Good of the Order.

THE LIGHT IS BREAKING.

BY MRS. M. L. T. HIDDEN.

TUNE-WEBB.

The morning light is breaking, The darkness disappears, Republicans are waking With penitential tears; Each breeze that sweeps our country Brings tidings from afar, That Fisk and Brooks are leaders In this the peoples' war.

The morning light is breaking, The darkness disappears, The Democrates are quaking With strange foreboding fears They see prophetic writing Upon their party walls,

While women are advancing By thousands to the polls. Awake ye sleeping Cristians

And arm you for the fight, Be true to home and fireside, Defend them by your might; Vote not for either party Existing now by fraud, But at our next election

For coutry home and God.

THE FIRESIDE VISION.

-Public Good.

(For the JOURNAL.) My surroundings lost in thought On the wonders of the Universe, And the changes time had wrought. There as I watched the fire's glow I start in quick surprise; As up from out the glowing coals A dark form seems to rise. Who are you and from whence do come ! 1 question in alarm; Your purpose, Is it weal or woe? To do me good or harm? 'I am the spirit of the past, To mortals I'm unknown, And from the darkness of that past I come to you, and you alone. our thoughts and wishes unsurpassed, Have still been heard on high. What would you? With your slighted wish I will at once comply." I fain would look into the past, The ages rolled away, To see if mortals were the same There as they are to-day. Draw back the curtain from the past; That I may plainly see Whatever progress man hath made Since his Nativity. The spirit spoke, "Are you prepared? Weak mortal don't you fear

To view the wonders God hath wrought With each revolving year !'

His grace sufficeth me, I said, How can I be afraid?

"Enough! Prepare to view the past,"

This curse is wept aw And in our land as free a: I ach man may stand to ay. The spirit turned ; "Behold again,] Then judge by what you see, If man in God's own image made Is . ptive, or is free.' I lool d, and saw a happy home;] So happy none would dare To say that sorrow e'er could touch 'hat home or children fair. The father looked upon his home With all a father's pride. The mother only happy seemed With her children by her side. The years roll on ; that father's form Is bent with grief and care; And sorrow, with relentless hand, Whitens the mother's hair. And why? Their child, their first-born son, They tried so hard to save, In spite of tears, in spite of prayers, Now fills a drunkard's grave. The others, heedless of his fate, Follow with careless step. My feelings I could not control, I bowed my head and wept. That scene is dark; but darker still The scene that follows this; Where thousands bound with heavy chains Plunge into an abyss. I turned, Behold a mighty hill] Arose on either side; Between a river darkly flowed With slowly moving tide. Beyond those hills the way of Life.] The river which you see] Flows onward, ('Tis the river Death) Unto Eternity. And multitudes adown the hills, | Came quickly to the brink, 'These," saith the spirit, "all are slaves The captives of strong drink." I saw some pause, and turn away 🗊 Then stagger to the brink As though drawn on by demon hands, I saw them plunge and sink. "Thus endeth life, for those who sin." The spirit sadly saith, "The days of those, who live in sin, Shall surely end in death." The vision fades; and with a start I find the spirit flown. The fire in my grate gone out; And I myself alone. This lessson does the vision teach, If I have read aright, Though many battles have been won,

There are many more to fight. There are many more to fight. Then rise up Sons of Temperance all, Renew at once the strife. Drive back the des royer of maakind, And give your brother's life. Then, when at last the struggle o'er, You pass to your reward, You'll near before the judg nent throne, The "Well done" of the Lord.

He waved his hand, and on my gaze There burst a wondrous sight. Twas Eden in its lovliness, Bathed in the Sun's first light. I saw the wild beasts steathly tread, I heard the wild birds song, And echoes catching up the strain, Their sweetest notes prolong. And there within the pleasant shade Beneath the tree of life, Stood Adam; father of mankind, And Eve his new-made wife. This new made couple raise Their voices in thanksgiving, The first great psalm of praise. And I to view the beauteous scene In speechless wonder stood. When lo! I heard a voice proclaim: "Behold, All things are good !" But o'er the scene a darkness falls, What meaneth this? I cried. 'Tis sin which darkens thus the scene," The spirit quick replied. And man through sin was driven out From Heaven's very gate. Repenting true; but ah alas! Repentance came too late. Then slowly past me rolled the years With changes in their train, 1 Indeed the whole world round me seemed As a vast level plain. I saw great armies go to war, ] I saw great battles fought. And fierce destruction on the earth, By the hand of man was brought. I saw great nations rise and fall, Their glories fade away. Assyria, Persia, Egypt, Rome, Pass quickly to decay. I saw the negro, bound with chains. Borne helpless o'er the sea, To labor for his fellow man In forced captivety. I saw the master's upraised lash; And knew the captives cries, Unheeded by his fellow men, Were heard beyond the skies. Thank God! I cried that from the earth

The above was addressed by a busy railroad officer to a city lawyer, for Urban Starr. They only laughed who replied :

"There is my friend's son, Urban Starr ; his father spoke to me about Urban want the situation ?" employment for him. To be sure Urban is rather above the place as member when you are a railroad presito talent and culture, but times are dent that you owe your success in hard, and the young should climb the life to me!" low rounds of the ladder. I'll see about proposing him."

"Thank you! I'll be doubly obliged if you'll take your applicant up to the office and see him accepted.' And the railroad man hurried away.

To this conversation there has been a deeply-interested, but sadhearted listener-Theodore Young, the faithful and patient office-boy who longed with unspeakable desire for some such place as the one described. He was the eldest son of a widowed mother whom he yearned to help, and who was so poor that forty dollars a month seemnd wealth to her boy. When the railroad man left the lawyer turned to Theo, saying

After and when the finished letter was his death one of his veins burst, and handed to him his request burst the blood therefrom was almost as forth in trembling eagerness : forth in trembling eagerness :

"Send him in, if you please; we would like to talk with him."
