KILLED BY HER LOVER.

(Herald.) At an early hour Saturday ture has had the greatest effect, 30th ult., in Lancaster, Pa., at within the present century, in Coyle's ferry, on the Susquehanna River, opposite Marietta, was the scene of a murder and attempted suicide which caused that there are fewer great in .. quite an excitement. A young woman named Emma Myers, aged about twenty years, who has been living in the family of John Coyle, a well to do farmer, as a domestic, was found dead in the stable with a pistol shot sient advertisements] payable every thirty in her breast. Her murderer is John Coyle, Jr., son of the man with whom the young girl lived. For some time Coyle has been desperately in love with the girl and has several times asked her to marry him and had been as often refused to accept him as her lover, and has several times told him that he should stop annoying her. This had the effect of maddening him with jealous feeling, and he threatened that unless she married him there would be trouble. To this, CHATHAM, N. B, June 8, 1881 | however, no attention was paid; as it was considered an idle chona groves at La Paz, Bolivia, threat. The sequel, however, proved otherwise. The abolition of primogeniemptying the chateaux and castles in France. Fortunes have so often been divided down comes than there were among the French aristocracy. It thus happens that aFrench nobleman who inhabits a chateau may only have furnished one nook of it, and his roomystables may have only one or two horses at the stalls. To withstand the effects of the abolition of primo .. geniture, many French families agree to enjoy their revenue in LIQUORS, GROCERIES and common. But full chateaux, with several generations of re.. latives in them, even under the methodical life of Frenchmen, may not be permanently suc.. cessful.
