On the 11th inst. at St. Davids, Charlotte Connty, by the Rev. M. Pickles, Mr. Thomas Mitcheller, which dealings, make the ons. Let M. Thiers are of this—that there is truer national defence, in than in whole quarries of rength, a truer national defence, in more political strength, a truer national defence, in one ounce of honesty, than in whole quarries of granite.

This question of fortification will, for some time, serve to busy the brains of young France; but we much doubt the erection of the wall. We shrewdly suspect that M. Thiers will, not only like Snout the tinker, play the part of Wall, but will also double it with that of Moonskine.

We learn from Paris that the English government have united their remonstrances against the extraordinary armaments of France to keep up that contradiction, a "paix armee," to those previously made by Austria and Prussia, and the English government have also signified their intention to increase considerably their navy, if the naval armaments of France should be increased, as England could only, by these means, make head against the could only, by these means, make head against the superiority which France has in her armies.

We are able to contradict the report in the ministerial evening journal, that "the Powers had expressed their approval of the convention between Commodore Napier and Mehemet Ali;" that convention, as yet, not having been communicated to them through the official channel, Sir Robert Stopford.—Morning Herald.

There appears to be no doubt of the fact that the Four Powers have united in protesting against the military preparations now making in France.

The entire of the Royal Artillery are to be furnished with percussion tabes for field pieces, as more certain and expeditions than the common tube and port-fire. Lieutenant Slemans, of the Hanoverian Artillery, is the inventor.

The recruiting for the Royal Artillery goes on slowly; and the regiment at the end of the year will be greatly under the establishment.

This result at once furnishes the most striking testimony to the value of the value vaccination as an antidote, and the most conclusive evidence of the guilt of the Poor Law Commissioners in suffering a law intended to place so powerful an antidote within every man's reach to become inoperative through their perverse economy or inexcusable neglect. - Times.

The British officers declined recognising the authority of the supreme government at Merida, in as much as the existence of such a government was not known to the authorities of Honduras; adding. that of Mexico, which had proclaimed the parties holding power in Yucatan as insurgents.

After some further process. that no other supreme government was known but

After some further negotiation, the British ship Comus captured a brigantine, Eusebio, bound for New-Orleans, and belonging to citizens of Yucatan, by way of reprisal, when the commandant of Sisal was told that unless indemnity was given in two days the said vessel would be taken to the Balize and sold for the benefit of the owners of the True Blue. $8,193 were given up to the British, with a protest against the seizure of the Eusebio, as repugnant to the laws of nations. Shertly afterwards, it is said, the True Blue was recaptured by Comms.

The questions arising out of these proceedings, whether the British authorities had a right to resort to this extraordinary mode of redress, and whether the officers of a foreign power have any authority to determine the existence or non-existence of a ge vernment in Yucatan, for the purpose of suppressing infringements of the revenue laws. In this matter we think the British authorities have transcended their just powers—a practice in which they have got into the habit of indulging lately.
