"Oh, would some power the giftie gie us,
To see ourselves as others see us;"

Although that seemed hardly realizable when the poet wrote the couplet, yet, in these degenerate modern days, we have the advantage, through the medium of "The Press" of being able to look at ourselves in the same light as others are looking at us. The recent convention in our embryo city, was the means of enabling us to see ourselves "As in a glass." We note that a contemporary journal has been blowing our trumpet for us, and thus saved our wind. The yankee sage said: "He that bloweth not his own horn, his horn shall not be blown." We have been saved, to a considerable extent; the trouble of blowing our horn by our journalistic friends, who visited the convention; and, who lauded our little city up to the skies, (figuratively of course.)

It may not be amiss if we give a short resume of of the expressions of a brother journalist, in describing us, and our history. The history of our settlement has been too recently published in our own columns, to render it necessary that we should reprint that portion of our contemporary's descriptive remarks; and the trials and tribulations of the hardy pioneers, who first began to carve out homes in the unbroken wilderness; the glorious success that crowned their efforts; and, the the reward of their labours, in long-continued prosperity; are all matters of history. To republish these would only be to reiterate what has already appeared in the early numbers of our little paper.

Still, it is a subject for congratulation to us, that a large and pretentious newspaper refers to our settlement in such glowing and eulogistic terms. Speaking of the Glassville of to-day, our esteemed brother journalist says:—"Now Glassville is one of the most prosperous localities, and is one of the pleasantest for a stranger to visit that can be found in any rural district. Here William Love, one of the first settlers, has a fine large hotel, where all comers are comfortably cared for. Where the refreshing and appetizing meals that are served up makes Love's Hotel one of the pleasantest places to stop at. Hugh Miller commenced trading here soon after the settlement was started, and has continued in a prosperous business. Mr. John McIntosh has a large store, and for several years has been doing a very large country business. The second story of his building is appropriated for a hall, which was greatly needed before he built. James Love has another fine large building, the first flat of which is finished for a store, and here he, like Mr. McIntosh, has a large stock of goods of nearly everything that their patrons may require. They have to pay no rent, their expenses are light and they can afford to sell goods as cheaply as they can be bought anywhere in the province. We will not pursue these details any further here, as our readers are frequently reminded of the people and their doings. Oh, yes, one thing more, The Glassville News. Glassville has a newspaper, published by Dr. Welch. The doctor built his presses and mailing machine, edits his paper, and is his own compositor, pressman, news-boy and devil. He is a genius, and his paper is a credit to the place."

We think he might have gone a little farther, and said that F. B. Thomas also wants of the public. That Fitzgerald and Son have a large store here, where they manufacture Harness, Boots and Shoes, and all kinds of leather goods. He might also have quoted the fable in the Mayor's spelling of many years ago. "There's nothing like leather." Also that we have a disciple of Tubal Cain, Mr. D. H. Lamont who by pounding away on his anvil day by day, reminds those who want smith's done of where he may be found. We see that just now he is very busy repairing and putting in order, mowing machines which will soon be required, and he has a stock of duplicate parts for all kinds of machines, and is thus able to execute repairs very promptly. He might have said that as an evidence of prosperity, there are near upon half-a-score new barns already built, or in course of erection, in our parish alone. This is presumptive evidence that our farmers are prospering and that with better markets, increased facilities for handling produce, and the abundance of crops, we don't take a subordinate position to any part of the province, in fact that our motto, like that of a celebrated regiment of guards is, "Nulla Secundus."

Apropos of the foregoing we may say that the crops in our locality are looking in superb condition, never have we seen them look so well. Grass is everywhere a most abundant crop—not a collection of tall bents that weigh next to nothing, when cut and dried but grass with a substantial undergrowth that will make fine hay, if the weather will but favour the farmer. St. Swithin is here with his old time showery weather, but we hope to be spared the proverbial forty day's rain that is supposed to follow in his wake. The grain crops too are looking remarkably well, ever since the first blades put their heads through the ground, fine hot weather with frequent refreshing rains have stimulated plant growth at a marvellous rate; the consequence is that the grain and hay crops have never been surpassed in luxuriance of growth, and the prospects of a bounteous harvest are very encouraging. Thanks to the Giver of all good things, and the Aberdeen Farmer's and Dairyman's Association.
