GAGETOWN, JULY 2TH, 1897. E. G. SCOVIL, Agent Pelee Wine Co.

Dear Sir:—My wife has been afflicted with nervous prostration for several years, using every kind of medicine recommended, but obtaining no relief until I procured some of your Pelee Wine, which I am delighted to say, has had the desired effect. It is the greatest tonic of the age, I think too much cannot be said in its praise and no house should be without it. We have recommended it to several suffering from la grippe debility, with like good results.

I am, yours gratefully, JOHN C. CLOWS.

Poetry. OLD DOBBIN.

I see old Dobbin through the fence; how weak he looks, and old; His hair is falling off in spots, he feels the damp and cold; He hangs his head, his step is slow; 'tis plain enough to see His thirty years are more to him than fifty are to me.

He shall not work another jot, not that he would complain; But from this hour he ne'er shall know the touch of whip or rein. Of all the horses on the farm he's been the very best; I should have thought of it before; but now he shall have rest.

I call to mind the colt he was, and how I broke him in; Whew! how he kicked, and pranced, and plunged; 'twas doubtful which would win; But I was young, as well as he, and would not be denied; And since, he's been as safe a nag as man would wish to ride.

He never lacked in spirit, nor in steadiness, nor speed; Many's the time his willing feet have answered urgent need, When every moment was a gain to fleet-ing human breath, He knew what precious minutes meant, and so defeated death.

Then, in my happy courting days, he knew the very night That I would swing the stable door and greet him with delight, He knew the girl I loved was waiting far away and fair; He seemed to say: "Twill not be long before I take you there?"

Then on my wedding day he stood with others at the church; No doubt he thought for just that once I left him in the lurch; One face, one form, that day of days, was all that I could see, I did not think of Dobbin then, what'er he thought of me.

And when the years had brought their grief, and I learned joy's reverse, He drew the little ones and me behind the gloomy hearse. I cannot say that he divined how lonely was my lot; But since he has not been the same; I know that I have not!

And so, through gladness and through grief old Dobbin has been near; No wonder that he looks so old when I have grown so sore. I know full well that fifty years is youth to many men; 'Tis not the years, but that my heart has reached three score and ten!

So, while I live, his falling life shall naught but comfort know; Old Dobbin, as I said at first, shall ne'er feel rein or blow, The best of oats, the sweetest hay, the field to wander free, Shall all be his; a poor return for all he's been to me!

—W. L. KEESE, in Ladies' Home Journal.

THE SCAPEGRAPE.

BY K. ST. JAMES. Jim was allers a favorite home, The old man's hope and pride— He loved to look at the handsome boy, To stand close by his side.

Jim was a gentleman, you see, With a scholar's education; Been to college way up north, And had a sittivation. While I was a scapegrace of no worth, Could scarcely write my name; I cannot blame our Gentleman Jim If he looked at me in shame.

Jim he was a handsome lad, With glossy, curly hair, Teeth so even and dazling' white, And skin as a baby's fair. While, you see, my face was plain, Folks said I was sullen, too, You know I did not envy Jim, But I felt the least bit blue.

Ours was a risin' village, Boastin' of a bank, you see, Where Jim had a 'sponsible persition, And errands was run by me. One night when the snow was fallin' fast, How well do I remember. 'Twas the hardest winter we ever seen, And 'twas then about mid-December.

The old man who watched the bank was sick And I was to take his place, They thought it was an honor, too, To a worthless old scapegrace. You see the room was snug and warm, I think I must have slept, When I was waked by the faintest noise, Just as if someone crept.

From the corner where I was, you see, I could see and not be seen, There knelt a man in a great fur coat— I watched; what could it mean? And then the thought of a robber Flashed across my troubled brain

As I heard the door of the great safe creak— Oh, God, I hear it again.

Slowly I saw the dark gloved-hands Take the silver and greenbacks, too, And my blood froze in my veins, For what was I to do?

Then the door was slowly closed, The lights burned low and dim, But the robber turned toward me now, Good God! 'twas Gentleman Jim.

I don't know what happened next, But I woke in a prison cell, My brain was turned, my heart was broke; I was innocent, but I'd not tell.

They knew I would come to some bad end, They'd seen it long afore, And they was not surprised to find My tall-tale hat at the door.

Well, you know, I was tried and convicted, Branded with a felon's name; I've served my time in a convict's garb And am now cast out to shame.

But the dear old man, God bless him, I'll never tell to him That the robber of the bank that night, Was his idol, our Gentleman Jim.

GREAT SURPRISE IN MADRID. MADRID, Oct. 31.—The news that the Spanish peace commissioner at Paris had referred to the government the formal demand of the American commissioners for the absolute cession of the entire Philippine group caused the greatest surprise in Madrid. The strongest feeling prevails that the government should protest energetically against what is regarded as a violation of the spirit of the protocol.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—The American commissioners made known the demands of the U. S. regarding the Philippines, to the Spanish commissioners to-day. The presentation as read specifies that the United States shall reimburse Spain to the extent of her "pacific expenditures" made in the Archipelago. The phrase, "pacific expenditures," as employed, differs entirely as to the expenditures by Spain. The cost of works for the benefit of the island or their inhabitants is felt by the American commissioners to be a fair burden upon acquiring power, while the other class of expenditures is held to have been logically assumed by Spain as the inevitable hazard to a nation resorting to arms to enforce order in its own territory. There is considerable traffic between the islands and some time ago a system of light-houses became necessary. Spain set out to supply this and projected 48 light stations. She has already constructed seventeen of the first class and sixteen of the second. Their cost is not yet known here, but in American waters those of the first class cost from $25,000 to $50,000, so that an average basis of minimum cost in the United States of Spain's thirty-three light-houses may represent an outlay of $825,000. Spain has constructed the breaker at Manila and warves of small valve along the Passing river. She recently built a barracks for four thousand men, now occupied by American troops. Spain also built some school houses and at Cavite a naval station, which, before being sacked by natives, may have been worth $2,500,000. The Spanish listened attentively with some evidence of impatience and surprise at the financial suggestion in the American presentation and finally asked until Friday to consult the Madrid government and make reply.

Opportunity.

"Come on, fellows," cried a mosquito who happened to overhear a quarrel between Mr. and Mrs. Henpeck. "This is a cinch. I heard the woman tell her husband he was the most thin skinned man she ever knew."

Excited Wife—Oh, professor, the cook has fallen and broken her collar bone! Professor—Discharge her or once! You told her what to expect if she broke anything more.

And you wouldn't begin a journey on Friday? Not me! I can't understand how you can have any faith in such a silly superstition. No superstition about it—Saturday's pay day.

Coming down on the street car the big, red-faced man was talking for the benefit of all on board in telling of a little animal he had bought for his boy to drive, and dilating on its good points. "Does it belong to the 'equus asinus family?" asked the scholarly and quiet appearing man across the aisle. "No, sir; it belongs to me."

"Same thing," and the red-faced man never turned a hair.

One Can Never Be Pleasant to Look Upon Unless in Good Health.

"The most healthful and agreeable bath is that of tepid water," writes Ruth Ashmore in the Ladies Home Journal. "Few people can stand absolutely cold baths, and no matter how strong one may be, such a bath should not be indulged in unless a thorough rubbing be taken afterward. To speak plainly, it must be remembered that while a cold bath may be more or less invigorating it is not cleansing. I can easily understand the desire of every woman to have a clear, beautiful skin; but I confess to being provoked when I think of the amount of money spent on lotions, creams and powders to be applied externally and which have nothing like as good an effect upon the skin as a tepid bath, with good soap, taken at least once a week.

The condition of the skin depends almost entirely to the care given to the general health. The girl who is up late at night, gives no care to her diet, indulges in various stimulants, bathes but seldom and exercises less, is certain to have either a dull, muddy looking skin or one covered with disagreeable looking black and red spots. One should avoid many sweets and much pastry, and not allow herself to become a slave either to tea or coffee any more than she would to some vicious drug or strong stimulant. She should also remember that unless she is in good condition internally she will be anything but a pleasant object to look upon externally.

Is it true that your father has made an assignment? asked the agitated lover of his fiancée. All his vast fortune is swept away, she sighed; but you are left, Algy. I should say I was left. Great Scott!

Farming in the Maritime Provinces

Differs materially from farming in Ontario and the West. Conditions are different and our markets not the same. A product profitable in those sections would not pay the tillage here, and a suggestion valuable to a westerner, would prove disastrous if followed by our farmers. In subscribing for an agricultural publication it is well to bear this in mind. There's only one paper that treats of farming from a Maritime Province standpoint. It is the
