"YOU STAY."

I remember, said an old clergyman lately, a careless word spoken to me in my boyhood which has influenced my character through life. Like most tickly, sensitive children, I was ready to give up hope before every trouble. An attack of illness, a long storm, a disagreeable visitor or servant in the family plunged me into despair.

Fred, said my uncle to me one day, the toothache, or the wet weather, or the boys who tease you are bad things enough, but remember they go, and you stay.

It was like a new gospel to me. These great evils would pass by, and little insignificant me—I stayed!

It was a wholesome idea to put into a boy's mind. The feeling of permanence is rare with children. They are to their own feeling anchorless boats on the sea, driven here and there. Out of this uncertainty comes most of their vague miseries. It is good for them to feel that, no matter how poor, or dull or obscure they are in comparison with others, each of them has a life of his own, abiding and sure, which is of importance in God's eyes. Many morbid, self-distrusting boys and girls need just the poise and confidence which that knowledge would give to them.

As I grew older, the chance words took a wider meaning to me. The temptation, however fierce, would pass if I stood firm; the grief, no matter how deep, would lighten—the agony of self-sacrifice would be gone some day, and I would remain to finish my work, and answer my account.

Life itself would at last vanish, as when the heavens and earth disappear, and yet my soul, this insignificant me, would stay face to face with God.

What are these things that we think and talk of all day long? Our neighbour's gown, or house, or bank account, or our own cough, or china, or lucky speculations?

These are the things that go.

The kindliness in our hearts, the loving word we speak, the little gasp of a prayer in our soul, where only God sees—these are the things that stay, and enter immortal records.

Which weigh the heavier with us? Youth's Companion.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

WARM WATER FOR PLANTS.—Window plants will thrive better when watered with warm water than with cold. Fill the saucer every morning with boiling water. Keep the same side of the plant to the light.

COLD CREAM.—In a cup placed in hot water melt together half an ounce of spermaceti, twenty grains white wax, and two ounces sweet almond oil; when melted remove from the fire and add one ounce pure glycerine and six drops oil of rose, stir till cold.

POTATO SOUFFLE.—Boil half a dozen potatoes, mash them fine; scald in a sauce-pan half a cup of sweet milk and a table-spoonful of butter, add this to the potato, also a little salt and pepper, and beat to a cream; then add, one at a time, the yolks of three eggs, beating all the time, then add the whites well beaten; pour the mixture into a buttered dish and bake twenty minutes in a hot oven. Serve at once with meats that have gravies.

VEAL SOUP.—Into the soup-kettle put a knuckle of veal with three or four quarts of cold water. Boil gently three or four hours. Boil in a dish by itself a quarter of a pound of macaroni or vermicelli with enough water to cover it; add a little butter when it is tender. Strain the soup, season with salt and pepper, and add the macaroni with the water in which it was boiled. Celery or onions may be used for flavoring.

CHOCOLATE CARAMELS.—One cup grated chocolate, two of molasses, two of milk, four of sugar, butter the size of an egg, a pinch of sugar and of flour; boil half an hour, stirring constantly to keep from burning. Pour in buttered pans, and when nearly cold mark into squares with a silver case knife.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

Every idle or injudiciously employed hour will cry out in accusation against us in the final assize, when we are called on to render an account of the distribution of that invaluable time which God allows us solely for the accomplishment of His work on earth.

Faithful prayer always implies correlative exertion; and no man can ask honestly and hopefully to be delivered from temptation unless he has himself honestly and firmly determined to do the best he can to keep out of it.

It was a saying of Lord Clarendon's father, that he never knew a man arrive at any degree of reputation in the world who chose for his friends and companions persons in their qualities inferior, or in their parts not much superior, to himself.

Wash mirrors in warm suds, then rub with whiting from a muslin bag and polish with chamois skin.

Revelations of a Retired Publican.

Temperance men and temperance news-papers are sometimes said to be extreme in referring to the tactics of the publican in inveighing his weak and unwary customers. Here is a revelation, which I chanced to overhear while awaiting for a train at a country railway station not long ago which, coming as it does from the opposite side, will, I have no doubt, prove interesting to the many readers of The Reformer:—

The train was late, and, while waiting on the platform, three men came up and stood not far from me, one of them I knew to be a retired publican. Judging from their conversation the other two were also in the trade. Their chief topic was their success in business. One had started in an old, thatched-roofed building, and is now in a large new house of his own. Another revealed the tricks of the trade in which he was engaged. According to his confession his plan was to go in and out among his customers, taking a "dram" with this one and that one; in fact he said, I made it my business to be a body's body. In that way I was able to keep them together for a long time. Through this practice, he admitted, he was "aye fou," but his wife was "aye there, and she looked after the money and kept it a' thing right." So much so, that they cleared five or six hundred pounds every year and were soon able to retire. He bought a nice cottage in a quiet place, away from his old cronies and associations. He frankly informed his two listeners that he "daurna trust himself to go near a public-house." Now, here is a man who well knew the power of drink, running away from it after he had made as much money as would keep him in comfort the remainder of his life, while many of his foolish customers, whom he had encouraged in drinking habits, will be in less favorable circumstances; probably some of them in the poorhouse, and others, as they advance in years, drawing nearer to it. One thing I learned from this conversation was that it is in human nature—aye, even in an "old publican"—to flee from the power of the public-house. Working men, who have the same feelings as this publican had, cannot take a house in the country—they must be near their work. But the day will come when the Veto bill is passed into law, and they will then have the power to put away the public-houses from their midst.—The Reformer.

A Canker at the Vitals.

THE CHAUTAUQUAN (RELIGIONS.)

The battle between man and the saloon rages, and it is likely to increase in intensity till the end comes, because the saloon is an unnatural production in our civilization. Veterans in the contest of to-day have witnessed, alternately, success and failure in all the organized movements of temperance people. But there will not be any permanent backward steps in the temperance reform—all signs of the times point forward. There seem to be but two special and well aimed movements to reach the life of the saloon and destroy it by the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the other by the Temperance political party. Strangely enough the one uses moral and the other proposes legal means; the one is composed wholly of women and the other men. They are intensely in earnest and moved by a powerful conviction that the American system of saloons must and shall be overthrown. These two organizations are using as their weapons literature and the platform, the ballot and prayer to compass their end. No better agency can be employed for the promotion of a just cause. That the atmosphere of our towns and cities is surcharged with temperance electricity is evident from the clashing of political forces and the sensitive condition of society on the issues of total abstinence and prohibition. Temperance seems to be the only great moral problem that looms above our social or political horizon. All else has assumed the quiet of an established order of things, and this order of things is now being almost forgotten in the wild scramble for office, power, and patronage, but thoughtful and good men should consider that a canker is eating at the very vitals of the Government.
