The Kitchen Garden.

In giving some hints for an up to date farmer's garden when fruits and vegetables can be produced at a minimum cost and as much as possible of the hand labor that makes gardening disagreeable may be done away with, W. H. Jenkins says in Ohio Farmer:

We should observe some order in the location of the different crops, and first we want the early hardy vegetables as much as possible on one side of the plot in consecutive rows. We draw our line across one side of the plot and plant peas in rows three feet apart. Plant them with the garden drill by running it two or three times in a row and plant about three inches deep. Plant the early and late varieties at the same time for succession. As the vines grow more soil can be thrown over their roots by using the suitable attachments for the horse or wheel cultivators. Most of the crops we will plant with sufficient space between the rows to use the horse and cultivator, and for the garden I would use some good make of 12 tooth cultivator with very small teeth.

In rows about five inches apart we sow with the drill, lettuce, radishes, turnips, beets, spinach, salsify, parsnips, carrots and plant in hills 3 by 1 1/2 feet cabbages and cauliflowers. I would advise buying a hill dropping seed drill, for with it we can plant seed in hills when it is desired. All these mentioned can be planted as early as the ground can be worked in the spring. Later, when the weather gets warmer, we can plant the corn and beans with the drill and after danger of frost is over transplant the tomatoes, peppers and eggplants and plant melons, cucumbers and squashes in rows three to six feet apart, according to the space they need.

Early in the spring we should prepare a seed bed for sowing celery in the open ground, and this may be transplanted to the pot where the early peas are grown. Put all the crops in as long rows as possible and have no beds in the garden, but use sections of rows for those vegetables which are grown in small quantities. With everything in rows so as to work the plants either with the horse or hand cultivators we are able to dispense with the greater part of the hand work that was done in the old fashioned garden.

Those vegetables that remain permanently in the ground, as asparagus, rhubarb and horse radish, should be on a separate plot, as we do not want them where the ground is plowed every year. The supply of peas, beans and sweet corn should be large enough to furnish the table all that can be used in their season and with a liberal surplus for canning. These are so easily grown, with little or no hand labor, and are so desirable that no farmer's family need be in want of palatable and nutritious vegetables. These may to a large extent take the place of meat during the summer, especially the peas and beans, which are rich in protein. Lima beans, are one of the most delicious vegetables grown in the garden and are easily grown if we use wires for a support for them instead of poles. I would advise using wire netting for a support for the vines of the tall growing peas.

Lie On Your Back.

Lie flat on your back. It's all nonsense about bad dreams. It is the most healthful position one can assume when going to sleep. Lie flat on your back, and for strengthening a weak back let the spine touch the bed its entire length. This will strengthen the spine and tend to make one stand erect. While lying on the back the spine should be curved outward instead of inward at the waist line. Now for the arms. Instead of letting them fall at the sides, Madame Pote says: "Raise the arms so that the hands are parallel with the head. This position will raise the bony frame of the chest from the lungs. The effect of this will be to give the lungs the fullest amount of space compatible with the fact that they are enclosed by the ribs, thereby making respiration more easy. As is well known, one of the first signs of approaching sleep is deep and even breathing. Even an obdurate case of insomnia may often be cured by forcing oneself to breathe slowly and regularly, and it can easily be seen how much the position of the arms mentioned in the foregoing will aid in obtaining entire relaxation, and the consequent rest to the muscles."

The Chain Letter Business.

We have for months been, and still are, in daily receipt of letters, either asking us to expose as fraudulent a system of money-getting existing in Montreal, under guise of a patriotic fund, and by means of a chain letter. Some ask us to notify the police. Others anxiously ask us to say whether the scheme is honest or not. One has sent us the letter received by him, which purports to be the twenty-ninth on the line, is to close at the fiftieth number.

He submits a calculation up to number twenty-seven, showing how if the chain went no further it would produce $2,287,679,245,496.10 a sum which, he remarks, would make millionaires of two hundred thousand soldiers while the postage would pay Canada's debt.

We answered such letters privately as long as we could, assuring the givers we had no doubt that the money they remitted would be all used for the purpose for which the givers intended it. Publicly, we stated that we could not constitute ourselves an inquiry office or a mercantile agency to examine and endorse such enterprises. No one should send money to people whom he does not know, or in some way know about, still less ask others to do so.

A Coles Island Incident.

The prominent accordion musician of this place recently lost his way between Mr. William Boyd's and a certain bend in the Canaan river. After wandering about for some time, he saw a dim little light not far off and resolved, to make the best of it. So he started toward the light. The nearer he got to it the more distinct became the outline of a dwelling. As he drew nearer he began to think the building looked familiar to him. But nevertheless he walked slowly up to the door and gave a light little rap, but no answer came. He then again and heard foot- footsteps. He stepped down and to his amazement he stood before a tall stately figure with blue eyes that seemed to penetrate his very soul and haunt him by day and by night, that he only parted from about an hour before. She stood there impatient, wondering what the midnight caller wanted. At last he broke the silence and said: "I have lost my way, and won't you like a dear, good girl show me the road?" As he said this she began to grow angry and exclaimed: Lost your way! I think you have have lost your brains—if you ever had any to lose. But she went and got her hat and cloak and returned to show him the road. When they reached the gate, she opened it for him and allowed him to pass through. After saying good-night he departed for home, and the dear, good girl with the blue eyes went into the house—not to sleep but to think of the unfortunate fellow who had lost his way. When the latter reached home, to his surprise he found his parents in bed and the house fastened. He could not get in though he tried in every possible way. At last he concluded that he would go and sleep in the barn. He went, but another surprise awaited him there, for just as he was about to ascend the ladder to the loft he heard a low growl. He was up the ladder a little way when he heard the growl, but it frightened him so he fell to the floor and the next instant the dog was upon him. They struggled for a little while, and at last he got the dog quieted. Then he started up the ladder again and this time reached the loft in safety. But he was no more than asleep when he felt something crawling over him. It was rats! They were making roads all over him. So the next best thing to do was to leave that place and go somewhere else. He thought he would try again to get in the house, and he succeeded. When he was once more safely in bed he vowed to himself that he would never, never go courting again until he was old enough to have sense enough to keep the road.

KIRRY.

Boers Insured.

A curious feature of the war in South Africa and one which illustrates the long-headedness of Uncle Kruger, is the fact that British insurance companies have been compelled to carry without extra premium the risks on the fighting Boers. When they applied for the privilege of doing business in the Transvaal it was stipulated that Boers insured should be allowed to serve in war on ordinary insurance rates. The result now is that the British companies have one class of policy-holders, killing off another class of policy-holders, and the British insuring public will in the long run have to foot the bill.

A HIDDEN LIGHT.

My Uncle Jim's a wonder;
He would know just what to do
In a military crisis—
Say, another Waterloo,
He could figure in a minute
How his side could win the day
And get out with banners flying—
But none ever came his way.

In political transaction
He had foresight rare and keen.
He would know what strings to pull at
As he stood behind the scene.
In a "coo-dy tab," I tell you,
Genius! That's what he'd display,
Changin' all the hist'ry—
But none ever came his way.

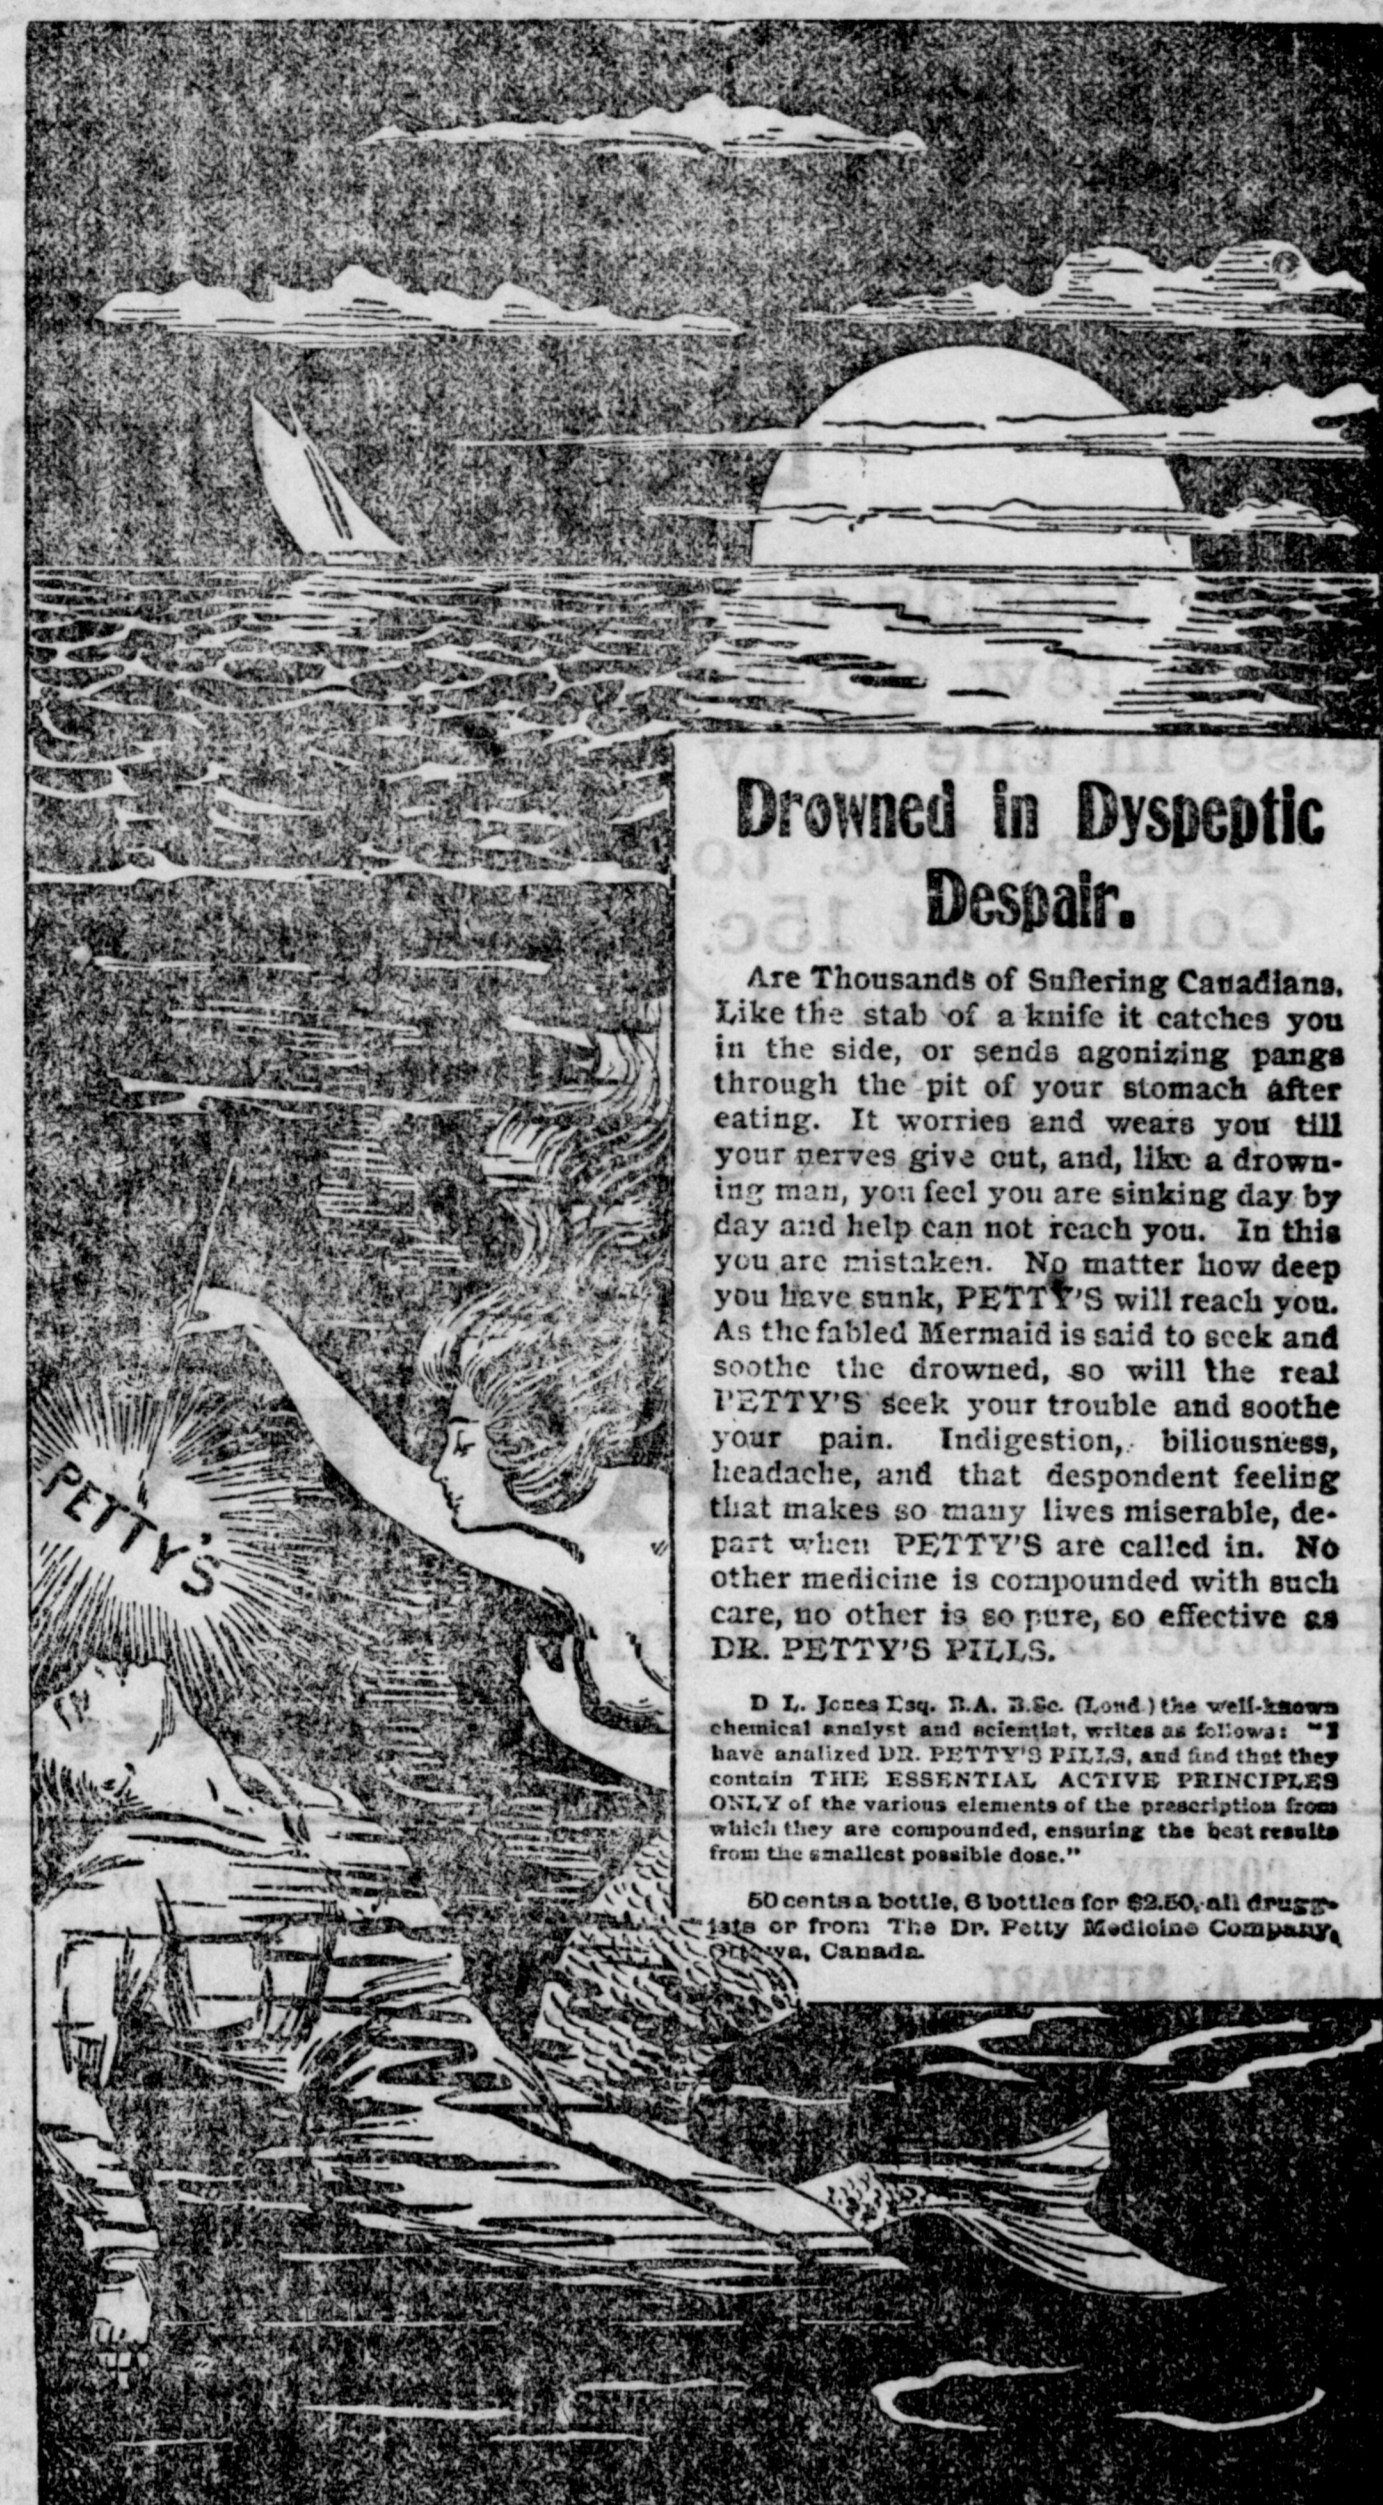

An' as far financeerin',
That is where his talent shines;
He knows how folks should handle
Railroad pools an' banks, an' mines.
Puttin' through big undertakin's
Seems to him a pastime gay,
He could fix 'em in a jiffy—
But none ever came his way.

Uncle Jim is liv' in' quiet
In his house behind the hill,
An' the world goes on without him
Missin' all his brains and skill,
War, diplomacy, finances
Would have felt his master sway
Had occasion only offered—
But none ever came his way.

The New Progressive Euchre Prize.

Hundreds of women all through the country have taken up the latest fad of offering a year's subscription to The Ladies' Home Journal as a prize at progressive euchre parties. Awards without number have been made during the past winter. The fad has a humorous side to it, since last year the magazine insistently opposed the rage for women's card parties.

A coffin packed with rifles and ammunition was found in a Dutch farm by a British private with Gatacre's force.

Drowned in Dyspeptic Despair.

Are Thousands of Suffering Canadians, Like the stab of a knife it catches you in the side, or sends agonizing pangs through the pit of your stomach after eating. It worries and wears you till your nerves give out, and like a drowning man, you feel you are sinking day by day and help can not reach you. In this you are mistaken. No matter how deep you have sunk, PETTY'S will reach you. As the fabled Mermaid is said to seek and soothe the drowned, so will the real PETTY'S seek your trouble and soothe your pain. Indigestion, biliousness, headache, and that despondent feeling that makes so many lives miserable, depart when PETTY'S are called in. No other medicine is compounded with such care, no other is so pure, so effective as DR. PETTY'S PILLS.

D. L. Jones Esq. B.A. B.Sc. (Lond.) the well-known chemical analyst and scientist, writes as follows: "I have analyzed DR. PETTY'S PILLS, and find that they contain THE ESSENTIAL ACTIVE PRINCIPLES ONLY of the various elements of the prescription from which they are compounded, ensuring the best results from the smallest possible dose."
