For all he did he had a reason,
For all he said a word in season,
And ready ever was to quote
Authorities for what he wrote.—Butler

Our February number failed to materialize. The editor was laid by the heels with Quinsey, the compositor had Tonsilitis, the pressman had Cynanche tonsilaris, and the d—l had Amygdalitis; so the entire staff was disorganised and unfit for duty.

Since our last issue appeared the world has quietly gone on revolving on it's own axis, as if utterly oblivious to the fact that we were compelled (by circumstances over which we had no control,) to abandon the publication of a month's issue. We now presume, that the Sun, Moon, and other planetary bodies would continue to shine on, even if we were to suspend publication altogether. This is a little too rough on us, and takes the starch out, slightly. We fondly imagined that a general dissolution of the whole universe would take place if our popular little paper had to go under, however, that idel, like others we have cherished, has been rudely shattered; and we find that we have to depend on our subscribers and advertisers in order to prevent a divorce taking place between body and soul of this enterprising publication.

We shall shortly enter on the fourth year of publication and would venture to ask our subscribers to send along the coin, to enable us to carry out contemplated improvements, and help us to increase the size and circulation of our sheet. In order to do this "the sinews of war" are not only requisite, but necessary.

The winter that has just passed away has been like many previous ones, very remarkable for the quantity of weather we have had, as well as for the quality. During the early part of the season, that highly important industry 'Lumbering', was carried on under very favourable circumstances, the ground being frozen up solid and but very little snow to interfere with cutting and yarding the logs. The snow came at length, in sufficient quantity to permit the hauling to be done and now, the logs are all on the banks of the streams waiting for water enough to float them away to the distant markets. The Birch Timber business has assumed very large proportions this season, We have remarked some very fine specimens that have been hauled for over twenty miles before being landed at the St. John river for rafting to the seaboard. There must be an enormous amount of labour involved in cutting, making and transporting such large, and heavy timber, from the forest to the distant marts of the world, The timber trade is rather a dry subject, and seems deficient of romantic impulse, yet, a recent number of "The Sheffield Telegraph" informs us that there is considerable romance, even in such a dried up business as the timber trade.

GLASSVILLE.

GLASSVILLE is fast becoming a place of great importance, and the process of transition is continually going on. We have had occasion previously to compare it to Andersen's story "The Ugly Duckling," and shall soon be able to institute a farther comparison between it and the beautiful swan, that the duckling in the story developed into. New buildings are in contemplation that will materially aid the transformation, and add much to the beauty and importance of our little city, We hear that one of our 'merchant princes' is about to erect a very handsome and commodious mansion, in the centre of the business part of our metropolis. A large storehouse and office will also be erected, by one of our principal lumbermen; and, what is equally important to the community, a steam-mill will shortly be built within the city limits. Most of these building operations will be commenced as soon as the ground becomes fit for digging out the necessary founda-

Business prospects must be improving in our locality, we have two millinery establishments recently added to the rest of the business capabililies of our city. We would suggest that a Court House be provided soon, law cases seem to crop up, and litigants should have accomodation. It is a pity that a few lawyers can't locate with us, where there is only one on hand, the party employing him has a distinct advantage; while a second one would save the "poor peasant" from defending himself against "The disciple of Coke and Blackstone."

WILL repay many times the price of a package of the Granger. For Horses and Cattle, Sheep and roultry, they are worth their weight in gold. They help digestion and assimilation of food remove fever, and all impurities that cause loss of appetite, thick water, distemper, cough, bad blood, &c., in Horses and Cattle. The fact that thousands of packages sold annually throughout the M ritime Provinces proves that the
