If ever there were two classes of people that had a good cause in common they are the bicyclists and the farmers. had been annoyed by his neighbors' cats which made a sort of club room of his back yard, driving sleep from his eyelids every night. Last week he bought a revolver and opened a campaign against them. But his aim was not good and after a few nights the cats got accustomed to the fusilade and seemed rather to enjoy it. At last he fancied that his tormenters screamed at him in derision whenever he got out his gun, so he turned it on himself and put a bullet through his own brain. That is one man: here is another. A Mr. Probasco, of Chicago, made five or six millions in wheat and retired. He was temperate and by no means extravagant, but he would accomodate his friends and acquaintances with loans to any amount they asked for. A few weeks ago he found that his last dollar was gone and being too old to re-engage in business, he is now earning a living by doing odd jobs about the streets, and he says he is happier than he ever was before in his life. There's a great difference in men, but after all Mr. Probasco might have killed himself had he been annoyed as the New York man was by his neighbors' cats.

Sad Drowning Accident.

By the upsetting of a row boat in the river just above the highway bridge on Monday evening, shortly after 9 o'clock, two young lives were lost, and two others narrowly escaped drowning. The occupants of the boat were two sisters, named Lavina, and Isabella Currie, whose home is in Geary, Sumbury Co., but employed in this city, and Sterling Wallace of St. Marys, and Roy Jennings of this

It seems that the girls conceived the idea of trying to row the boat, the water being very smooth, and in changing places with the young men one of the ladies stepped too much on one side tipping over the boat, and all were thrown into the water. Sterling Wallace, with much difficulty, got Lavina Currie safely on the upturned boat, but sad to relate, the other two occupants, Isabella Currie and Roy Jennings met with a watery grave. Jennings, who was a good swimmer, tried hard to save Miss Currie, but it seems that she caught him about the neck and would not let go her grip and both perished.

The news of the accident quickly spread around town and St. Marys, and hundreds of people flocked to the bridge. Boats were manned, and willing hands and in a low condition of health. with grappling irons were soon to work 12 o'clock the body of Roy Jennings was the boat was upturned.
