, and well advertised." These and many other objections were urged as reasons why the venture was a doubtful one. But the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. was not to be LOWEST PRICES. deterred by any objections that might be raised. They had unbounded confidence in the merit of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and the pluck to back up their confidence with their cash. This latter is well known to Canadian newspaper men, who know that less than three years ago the com pany first put upon the market in the form of Pink Pills a prescription which had previously only been used in private practice, and with a skill and audacity that has not been surpassed in the annals of Canadian ad-SPRING QUININE, IRON glad to learn-that short as is the time the Dr. William's Company has been in that field, their success has been rapid and ever in-Price 50 Cts. and $1 creasing. The course of the stroke appears to have been down the entire right side. His leg was entirely powerless, and he was unable to stand. He could not position in which he was placed. His face ing intermittently considerable pain, but more afflicted by his utter helplessness than by by signs and feeble mumblings, The distorthat death should eventually relieve him of

The Rev. Walter Cooper, Wesleyan Methodist minister, whose flock have their spiritual habitation in a substantial building in High street, Old Basford, took a pastors's interest acquainted with the circumstances from almost first to last. A week or two ago Mr. Watson began to astonish all his neighbors by the sudden improvement in his appearance Perhaps the most striking circumstance, howaspect of the man. The deformity of feature caused by the paralysis is entirely removed. His speech is restored, and the right leg, the displacement of which kept him in his bed or chair, has now recovered its function so completely that he is about to take some out-door work in Basford and Nottingham.

Questioned as to the cause of this remarkable improvement in a case universally regarded as incurable by the medical profession, Mrs. Watson, wife of the patient, unhesitating attributed her husband's miraculous recovery to the use of a medicine Called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and brought into considerable prominence by the publication of some remarkable cures affected by their means in Canada and vertising, pushed it in the van of all competi- elsewhere. ### It is a Simple One and Said to be Certain

Mr. Lane, an Eastern traveller and Orientialist, recommends the following treatment for cholera.

He says while residing in Cairo, in 1843, while cholera was raging there, he was informed that there was an Englishman in a small neighboring village that effected a speedy cure in all cases which he had an opportunity of treating. The number of cases was sixty-two, and many of them were very malignant.

I subsequently learned that his mode of treatment was practiced with equal success in Spain, Constantinople and India, and was never followed by typhus in the case of this unfortunate man and is or typhoid fever, which proved fatal in many cases, when the cholera itself had been subdued by other means. Upon applying to him I received the following directions, which I practiced in a few and capacity. He is able to walk about and cases which occurred in my house and his right arm, which was formerly perfectly elsewhere, with invariable success. If incapable of motion, is now moved almost as the patients have not vomited the polreadily as the other, though the fingers have sonous matter which is characteristic of not yet recovered their usual delicate touch. the disease, and which resembles rice water, give a tablespoonful powdered ever, is the great improvement in the personal mustard in a tumbler of cold water as an emetic. After vomiting, whether produced by the disease or the above means, within a few minutes give a wineglassful of brandy, with ten grains of capsicum, powdered (cayenne pepper), stirred up in

it. This generally produces almost immediate relief, and within an hour rest. perspiration and sleep. In a few cases it was found necessary to give half a dose of the brandy and capsicum after half an hour or more. A second half dose was never required, but should it be required it may be given. No other fluid should be drank before recovering. To accelerate convalescence it has been suggested that fifteen drops of mixture of the spirits of ammonia and sulphuric ether in equal parts may be advantageously given three or four times during the following day. The above quantity of brandy and capsicum is for an adult patient suffering a severe attack; in other cases two-thirds or half that quantity may suffice, as I have proven by experience.

Two Brave Boys.

Two poor lads were foraging for fuel on a branch line of the Erie Railway, when a train suddenly approached under full headway. The younger boy was on the track filling a sack with half-burned pieces of coal. He did not see the train until it was almost upon him.

His companion, undaunted by danger, sprang forward, and seizing him by the waist dragged him from under the engine wheels, but not before one of his legs was crushed and mangled.

The rescuer who had displayed as much self possession as courage, was a boy of twelve. He waited a moment expecting that the train would stop, but when it passed out of sight and he perceived that there was no help at hand, he quickly determined what he would do.

It was a lonely reach of railway, without a house near by. He would not leave the boy, who was apparently dying. He remembered that there was a police station half a mile distant. No time was ta be lost if his companion's life was to

He took the boy up into his arms and staggering under the weight trudged along the railway track in the direction of the police station. It was the longest half-mile he had ever known, but he made it without a halt. Breathless from excitement he carried his burden up the station steps and laid it gently on a bench. Then he fainted from sheer exhaustion. The police telephoned for an ambulance and had the wounded boy removed to a hospital, where the surgeons found his leg frightfully mangled. He seemed to have caught the brave, patient spirit of his rescuer. The dressing of the wounds and subsequent operations were tedious and painful, but the nine-year-old patient set his teet together and without whimper or tear endured what he had to bear. The surgeons amazed by his fortitude, called him the bravest patient whom they had ever known.

Heroism retains its quality in commonplace surrounding. These neglected boys with their grimy faces, ragged clothes and sacks of cinder pickings were very humble figures. No passer-by would have given them a second thought.
