Poetry

To a Forget-Me-Not.

BY PEARL MEREDITH.

Tell him I love him yet, As in that happy time, Tell him I could not forget, Though memory were a crime.

Tell him that when the light Fades upon earth and sea, I dream of him; but, oh, He must not dream of me.

Tell him to go where Fame Smiles brightly on the brave, And win a glorious name By deeds on land or wave.

Green, green upon his brow The victory-wreath shall be, Although his laurels now Must not be shared by me.

Tell him to smile again In Pleasure's brilliant throng; To love another's name, To praise another's song.

Before the loveliest there I'd have him bend the knee, And breathe to her the words He used to breathe to me.

Tell him that day by day, Life looks to me more dim, And words refuse to come When I would pray for him.

And tell him when I die To come to our favorite tree; I shall not hear, so then Let him sigh, if he must, for me.

PASSING AWAY.

'Twill pass away, how strange to say— That something else will come. Our trifling fears, our daily cares, While something else will come. That something more, there is in store; We naturally suppose; We're dreaming of, a land of love, Where quiet ever flows:

This something more, may really pour, Its current o'er our way, May realize what most we prize, But yet 'twill pass away. These hours, those hours to come, And then a blank, will mark our rank, We'll leave this earthly home, —ANNA P. BEEBE.

THE RIGIDLY RIGHTEOUS.

Composed and written on some remarks made by the faithful of Woodville, concerning the Foresters' Picnic of the 17th.

It was the seventeenth of June, And one and all did seem in tune, Like folks inspired by the moon, (That's all save the Rigidly Righteous.)

For it was booked a gala day, Care long enough had had his sway, And driven was far, far away, By all save the Rigidly Righteous.

The people all with one accord, (E'en those who do adore the Lord.) Forgot themselves and howled and roared, While shocked stood the Rigidly Righteous.

Those worthies each with long drawn face With measured step stalked round the place And would that none at all had grace, No, none, save the Rigidly Righteous.

And when the steamer "Aberdeen," A craft that is grand to be seen, Hove round Long Isle and Spoon between, All cheered save the Rigidly Righteous.

But pleasures did bear rule the day, And so without the least delay, Down to the pier all made their way Close watched by the Rigidly Righteous.

The village tyler blithe and gay, And Van—the merchant led the way, All merry were, as birds in May, How scowled the Rigidly Righteous.

Close after them came Dandy Jim, A case on either side of him, To see the lad so in the swim, Smiled e'en the Rigidly Righteous.

Jerusalem was on the ground, Hibernia too was right around. Clones there could too be found. How stared the Rigidly Righteous.

And when away at last all sailed Those sorry saints most loudly railed Against those who in grace had failed, Yes, vexed were the Rigidly Righteous.

And when the ship came back again Serenely o'er the inland main To welcome them none did disdain, None did, save the Rigidly Righteous.

Now here's to "those who love the Lord And taste the sweetness of his word," To stand by them all can afford, But down with the Rigidly Righteous.

Wasp Stings and Cocaine.

Cocaine is a remedy for wasp or bee stings. It acts apparently not only as a temporary anesthetic but seems also to have the power of destroying the poison of the sting.

COOK'S SURE COUGH CURE.

Fatal Railroad Collision.

NEW YORK, June 13.—A score of wounded from a wreck of trains on the Long Island railroad, are at St. James Hospital, Long Island City, and one of them is expected to die today. His name is Robert Fox, brakeman, five of the other injured are in a serious condition. At least thirty were hurt in the disaster. The wonder is that many were not killed.

It was a rear end collision, and it occurred at Goose Creek station on the Rockaway division of the railway. A locomotive attached to two cars of a special train on which was a bridal party ran into the rear car of a regular train as the latter was leaving the station bound for New York last night at 10.50. The special locomotive and the rear car of the regular train was wrecked and the first and second car of the regular train telescoped each other.

A Child's Love.

I do not think we should expect of children the sort of love of which we ourselves are capable. The child's love for the parent and the parent's love for the child are essentially different and we may only arouse a sort of antagonism in the young by insisting upon our right to a self-sacrificing affection. Let us be content with the sweet dependence, the demonstrative fondness that is nature's response to our nature prompted bestowal of ourselves upon our children. A degree of sturdy selfishness, however, is the prerogative of healthy childhood, and cannot be regarded as altogether blameworthy.

An Atlanta married man says: "I do not like my wife to stay too closely at home. When she stays in the house for several days at a time the table chat drifts to the servants' faults, the spots on the wall paper, and the general wear and tear of the house. When she goes out she always has something bright and interesting to tell me when I come home. Home is a very good thing, but a woman can have too much of it."

Poor Hatches.

Not for many years past have there been so many complaints in the poultry papers and from poultrymen in general about unfertile eggs and poor success. They all attribute it to the very severe winter and the cold, backward spring. Eggs from United States and Canada gave very poor hatches this spring, so it is well not to be fault-finding when such things are unavoidable by the poultrymen.

What is an old lady in the middle of a pond like? Like to be drowned.
