Scriptural Reading.

Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us. Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith.-Heb. 12:1 and part of 2nd vs. Paul is speaking to those Hebrew brethern in the way of advice or charge from his own experience with the world, who is always looking or expecting to see more of God's likeness in the church members or professing Christians than they will ever be able to see in themselves. Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses let us lay aside every weight. New no man followed the footsteps of the Master closer than did the Apostle Paul; yet he was despised by some, beaten wrongfully, accused and imprisoned. serve as weights that we who profess Christianity should put away. One preacher speaking lightly of another is a weight. The church speaking lightly of their pastor is a weight or speaking as with contempt of any brother or sister in the church or elsewhere, for it may be God has received them. Neglect to look after the wants of the needy, the sick and dyler, glass pitcher and tumblers; Merritt ing, those are all weights we should lay aside. Seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses. To witness every mistake we make, thinking that our short comings and perhaps our little engagements in the service of the Master will screen them from the all seeing eye of Jehovah when he comes to judge the secrets of men's hearts. Then the sin that doth so easily beset us, it may be taking credit to ourselves that which belongs to God, or indulging in some habit not becoming those professing weights and the sin that doth or did beset us then we will be better prepared to run the race that is set before us. Now, we are on a Christian race to eternity and the enemy of our souls is on the track with us, trying to lay hindrances in onr way. But if we are all looking unto Jesus we will get over all the obstacles and hard places in this life. It is said that they that run in a race run all but one obtaineth the prize. But there is a prize for all of every name who are in this heavenly race. We are to run with patience not expecting to complete the journey in one day, then sit down and rest, but moving on steadily as the days go by and not get disheartened when we see others making better progress than we.

When word came to Peter and John (or supposed to be John) that our Lord had risen, they both to know for themselves started on the run. But that other disciple did outrun Peter and came first to the sepulchre. He looking in but did not go in. Then came poor old Peter and made no halt but went in. Then Mr. Hollie Chapman is confined to the moving his portable mill to English Set- did not seem to have the moral courage that Peter had though he made a better show on the way. So it is with many in this day. They have entered the race resolute and strong in the faith in the Christian race but get weary in well doing, though seme others though not so courageous in the start, yet looking unto Jesus they get strength and courage to go in and see for themselves that it was even so as he had told them. Then looking unto Jesus, we are often looking at others in the race to see how they are coming along and wonder why they don't make better time. No not when we look back at others we are liable to stumble and fall, then the last shall be first and the first shall be last. Then Jesus is the author and started us on the race having relieved us of our load of sin we can go on looking unto him the finisher of our faith, which will be no more needed when we have arrived at our journey's end and receive the prize that is the Apostle Paul says a crown of life, which God, the righteous judge shall give me in that day, and not to me only, but all them who love his appearing.

Killed on the I. C. R.

I. C. R. section men Wednesday morning flagged the incoming Sussex express at Moosehorn ballast pit and notified the conductor that the dead body of a man had been found beside the track.

Moosehorn is about half way between Norton and Bloomfield and the train hands took the news to Coroner D. B. Hatfield at Bloomfield.

He at once went out to Moosehorn, examined the body and made arrangements for an inquest this afternoon.

The body was that of a young man, about 25 years of age, well dressed and apparently in iairly good circumstances.

There was a severe wound on the back of the head and considerable blood on the rails and sleepers. The position of the body, the character of the wound and other circumstances indicated that the man had fallen from train, striking his head against a rail.

There was no indication of a struggle and no evidences of a crime. Among articles found on the body was a check for a considerable sum of money over $100, and a Sussex tax bill bearing and the upper part is ornamented with lace edged ruffles that overlap and form the name of Daniel Brown. Mr. J. E. Price, I. C. R. divisional superintendent, was in the city this morning and when he heard of the affair he went to Bloomfield to be present at the inquest. The train from which the man is supposed to have fallen is the accomodation that arrives here at midnight. Sussex, Nov. 10.-News reached here early this morning that a young man named Daniel Brown, son of a widow residing near Sussex station, was found dead on the I. C. HOUSE GOWNS.

Dainty Women's Choice of Garments for the View of Feminine Friends. A woman shows her ind viduality more in her house gown than in any other article of her wardrobe. If she be truly luxurious, then will she revel in a soft maze of silks and lares. If she be of an artistic temperament then will she have her house gowns or dressing sacques in perfect harmony with the colors of the room in which she means to lounge. If she be cheerful, then will she employ gay ribbons, flaunting lo ps and corners of bright satin, and her roces will kurgh with bright-kned silks and ripples. If she be melancholy, then will she select sad grays and somber browns. If she be economical, she will wear neat Fashion has been kind to the lovers of comfort this season. Many varied and beautiful are the neglige costumes.

Black and white are quite the rage, even for home wear. A black and white Godliness, and if having laid aside all the dressing sacque has a square yoke, from which falls a magpie plaiting that looks to be sol'd black satin until it is shaken out, when the white slk stripes show from the folds of the pairs. The colar is of deep coral silk velvet. The angular lines of yoke are hidden by a narrow circular plaiting, cut in points, edged with a flounce of Chantilly lace, and a cabbage bow of the coral velvet covers the fastening on the left sh u der.

A goblin blue pompadour sile is made close-fitting at the back and sides. Designs of sapphire-blue velvet are appliqued upon the silk and are covered with ecru lace. The rolling collar is of sapphire velvet and the loose goolin blue satin front is covered with a fall of Brussels net lace. The lining is pearl white. No more queenly garb could be desired by a woman with auburn hair and blue eyes. Nondescript complexions seem to 'equire small figured patterns, with combinations of light colors. When one is best defined by negatives, such as "not dark and not fair," decided colors are unsafe. For such a one a French mantua-maker has suggested a Dresdea silk white ground, in tiny sprays of rose and forget-me-net. A tea gown of this silk is made taght-fitting over the hips, with open fronts that turn back of th top and bottom in satin revers. Down the entire front that is set in two bands -one pink and one blue-al e nate with double ruffles of lace. A wide fall of lace covers the upper part of the sleeves and dips from the points of the cuff, and a cascade of lace falls in the back from the neck to the edge of the demitrain. Is it not daintily conceived to preside over Dresden teacups?

Pink and gold are the colors most extravagently admired. An elaborate pink satin brocade Watteau matinee is run through with a gold thread. The flowers in the pattern have pale green stems, a color that is repeated in the seven-pointed velvet collar. The lower edge of the sacque and the sleeve ruffl s are cut, like the collar, in points. Around all these points is run lace insertion about an inch and a half wide, and to this is gathered in and out a full flounce of Queen Elizabeth lace to match. Beautiful, indeed, for the display of an exquisite arm and fine hair is the accordion-plaited tea sacque. The plaiting falls from both neck and shoulders, with equal fullness back and front. It is unconfined at the walst. The shoulder seams are covered with a strap of satin ribbon surrounded with a lace rulle. The high collar is of w.de satin ribbon, tied in a dobule bow behind, with streamers reaching the length of the sacque. The sleeves are also accordion-plaited and have two rows of lace insertion let in. like those in the skirt of the sacque. There are no cuffs or bands at t'e waist, indeed, the full sleeves are flowing, so that in an easy attitude, with the hands lightly clasped at the back of the head. they fall away from the arms, showing to the best advantage well-rounded elbows and fluffing up behind a mass of loosely fastened locks.

Because of its adapt bility to puff, ruffle or tuck, cashmere obtains hargely as the best wool fabric for a house gown. Comfortable and hideous as the old-fashioned Mother Hubbard is an apple green cashmere unsubduel by any other color. The sleeves are narrow and gathered across in folds with a double shirring at the back seam. The front gathered to a round yoke, falls in folds to the hem of the skirt; the sides are fitted in to a close lining and the back is full from the neck. A gown of this same cut is made up in puppy red and outlined with bands of narrow black

Another red semi-wrapper has a yoke so deep that it is shaped into the figure, like an empire wa'st. It is formed at the lower edge, back and front, into an inverted V, from which the inturned box plaiting falls. The sides of the skirt are gored. The sleeves are small and puffed at the shoulder, and the neck, the lower edges of the yoke. sleeves and skirt are finished with a ruching of crim-

Empire gowns are extremely becoming to slender, graceful figures. A pretty empire is made of light gray challie broken with sprays of forget-me-nots. Bolero fronts, with pointed, turned back revers, are lined with Fight Mue glace taffeta. The skirt has a separate lining of blue taffeta, finished with a scant sixteen-inch bias ruffle of the same. The neck is turned in a tiny V in front and is piped with blue silk.

Taffeta diessing sacques, to match the silk petticoats, are somewhat in demand. Violet taffeta is attractive when tucked and inserted with lace. Stin r boons go well with this kind of si.k. Cluster tucks and lace forming pointed yokes and pointed caps to the sleeves are stylish in taffeta.

A black and white ten gown suitable for an older woman is made of black and white silk. A wide col'ar falls square from the yoke. This is broken with circular bands of black lace insertion. A crush satin black collar fin shes the neck, and the close lining is of white

A decidedly new shape made up in cashmere and lace is the Russian blouse ten gown. The back is in one piece, falling full from the neck, where it is secured with a width of shirring. An inside lining holds the under arm seams rounded over the hips. The front is slightly gathered from the belt down, themselves into a perfect blouse effect. For the absolute comfort as a slumber robe and bedroom wrapper nothing has ever surpassed the Mother Hubbard. It has come back to us in all manner of disguises, with pointed yoke, yoke hiden by ruffles or collar, and in other designs.

Jerseys to Return.

This autumn the revived Jersey will have a successful inning. These trim, neat, rather smart, and decidedly comfortable garments are a boon to women for many reasons. The former objectionable features of these Jerseys are now removed by the addition of slight tr'mmings both on b d ce and sleev s, and they are thus made no more outlining to the figure in their style than many of the closely adjusted dresswaists formed with outlining darts and curving seams, says The New York Evening Post. While fitting the figure perfectly, they are the easiest ga ments imagin ble to wear. A finely fitting waist can be selected in 20 minutes, with no trouble of standing by the hour at the dressmaker's, no choesing of linings, buttons, trimmings, etc. The waist hes before choose from.
