A LONG WAY HOME.

"It's a long ways home"-but I seem to see her eyes, Like stars, a-twinkling-twinkling in the far and friendly skies; Skies that are only friendly because I think Is waiting where they're bending with welcome kiss for me!

"It's a long ways home!" I say it, and To think this life is sweeter for just that heavenly dream! It was so sweet on earth to live, ere death had made us part, But sweeter till I meet her-till love beats heart to heart!

"It's a long ways home"-yet life is not so As the music that comes thrilling from the echo of a song; And I've only come to think of home as far beyond the skies Because I miss the live-light 'n may dark ing's tender eyes.

"It's a long ways home"-but in 'ven 'he darkest night In which my soul lies dreaming there's still a gleam of light; And it glimmers in the darkness across the river's foam And leads me to my darling in the dearest -F. L. STANTON.

PAID BRIDESMAIDS.

A European Custom Which Is Finding Favor in New York.

That weddings are fast losing their simplicity and sentimentality is an ac-The custom has been inauguarted of hiring pretty bridesmaids and the whole affair is reduced to a business level. This has been done in this country and the idea is being taken up in Paris and London. Paid bridesmails is a term calculated to shock the aesthetically minded, but some who assist at the altar have an eye to the main chance, goodly sums being paid to beauties of expensive gowns in the nnest style, while her complexion is surpassingly lovely and her features fault-lessly regular. So run after is she that she can afford to turn up the nose of disdain at any but really first-class af-fairs, and it is becoming quite an honor to have her name figure in the weading report of really influential brides.

There is another fashionable bridesmaid in London-ready a New York maiden—who carns quite a comfortable sum by posing as bridesmaid. Her beauty is incomparable and her figure so fine that she always causes a seasation wherever she appears in the robes of honor. It is no unusual thing for her to have a dozen invitations within a week. Of course the majority of the applicants are perfect strangers, and frequently it is her painful duty to lefrequently it is her painful duty to decline to appear at second-rate weddings, though the price offered is often exceptional. A recent New York wedding witnessed the satin-robed bride attended by 13 exquisitely lovely bridesmaids, ten of whom were paid over $30 to appear, the costumes—works of art—being provided for the occasion by the bride's father. The Siamese are inveterate arinkers of tea, not and cold, and they carry their tea-making utensils about with them and have tea on the street if they are so inclined. The tea houses of Japan, with their graceful attendants, are known graceful attendants, are known thoroughout the world, and a cup of the fragrant beverage served by a dainty maid with soft eyes becomes a bewildering elixir. The best tea we get does not come from China, in spite of the fact that it is supposed to do so. India, Ceylon and Java supply the best brands, which are far superior to whit used to be shipped here 20 years ago. one of the Greatest Dietary Sins of the Present Age.

Writing in The North American Re-

iew for June, Dr. Charles W. Purdy traces a large portion of the diseases and early deaths of the American middle classes to the eating of fleshmeat. He says "it may be emphatically stated that the greatest dietary sin of the average American is his meat-easing propensity." The well-to-do Amer.can has butcher's mea" served with every meal and the amon. of such food "that a man of ample appeting will consume when thus regularly spread beat a him on practicany all occasions represents to his excretory organs a tax in its disposal that is physiologically prodigious.' Speaking of the ills directly traceable to the excessive use of fleshmeat, Dr. Purdy mentions "premature hardening of the arteries, entailing all those dangers from arterial hemorrhage, of which apoplexy is the type, and in addition early imparing nuirition, so that the meat-ater grows old before his time. Indeed, it is well-known that exc. ssive meat-eating knowledged fact, but of late they have ages man more quickly than any other done more than that—they have decrease except alcoholism." The id effects scended to the level of the funerals of the excessive use of animal food upon the circulatory system are by no means confined to the arteries. A large proportion of intemperate flesh-eaters "are subject to progressive enlargement of the heart, and since this inevitably leads to degeneration of the cardiac mu cle, such people are exceeding.y pron to sudden death from so-caned heart failure' or collapse of that orgin," and "by far the largest sumber or cases of beautiful girls for their services at primary Bright's disease are directly fashionable marriages. There is one caused by the excessive use of fi sh." Dr. beile who has carned sufficient to pro- Purdy also condemns the excessive use vide for herself an elegant trousseau of sweets and starchy foods. This girl's mend vegetarianism, but his evidence as figure is perfection and shows off the to the dangers of excessive flesh-eating is worth noting. For the person of sedentary habits and good consti ut on he advises the use of butcher's meat not oftener than once a day, a moderate re-form which would reduce by one-half the use of flesh in middle class families. -Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

Electrically corred Plants. The agricultural department of the Cornell University recend; published the results of some experiments extending over a period of six years upon the effect of the light of the electric are latap upon the growth of plants. There were two houses, both or which were exposed to sualight during the day, and one of which received in addition the light from an are lamp during a part of the night the arc lamps were enclosed in clear glass globes. It was found as a result of these experiments that there can no longer be any doubt as to its advantage in forcing this plant. With seed sown under ordinary conditions, and the loung plants placed under the influence of the light after they are well established, will show a marked improvement up to a distance of forty fee. One cur ous tung was noticed, that the effect of the shadow of a beam or rafter cast by the electric light showed plainly on the teaves. It is stated in this respect that dainty circulars, and directly a fash-ionable engagement is publicly an-nounced forwards her prospectus to the bride-to-be, with a goodly assortment of press opinions, letters of reference, Mr. W. W. Rawson of Arington, now uses electric light in the commercial forcing of lettuce, of which he is a leading producer. He has three lamps of 2000 candle power each, which are run all night. Mr. Rawson finds that he obtams a gain of five days per crop during the winter, which makes a gain of nearly three weeks for the three crops dur-ing the winter. Professor Bailey's ex-periments at Cornell confirm those of Mr. Rawson, as he states that he finds many plants $23w more rapidly when under the influence of electric light at night. Am ong these are the daisy and the violet. He is extrinced, he says, that the light can be used in forcing certa n plants. A Useless Struggie. We believe that very little opposition was encountered by the old horse railroad companies, on the part of their car drivers when the electric traction was introduced, and that the men themselves hailed the change with delight as relieving them of a good deal of labor and the worry of keeping a pair of brutes up to schedule time. Reasoning by analogy, therefore, one would imagine that the ab drivers would view with sim iar approval the introduction of electric cabs, but, if we are to judge by recent events in London, such is not the case. In fact, at a ly ruined if either was put in. They derive a gentle exhibitation from their the London cab trade council, in which tea that we hurried westerners miss. the question of electric cabs came up for One Chinese philosopher has said regarding tea: "It tempers the spirits and harmonizes the mind, dispels lassitude and relieves fatigue, awake is London, and urging all cab drivers, in the interest of the cab industry, to disens and refreshes the body and clears courage any further development of publie vehicles driven by motive power. The position in which the London cab trade places itself is evidently little short of ludicrous. To imagine for one moment that the tide of progress can be sammed by any such resolution is the height of snort-sighted folly. If electric or any other automobile cabs can be operated more cheaply, and with greater comfort to the riding public, they will be adopted, and their increasing number seems to point strongly in this direction. The horse has practically been banished from the car track, and it may not be long
