The Editor, Glasville News,

Sir,

The election which is now so near, and in which we are all deeply interested, seems peculiar, in some respects. There are side-issues introduced in the canvas that do not possess any features of interest to the majority of the electors in this part of the Dominion. What most particularly interests us, is the financial and commercial prosperity of the Dominion; and the best means of securing that desideratum. What has the Manitoba school question to do with the electors of Carleton county? Yet, this is a prominent feature of the Liberal canvas. We are told by the Liberal party that the National Policy is bringing the country to ruin, and that the only means of averting such a calamity, is to hand over the conduct of the ship to the Liberals. Now, Sir, I firmly believe that this would simply be a case of "Out of the frying-pan, into the fire." Despite all their dismal croakings, and prophecies of disaster and ruin, the whole country is in a prosperous and financially healthy condition, this day. At a recent meeting, the Liberal candidate asked: "Has the National Policy done anything for the Farmer?—Has it increased the price of your produce?—Has it increased the value of your land?" To all these inquiries, I, unhesitatingly, answer Yes. It has done this, and more, Look around, ye liberals, on every hand, and compare the condition of the county only a decade ago, with its improved condition to-day. Our farms are better cultivated. Our houses and barns are better. Our clothing is better. We are better fed, and have greater 'home comforts' about us. Our crops are better, and though low prices prevail, we are slowly, but surely, progressing. And our land is increasing in value. All of these things have taken place under the benign influence of the National Policy, that no political chicanery may disturb the rock on which it is founded is the earnest desire of

AN ABERDEEN ELECTOR.

We certainly think the Manitoba difficulty should not have been introduced as a political lever, in a Dominion election. The province of Manitoba has a government capable of administering its own internal affairs; and the school business of a province possessing autonomy in its public institutions, should not be made a prominent question in the political programme of a distant province.

Dr. Boyd in his new book tells us an amusing story of a young mother who was telling her little boy about the Israelites' worshiping of the golden calf. She pointed out how very bad it was that people should pray to such a thing, and expatiated. The little boy heard with great attention. A quite new idea had entered his mind. But instead of being horror-stricken as his mother intended, he said, with quiet determination, "I'll say my prayers to-night to my donkey."

Decaying wood and putrefying fish look luminous in the dark, because they are really undergoing a slow combustion.

The common crocodiles of Egypt were kept in temples reared in Memphis and other cities in their honor. There they were worshipped and fed with the greatest care, and adorned with costly trinkets. They were rendered perfectly tame, and took part in the processions and other ceremonies.

Franklin, who drew the lightning, was a professional politician, not a professional scientist. Morse, who invented the telegraph, was merely an amateur. Watt, who invented the steam-engine, was not a professional machinist. Nearly all the great discoveries in photography have been made by amateurs. And so in all lines it is the man who loves the work, not the man who lives by it, through whom progress comes.

It was not Sir George Campbell, but Sir George Balfour, who perpetrated the bull of the "flea-bite in the ocean." Another good example of this figure of speech is contributed by a correspondent of the "Spectator." A Roman Catholic preacher was speaking of the transitoriness of earthly things. "Look at the great cities of antiquity!" he exclaimed, "where are they now? Why, some of them have perished so utterly that it is doubtful if they ever existed."

Some curious slips of speech, according to a Nonconformist contemporary, were made at the annual meeting of the London Wesleyan Mission in Exeter Hall. Thus Mr R. W. Perks, M. P., the chairman, referred to the work of the "female sisters," while Mr Hughes invited "young men and women of all ages" to attend his meetings in St. James' Hall. One is reminded of the memorable exordium of the nervous curate—"Young ladies, or perhaps I should say, young women, for I wish to embrace you all."

Grandfather's clock has turned up at Paris, Ky. John Barnett, a grandfather, died there a few days ago, and the very moment he died his old tall clock, that had stood many years of the floor, suddenly stopped, and no one has been able to make it run since.

When Nansen reaches the North Pole—if he has not done so already—what kind of a place will he find it? It may be land with a not unbearable climate. It may be a sea—a continuation of the Atlantic Ocean. Certain Arctic explorers have seen in the distance "a watersky." Kane and Hayes saw tidal waves; and Parry, to his disappointment, found that the ice-field on which he was travelling drifted southward as fast as he progressed northward. For a solution of this mystery we must wait with patience.

SWEET LILAC.

Come back to me once again, darling, Sweet lilac is blooming again, And breezes are scattering around me Their beautiful petals like rain; Laburnum's sweet blossoms hang o'er me Like myriad pendants of gold, And it seems but yesterday, darling, Since to me the love-tale you told.

Oh come back to me, for the spring-tide Recalls one sweet spring long ago, For life for us seemed nought but sunshine, And love made our Heaven below: You vowed by the blossoms above us To ever be constant and true, Then you gave me the spray of sweet lilac, And whispered your love-tale anew.

Oh come back again to me, darling, You loved me once fondly, I know, And the heart that you won will be yours, As long as the years come and go. The lilac's sweet blossoms may wither, And night-clouds may chase away day: But love is immortal, and liveth With us, dear, for ever, and aye—

A CURIOUS PSALM.

The following is taken from the "Bazaar" Exchange and Mart," October 4th, 1895:—In 1805 the Bishop of Salisbury went to Bradford-on-Avon, where there is a very ancient Saxon church. The clerk gave out the hymn in his broad Wiltshire dialect as follows:—"Let us zing to the praayze an' glawry o' God thre vusses o' the hundred an' vourteenth zann, a varrison 'speshully 'dapted to the 'casion by myself.

"Why hop ye zo, ye little, little hills, An' what var do e skip? Is it 'a'cause you'm proud to zee His Grace the Lord Bi-shup? Why skip ye zo ye little, little hills, An' what var do e hop? Is it 'a'cause to preach to we Is camed the Lord Bi-shup? 'Ese; he is camed to preach to we, Then let us all strike up, An' sing a glawrious zong of praayze An' bless the Lord Bi-shup."

A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

From Aris's Birmingham Gazette, April 4-1796.

CURIOUS AND SHOCKING OCCURENCE.
"The Limerick Gazette" mentions that the coach called the Telegraph, in going from Kildorrery to that town, took fire in consequence of the great friction of the wheels. There was in the coach a young gentleman of the name of O'Balckley, who was going with his father to get his marriage licence at Limerick, the Rev. Mr. Kelly; and outside was a drunken soldier. The fire having communicated to a cask of gunpowder, carrying to Mr. Flynn, the grocer, it blew up with a tremendous explosion. The parties in the carriage were blown to pieces, but the soldier, who fell at the carriage a short time before, escaped with only the fracture of an arm. The remainder of the coach, in flames, was carried by the terrified horses through the streets of Limerick to the stable of the owner, which was also set on fire.

A LARGE EEL.

On Wednesday last, an eel was taken just below Fulbridge, at Maldon, in Essex, which weighed twenty-six pounds; it measured five feet six inches in length, and seventeen inches in girth: it is the largest fish of this species ever taken, or described in Natural History. Twenty persons sat down to sup upon it at the King's Head Inn, in that town: it proved extremely delicate in colour and flavour, and was more than sufficient for the repast of this numerous company.

A LARGE PIG.

To be seen at the Mansion House (late Mansell's Tea Warehouse), High Street, Birmingham, till after the Fair, any Time from Ten o'clock in the Morning till Nine in the Evening, a Wonderful large Hog, nine Feet ten Inches long, measuring six Feet two Inches round the Neck, nine Feet round the girth, and absolutely weighs 58 Score and 16 Pounds. He was bred by Mr. Hollivert, at Beecham's Court, in the county of Worcester, and Fed by Wm. Perks, of Bromsgrove, and was only Two years old last November.
