A WOMAN'S BIG BLUFF.

After two or three days of weary search a Canadian named Williams, living near St. Thomas, located his eloping wife here in Detroit. She had run away with the hired man and they were boarding with a family on Champlain street. An officer went with the husband to interview the faithless one, rather expecting trouble, but there was none. The visitors were ushered into the sitting room and the wife rose up and calmly asked.

Who did you wish to see, gentlemen? Mary, I've come for you! replied the husband. Why did you run away from me and the children? Where's that scoundrel of a Pete?

Mary? Mary? Haven't you made a mistake, sir? she queried.

Come, Mary, none of that, he answered. You've got to go back with me.

Sir, what means this language? she demanded. Officer, did you bring this man here to insult me?

He says you are his wife.

Of course she is!

His wife! I never set eyes on him before! He is either drunk or crazy!

Not my wife! he shouted. Haven't we lived together 18 years? Didn't you and Pete skin from home ten days ago? Haven't you got two children waiting for you to come back? And haven't I come to waltz you home and pound Pete within an inch of his life.

I must demand your protection, she said to the officer. This has gone too far already. The man must be crazy.

I want her arrested, said the husband. Try it at your peril! she replied.

My husband will demand ample satisfaction for this outrage.

You must be mistaken, said the of-

No, I hain't!

But I guess you are, and we will go.

Your name and the number of your badge, please? asked the woman, and when they were given she wrote them down and bowed the officer out. The husband went too, but vigorously contended that no mistake had been made Two hours later he returned to the house to make another effort, but the wife had disappeared, leaving behind her a note

To the police-Please use the old man gently. He is very soft on top of the head. Yours truly-Pete and I. - Detroit Free Press.

MACKAY V. JOSEPHINE.

Among "dressy women may be mentioned Mrs. Mackay, who has annually 104 dresses made for her-that is two for each week in the year—one a street or visiting costume, and the other an evening or dinner dress. It is unnecessary to make much comment on this waste of material, and it certainly is productive of good, in providing food and employment to her poor sisters. Perhaps she is emulous of the Empress Josephine, who (according to ordinary live shells charged with melinite an old book published in 1807) changed her dress four to six times a day, never twice assuming a plain gown. The weekly allowance of stockings for the Empress was four dozen of silk in summer, and in the winter two dozen of French sick hose and three dozen of the finest silk stockings. She used up three dozen pairs of gloves and shoes a week, and she never wore any stockings that had been washed, nor did she don more than once the same pair of gloves or shoes. The lace frills of her chemises cost $10 apiece. Every three months she exchanged her diamonds and other jewels, or had them newly set according to the mutations of fashion, and four times a year her plate, china, furniture, tapestry hangings and carpets were renewed. She had thirty-six horses in her private stable, and her master of the horse was empowered to dispose of twelve steeds once a month and replace them with animals of a fashionable hue. Once a month, too, all the domestics in the Empress' household received fresh liveries, and every thirty days her wardrobe was divided among her maids of honor. Of these toilettes the court lady had four, with an equal number of sets of jewellery one for the Tuileries, one for St. Cloud, one for Malmaison and one for travelling. By touching certain springs, she could command for her bath what perfumes her caprice required, the reservoirs always containing twelve thousand francs' worth of the finest odors. When she wished to leave her bath, she had but to touch a bell, when by a mechanical contrivance, she was lifted into an elegant, moderately warmed and perfumed bed, where she

One day last week there was a gathering of a dozen men whose names are household words, and the recent death of a prominent journalist whose life had been a signal success led to a discussion on success and failure, and the causes which operated in favor of success, or which led to failure. We do not propose to give a summary of this discussion. Suffice it to say that at the end of an hour the subject was apparently exhausted. As they were about to disperse one of the most brilliant and talented of the party said: "I move we adjourn and take a drink. I have enough to treat this crowd." Three or four followed him. As they went out of the room our office boy, who had been an attentive listener, gave what old fashioned preachers at the close of their sermons call the application. "Success or failure," said he; "Ice water or whisky?"-The Journalist.

HOW JACKSONVILLE GOT THE FEVER.

The proposition that all the world loves a lover probably does not hold good in Jacksonville now. This whole yellow fever business is a love affair, or the result of a love affair. McCormick, the man who brought the yellow fever to Jacksonville, was a lover. His sweetheart was in Tampa, and Tampa was isolated on account of yellow fever. But yellow fever or no yellow fever, McCormick wanted to see his girl; so he managed to pass the cordon and steal an interview with his love. Then he came back to Jacksonville and brought yellow fever with him. Surgeon General Hamilton is authority for this short history of the spread of yellow fever. It is another confirmation of the wisdom of the sage who once declared there was a woman at the bottom of every mischief. - Washington Post.

ATTACHED TO HER HOME.

The tenacity with which people love to hold to their homesteads is illustrated in a piece of landat Bar Harbor, the fashionable watering place, which has a view, and would be a splendid site for a cottage. It is owned by an old Irish washerwoman, who has a hut and dries her clothes there. All persuasions to sell it have failed to move her, and it is said that $150,000 was offered for the property this summer. The simple minded Bar Harborites have always resented the inroads of the swells and the way they have appropriated the place, and many of them have similarly refused to sell their birthplaces. - Philadelphia Times.

WAS NOT FATALLY DAMAGED.

The present series of experiments with and gun cotton against the Resistance (armor clad) have been concluded. The top, sides and interior of the hulk are very much torn and rent, but the comparative values of the several explosives will not be determined until after a careful examination of the results has been made on board by a committee of experts. But the mere fact that it was possible to tow the ship into harbor immediately after the firing goes far to prove that the hull was not fatally damaged. Scientific

IS IT A BIBLE.

The delicate duty of deciding whether or not the Mormon bible is authentic has devolved upon the custons department. If really a bible, the duty to be levied upon it is but 5 per cent., but if not a bible, it is a mere book, taxable at the rate of 15 per cent. The department has levied the higher duty, thus practically determining that the work is no revelation, but the production of human intellect. Here is a ruling that will not be questioned in this community.—Toronto

CONTESTING AN ECCENTRIC WILL.

An eccentric will will be tested in the courts at Pesth in December. Aphysician, Dr. Goldberger de Buda, left $250,009 to accumulate for the benefit of his posterity until the interest would be sufficient to relieve destitution everywhere. The trustees calculated that they could effect a distribution when the capital reached $1,000,000,000, but they declined to act. The will will now be contested by claimants in America, London and Madrid .-
