BERMUDA.

The recent organization of the W. C. T. U. in Bermuda lends additional interest to the following sketch of the islands by Mrs. Addie Northam Fields, our National organizer, who spent a part of last year there:

"Bermudez (not the one who sailed with Columbus) reported them as the farthest islands found in 1515. Cabot in 1540 made a map in which these islands ate designated as 'Isles of the Devil,' whether because of the dangerous reefs or the cries of wild fowl so common there is not known. In 1593 ships visited the i lands and reported many hogs, probably escaped from some wreck. The first coin of the realm had on it the picture of hog and was called 'hog money.'

"In 1609 Sir George Somers sailed from England with a fleet bound for Virginia; two hundred leagues from Bermuda a severe storm dispersed the fleet and St. George's ship was, after five days battling with the waves, one hundred men pumping constantly night and day, driven on the reefs a quarter of a mile were saved and much of the cargo. Nine the colony in dire distress and returned to Bermuda for supplies, as 'the most plentiful place for fish, hog and fowls.'

power until 1685 when the first governor under the crown was sent out."

"The heart of Sir George Somers, it is supposed, was buried at St. George in 1610, his body was sent home to England. Some well-informed Bermudians believe that St. George is an ancestor of of our Lady Henry. Until recently their merchant fleet did most of the carrying trade between New foundland and the West Indies. Once in 1795 they were the proud possessors of a navy-one sloop and one gunboat. In 1812 a fleet left New York to strike a blow at the British. Two schemes were presented, seizing the homeward bound West Indian fleet or the capture of Bermuda. The first project was chosen by a cisting rote only-so near did these isles come the second time to being a part of America. The islands suggest the idea of a succession of mountain peaks, the relic of some prehistoric continent, possibly the 'lost Atlantis.' They are of coral formation. 'Measuring the thickness of the coral, which is the land today, aeons is the only term adequate to express the time required for its forma-Wharf. The building was intended for tion.' The group is surrounded by coral reefs-near the shore on the south, and There is also in position for work a Maple Leaf Grinder which has only been cept under the skilful guidance of a Bermuda pilot. In 1824 these islands became a convict station. The wonderful roads cut through the solid rock-if such soft rock may be called solid-are no doubt the result of convict labor.

"In 1834 slavery was abolished without the six years' apprenticeship provided by law. To-day the colored people of Full assortment patent medicines and Bermuda are considered the finest of everything new. Do not forge. I have their race. The healthful, equable climate, the beautiful, semi-tropical vegeta. tion, the variety of scenery and above all the hospitable people, make the land of the 'lily and the rose' an ideal winter resort; three thousand people annually re sort thither.

> "The population of Bermuda is about fifteen thousand, of which two-thirds are colored. The extremes of wealth and poverty, so common elsewhere are unknown here, although class distinctions are quite clearly marked. The homes of the people, in fact, with few exceptions, all buildings are of stone, roof and all, and are frequently whitewashed outside and in. What looks like a cross-cut saw is used to saw the stone in the quarries into blocks for the walls and slabs for the the many points of interest to be visited. "Religious services are within easy reach of all. The Church of England is the dominant church, and probably the oldest, as a clergyman accompanied the expedition of Sir George Somers. These islands are a part of the parish of the Bishop of Newfoundland, who, by the way is a total abstainer. Christ church, in Warrick, is probably the oldest Presbyterian church in the British colonies. One cedar rafter in the present church, built in 1837, bears the date 1660, and is probably doing duty in the third building of its kind, It is connected with the Presbyterian church in Scotland. Water for Cows.

How many dairymen don't appreciate the amount of water their cows need, both to digest their food and to furnish that needed for their milk supply? A cow cannot work over her food nor supply milk without water and plenty of it. It takes four pounds, or half a gallon of water for every pound of dry matter in the food; this means nearly one hundred pounds of water for a cow receiving dry food alone. If the food contains water, as in silage or roots, of course the amount required is less.

The Geneva station found that cows in full milk required four and three-fifths pounds of water for every pound of milk. Thus a cow would need in her food and for drinking ninety-two pounds of water for every twenty pounds of milk. Now, if a cow is in a cold barn with cold food and ice water to drink, is she going to chill herself with a hundred pounds of cold water merely to keep up her milk flow? The Indiana station found that the milk fell off 8 per cent. when the entire temperature fell from 79 degrees F. to 38 degrees F., and a cow is not suffering at 38 degrees F. If she is so sensitive to a comparatively small reduction in temperature, what may the dairyman expect when the thermometer is 10 to 20 degrees below zero? The man who can't afford to take time to weigh his milk would save the price of many scales and also prevent many dollars from getting away if he knew a little, or a great deal, more about the animals he is feeding. Feed is high this year, and bran, hay, corn, etc., are high-priced fuels to heat water, cows and stables with. Yet there are going to be many tons used this winter for just that purpose, and the users will be unanimously of the opinion that "dairying don't pay."

It very often happens that cruets, toilet bottles and smaller articles become coated on the inside with a brown sediment which is impossible to wash out. In such cases eggshells and strong suds will prove very helpful. Shot is very often used for this purpose, but it is apt to scratch the glass and thus mar its beauty.

Deeper and deeper into oblivion sank the patient, while the mother patiently sat by her bedside waiting for a sign of awaking, when she would give the medicine." When the doctor had returned all hope had departed. He was startled at the mother's neglect of his instructions; but the poor woman will never know that while she sat at her dear one's bedside she was dying all the while, for want of the stimulant that she failed to administer. The doctor who attended the case says that just ss critical a case some distance away was the only reason that kept him from the young woman's bedside.
