To Correspondents,

A Correspondent sends us a communication enquiring if Mr. Gratten intends giving a proper account of boomage collected last season; and expresses himself totally dissatisfied, and says most of the people about his neighborhood are dissatisfied, with Mr. Grattens boom management. His communication was intended to appear before the Council closed its deliberations-but it was too late for that, and Mr. Gratten is we notice again appointed boom master. Yet we take up a paper some pondent travelling through Ireland came to a district where the "slothful inhab itants lived in hideous little shanties no better than hog sties." The industrious and high toned mushroom aristocracy of the new world are shocked at this Irish indolence, and enquire, Why cant these people at least have good houses -- if they are not too lazy? Yes, but would the mushroom aristocrat, who is able to spend ten dollars t, buy himself a coat of arms and a motto, build a costly house on a piece of land which he and that that is the "true inwardness" the spring. of their tror Some will say "This is not a like story; the Landlord will build for his own sake, to keep his estate valuable if for nothing else." Yes. but if the Landlord has to keep a yacht, and a pack of hounds, and a half dozen horses, and a harem to boot, he cannot very well, unless he be a Damer keep his buildings in repair. But let us look right here in Chatham, and we see men with plenty of means, with money stowed away in every in Canada, hidden from the asse seye, with large land properties in business portions of the town, and this land covered over with the most wretched hovels. Every dollar they get, instead of investing it in new buildings, they run away and hide like the old miser in the hovel at Blackfriars. They have no public spirit he had too much good sense to accept in them, and the shabby disgraceful a chair at a public meeting even though condition of the most important business Mr. Hutchison ordered him to do so, and leton ward at 4 p. m. portion of this town, is a happy reflex of their minds.
