Farm and Household.

Cheap Poultry Houses.

Most beginners in poultry keeping have very exaggerated ideas as to the profits they are to make from the new business. Consequently, as the building of a henhouse is one of the first things to be done, they are likely to make it much more expensive than is necessary. They are also likely to make the henhouse too large. More henhouses of smaller size would be better. But they should be made warm, with double windows where there are any windows, and a sheathing inside of prepared tarred paper, which should be put on over cleats, so that a space of dead air will be enclosed. A house can be put up for $15 to $20 that will be as warm and as serviceable for the fowls as one that costs two or three times that sum. The tarred paper will by its odor do much to exclude lice. If the henhouse is made small enough it can be moved on rollers during the summer, which is often an advantage, as the ground around the henhouse often becomes foul, inviting disease.

Trees to be planted in spring are usually purchased in the winter season. It is wise to buy at a near nursery if reliable stock of the desired sorts, which should be such as do well in the locality, and honest dealing can there be secured. A more leisurely inspection of the trees can be made, freight can be saved, and the stock will likely be received in fresher condition. Some nurserymen employ regular and reliable agents, who carry a certificate from the nursery they represent. With these it is usually safe to entrust orders for small lots, but when an orchard is to be set out it is much the better plan to select and deal with the nurserymen themselves. The buyer should make up his mind just what varieties he wants, and order early enough to get them. Before buying stock from any extended area, it is well to have a talk with some nurserymen of reputation, as well as with fruit-growers of experience. The exercise of good business principles, caution and common sense in buying trees will save a deal of future trouble.

In a single agricultural college in the west this year fifty girls have taken up a full course of scientific study in farming, theoretical and practical, says a writer in an exchange. Agricultural colleges are increasing rapidly in the west and south. Girls are now admitted in some of them on the same condition as boys. They have a dormitory of their own, and study three years, a part of the time being spent in actual farm work on the field. When graduated they are found skilled in every department of house work and needlework and in every line of dairy work, stock raising and agriculture. It is not surprising that some wealthy families send their daughters to these colleges. Where could parents give their daughters a better physical basis than in such an institution? It may seem to some like rosy treatment, but it is safe to say that money spent for physical culture of this order will yield better returns in the end than expensive athletic training belonging to the category of sports. It would not be surprising if one of these days the ruddy female graduate from a first-class agricultural college should be at a premium in the matrimonial market.

Nailess Horseshoes.
 One of the most recent novelties, which will, we think, be welcomed as a boon to horsekeepers as well as the animals under their charge, is a shoe which can be affixed to the hoof without nails. The new shoe takes the familiar form, but has two projections, one on each side at the back, which engage rings at the ends of a band which passes over the front of the hoof and is fastened in the middle by a screw attachment to the center of the shoe. The entire arrangement is simple, and the innovation means that when a horse casts a shoe it will not be necessary any longer to seek the aid of a farrier, for the new shoe can be easily fitted in a few minutes by an inexperienced hand. In a recent trial of the nailess horseshoe the new invention was put to a severe test, the horse on which the shoes were fitted being attached to a heavy laden van and worked up and down steep gradients and on granite paved streets. Notwithstanding the rough work the shoes showed no signs of shifting and were not removed until worn out. The new shoe obviates all risk of pricking or laming by nails, and a slight rasping of the hoof is all that is required in attaching it to its bed.

Sweet Peas.

The ground may be easily made too rich for sweet peas. An authority on their culture speaks of complaints made by some persons that their sweet peas grew luxuriantly, but did not bloom, and says, in explanation, that they had used stable manures too freely, and the plants ran to vine. The sweet pea is one of that class of plants (the leguminous) which appropriate nitrogen and heavy applications of nitrogen are therefore not needed. Another type of complaints was to the effect that young plants died after having made a good growth of several inches. Inquiry revealed the fact that in every case the plants had been frequently watered from a watering pot. Just enough water had been applied to keep the surface of the ground soggy, and the plants had damped off. Plant lovers should remember that one good watering which wets the ground clear down is worth a dozen dribblings. It is rare that sweet pea bed should be watered oftener than once a week in good soil, and if the seeds are got in early a frequent stirring of the surface soil with hoe or rake is better than watering at all.

Spring Work.

Pruning can now be done on warm days, and remember never to trim trees when the wood is frozen. A good time to do this work is along toward spring, when the snow is going off. When we have cold nights and warm days, we can go about on the crust and trim the trees, and it is easy then to gather up the cuttings.

Standard pears and cherry trees should be cut back but little, if any, cutting out such branches only as are crowding or those that cross each other.

Apples should be looked over every year, cutting out enough of the top to let the sun's light in. Dwarf pears, plums, and peaches should be cut back severely each year. At least one-half (and better two-thirds) of the past year's growth should be taken off. Don't be afraid to cut these back as above. I have practiced it for years and get far better results in both tree and fruit than do my neighbors who prune but little. Your trees, when thus cut back, grow stalky and will support their load of fruit without propping—and herein lies the secret of having no "off years" of fruit.

In planting out your berry patch plant as early in the spring as the ground can be worked. Get plants as near home as possible. Raspberry and blackberry roots start very early in the spring, and must therefore be handled with care so as not to break the sprouts that start. If plants are bought at the nursery, they will have a foot or more of the cane on them, but these are left on only for convenience in handling and should be cut off after the plants are set. If left on, the plant will make an effort to produce fruit the first season, which it should not be allowed to do, for by so doing it will weaken the new growth and injure the plant, greatly reducing the next season's crop of berries. Do not make the mistake of setting your plants too close. Give them plenty of room for full development of plant and fruit, says A. A. Halliday, of Vermont, whose advice on spring work is here reproduced from American Gardening.

Fertilizer For an Orchard.

For keeping up the vigor and health of an orchard, a manure consisting of three parts of wood ashes and one of bone meal will be useful. If wood ashes cannot be had, then a mixture of two parts of muriate of potash and three of bone meal, as recommended by Professor Voorhees, may be substituted.

Bringing Fruit Trees into Bearing.

Fruit trees of any kind frequently grow with great luxuriance. In this they are usually unfruitful. No tree commences to flower and fruit until its vegetative exuberance has been somewhat checked. Those who understand the art of fruit thoroughly can bring those wayward trees into a straight line of duty by root pruning them. It is affected by digging a trench around the tree and then filling it up with the earth that has been thrown out. This cutting off the ends of the roots causes check to the extreme vigor, and the result is the production of flowers instead of branches. The distance from the trunk that the trench should be dug will, of course, depend upon the age and size of the tree, as also its ratio of luxuriance. The aim should be to dig so as to cut off about one-third of its roots. The pear, as well as other fruit tree, is particularly benefited by root pruning. In recommending this operation, as described, Meehan's Monthly, says it can be carried out at any time during the fall or winter season.

Material for Covering Ice.

Undoubtedly sawdust is the best material to cover ice with, but in the part of the country where I live but little sawdust can be had because it is a long distance to any place where it is made in large quantities. Marsh hay is used instead of sawdust and by many it is considered just as good. Clover straw or oat straw will do very well. Of the two, clover straw with the chaff from hulling is the better material, says a writer in Prairie Farmer.

Forewarned.

A provident man is literally a man who looks ahead—such a man, for instance, as figures in this little anecdote. A Yorkshire vicar received the following note from one of his parishioners:

"This is to give you notice that I and Miss Jenima Arabella Brearly are coming to your church on Saturday afternoon next, to undergo the operation of matrimony at your hands. Please be prompt, as the cab is hired by the hour. Forewarned is forearmed."

The vicar was "prompt," and the "operation" was quickly performed while the cab waited.—London Standard.

"Did you hear what Smith's little boy said when they showed him the twins?"
 "No."
 "He said, 'There, mamma's been getting bargains again.'"

Farming in the Maritime Provinces

Differs materially from farming in Ontario and the West. Conditions are different and our markets not the same. A product profitable in those sections would not pay the tillage here, and a suggestion valuable to a westerner, would prove disastrous if followed by our farmers. In subscribing for an agricultural publication it is well to bear this in mind. There's only one paper that treats of farming from a Maritime Province standpoint. It is the

 Dear Sir:—My wife has been afflicted with nervous prostration for several years, using every kind of medicine recommended, but obtaining no relief until I procured some of your Pelee Wine, which I am delighted to say, has had the desired effect. It is the greatest tonic of the age, I think too much cannot be said in its praise and no house should be without it. We have recommended it to several suffering from the grippe debility, with like good results.
 I am, yours gratefully,
