THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.
 The man who has made himself indispensable, the man whom people cannot do without—this is the man who need not run after place; place runs after him; he need not seek success; he commands success. And it really does not make much difference where he begins. Joseph began as a slave, and next as a slave in prison; but he did not stay there. Henry Ward Beecher began in Lawrenceburg, lighting the lamps in the church and ringing the bell, because they were too poor, to hire any one to do it. Mr. Spurgeon began at Waterbeach on a salary of £50 a year, or $4.60 a week, out of which he paid $2.88 a week for the rent of his one room. All a man wants is a place in which to prove that he is indispensable and the way to show that he is indispensable in a larger place is to show that he is indispensable just where he is. Care and economy hold the little things; the little things make the big ones. It is the pennies that make the dimes, and dimes dollars. Don't forget that it means more than you think. It has been the basis of every man's fortune who started without money, and has been the means of those having it being able to hold it. Your own right arm, your own health, your business training, your own determination, is capital to you vastly more valuable than any chance bequest. Use these diligently in achieving success. Be patient. You cannot all go into business; you cannot all be merchants. But you can all rise to positions of trust and responsibility. The man who occupies a confidential position in any house occupies a proud position, one preferred by many because it is in many respects freed from responsibilities which attach to large business obligations. Instead of hunting around to find the missing link between man and a dirty little monkey, I prefer to look for the missing link that will connect man with the throne of an eternal God.

HINTS TO THE HOUSEWIFE.
Laundry Blue.—One-half ounce of oxalic acid, one-half ounce of soluble blue, dissolved in two quarts of rain water.
Raised Doughnuts.—Cream half a cup of butter, to this add two cups of sugar and mix well together. Add a cup of good, strong yeast and a pint of warm, sweet milk; then add a quart of flour, and a half teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, a pinch of allspice, a tea-spoonful of cinnamon, and a tea-spoonful of salt. Of these make a soft dough, adding more milk if necessary. When thoroughly light stir in three eggs, the whites and yolks beaten separately, and a pint of flour or less to make the dough of the right consistency. Fry in hot fat.
To clean flat irons.—On a pine board spread a thin layer of coal ashes, and on this rub the iron until it is clean, pass it over a piece of waxed brown paper, then over a cloth and it is ready for use. Irons heated over a gas or kerosene stove or coated with starch from starched clothes may thus be readily cleaned. Rubbing them on a cloth saturated with kerosene will give them a smooth surface. Keep the board to clean the irons on with the holders and other equipments for ironing day.

WHAT ARE YOU DOING?
 Did you ever tell what the Lord has done for your soul?
 How does the world know you are a Christian?
 Did you ever make a personal appeal to an unconverted soul?
 Do your religious engagements take precedence over all others?
 Have you tried to induce any one to attend your church meetings?
 Have you welcomed any stranger in church?
 Do you visit the poor, the sick, the strangers?
 Have you sought to know our new members?
 Do you go into the world and preach the gospel by giving as the Lord has prospered you?
 Is secret prayer your daily habit?
 Do you observe daily worship.

A QUESTION OF CLUBS.
 I have been thinking a good deal lately about the wrong side of the effects of clubs and classes. I must begin by declaring that many towns need more than they have, and not be understood as an enemy of clubs altogether. But for the most part we have got the idea of organization so thoroughly into our minds, the value of joining what one person has learned or can think to do with what another person knows or plans or does, that we have to guard against what old-fashioned people call, not standing in our own lot and place. The clubs are good for us, just so far as they help us as individuals to grow and become as valuable as we can be to ourselves, our families, and the town and country where we live. There is an undoubted value of the club as the club, but this depends of course upon the value of the person of whom the club is formed. And sometimes, perhaps always, we can develop ourselves better alone, from the outcome of our own thought, than in the best of company. Growing wiser and more able to do our work does not invariably depend upon the stimulus we get from others, even from those who seem to be climbing the same hill and aiming at the same mark. I know two or three girls who live in a large, wide-awake town where there is a fine school, and the teachers, of course, and all the studying that goes on, gives an intellectual tone to society in general. There are some book clubs and reading clubs, of course there are clubs for discussion of the topics of the day, and, besides this, sewing societies connected with the churches, and benevolent associations to which my young friends gave a good proportion of their time. But I was startled to find they also had not only a theatrical club and a boat club and a French club and a walking club, but a picnic club, and that they seemed to have almost no personal and individual existence. And after a few days of listening I heard one dear girl deplore her lack of time for practising, though she has a remarkable gift for music, and if left to herself would naturally put it first of all her pursuits. Another girl seemed to be neglecting her gift for drawing in the same way, protesting piteously that she hated to be doing nothing but scratching a hasty sketch now and then at one of the club picnics. There was no idleness, for the clubs involved various committees, and these girls were being appealed to and interrupted constantly in the routine or emergencies of so much general business. The quiet home life was reduced to a fragment of time; I wonder if this is not so in many other wide-awake towns?
