Newgate Prison, one of the old landmarks of London, is to be pulled down. Clerkenwell Prison will become in future the central lock-up for London malefactors, and the courts of law, which comprise what is known as the Old Bailey, will be enlarged so as to cover the space now occupied by the prison. It was a hideous object, black with smoke, though only just a century old, and a decided defacement to a great thoroughfare. It was built by Dance in 1782, just after the Gordon riots, who had but one idea, to make it impregnable. In its front many noted criminals swung; here Thistlewood exclaimed, 'I shall soon know the last great secret,' and Fauntleroy, before his fall, communicated the secret of where to buy the best Curacao.

COMMUNICATIONS.

CUTTING THE EDITORIAL CORD.

To the Editor of the STAR,
DEAR SIR:—Allow me to announce to your readers that I no longer have a responsible editorial connexion with the STAR. I cannot make this announcement without expressing the wish that the STAR may go on vigorously in the future as it has in the past; that the end for which it was created will be accomplished, and that it may never show any quarter till the mushroom enemy is bitterly and hopelessly routed.

I remain with the best wishes,
Yours respectfully,
J. E. COLLINS.
P. S.—I observe since I left Chatham Mr. Snowball's mule has begun to kick in every direction. Let the mule be careful. There is a hope—a spare corner in the STAR, and there are pens ink and paper in Toronto. I need only add I kept the mule in dread of kicking while I was in Chatham, and I intend keeping it under the same restraint while in Toronto.
