The first meeting of St. Andrew's church Guild, will be held in the lecture room this evening, at 8 o'clock. A musical programme has been provided. Charles Estey, a carpenter, while working on a house on Kennedy St., on Friday last, fell from the staging, and sustained a few slight bruises about the head. Dr. Gilchrist attended him. The Fortnightly Club meet at the residence of W. Watson Allan, 70 Leinster street, tonight. The programme includes a paper by Dr. G. G. Melvin, on the effect of a Union of Canada and United States. The new boats are expected to make eighteen knots an hour, and will run between England and the West Indian Island and probably Canada. The steamer Westport III, Captain Powell, arrived last night from Westport, and other St. Mary's ports. The Westport, on the trip had to tow the schooner Sea Foam off Dartmouth Point, where she ran ashore losing both jibs and two anchors. An express team came to grief on Maine street, north end, this morning. It was overloaded, and when the wheels struck the rut by the street car rails, there was a general drop in groceries. One wheel dropped off and down went the wagon. The little son of William Vall, Autumn street, fell off a roof, a distance of 18 feet, about ten o'clock this morning, and was picked up unconscious. Dr. Corbett was summoned. It is thought the boy's injuries are not very serious, despite the bad fall. Tenders will be received at the office of the Evening Times. D. Harnett, private secretary to Guy C. Dunn, chief engineer in connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific surveys in New Brunswick, passed through the city today on a holiday trip to Moncton. Mr. Harnett, in conversation with a Times reporter, said that the survey was being proceeded with in a more satisfactory manner than at first expected.

THE MAGISTRATE.

"The Magistrate" will be the attraction at the Opera House tonight. The play is a bright and breezy laugh maker and the Dalley company will be seen to advantage in it. The Magistrate was originally produced in London, and is the creation of one of England's greatest playwrights, Arthur W. Pinero. His construction of the trial scene in which the magistrate is forced to sit in judgment of his wife, through a previous misdeed, in the action of the play, is a proof of his ability as a genius among authors. No doubt the Dalley company will present a great performance, as each member of the organization has proved worthy of any allotment, whether in light or serious vein. At Saturday evening's performance of Arizona Landscapes bouquets were presented to the ladies at the close of the first act.

LEGACY FOR THE ASKING.

Standley Irwin Has Small Fortune Waiting for Him.

If James Standley Irwin, or Standley Drummond will inform his relatives as to his whereabouts it will be to his benefit financially. Irwin left Oromocto about twelve years ago, where he was brought up by his uncle Samuel Drummond, who now resides on Whipple street, west end. He is a son of James W. Irwin, who is now at the Ottawa Hotel. Mr. Irwin says that when last heard from his son was at Cross Creek, N. B., and was employed as a woodsman by James Humbert. Standley's grandmother, Mrs. James Irwin died in Montreal about five years ago, and left Standley, and other grand-children—a large sum of money, which is in the hands of executors in that city, and should be found his father has made arrangement with the executors by which he can secure his share of the legacy. Mr. Irwin stated that his son was known by the name of Drummond, simply because he had lived with his uncle for some years. He is about thirty years of age, and his father would be glad of any information regarding his whereabouts.

WOMAN IN THE CASE.

John Hunter Explains Why He Thumped William Marr.

"He was engaged to my sister." This statement was made by John Hunter, at the police court, this morning, when asked by the magistrate why he assaulted William S. Marr, in the city market, Saturday night. Hunter was arrested for using profanity and for assault. He said that he did not strike Marr, but pushed him, and might possibly have "touched" him on the mouth. "Why did you do it?" asked his honor. "Because I had hard feelings against him," was the reply. It seems that Marr was engaged to Miss Hunter, and after a time made up his mind that he preferred somebody else for a life partner. He admitted having been engaged to her. Hunter was fined $8 and paid the fine. The magistrate remarked that he had no desire to encourage indiscriminate thrashings.

SPIRITS WERE TALKATIVE.

York Theatre Crowded Last Night to Hear Mrs. Cunningham.

York theatre was crowded last evening by curious ones who desired to witness a manifestation of the powers of Mrs. S. C. Cunningham, a spiritualistic medium and, incidentally, to have a few words with any shades who might be talkative. In this they were disappointed as the medium called up only four spirits and two of these had no friends in the audience who cared to recognize them. Whether any of Mrs. Cunningham's replies were correct or not is not known but in one case at any rate she was very much at sea. One person in the audience sent to the medium a parcel containing a small article and this message "This was the property of my little daughter. Can you tell me where she is?" When the medium reached the parcel she at once said "I feel a condition of rigidity—of some one passing from this life suddenly. I have a message from this spirit which is that William is now with it and has contributed greatly to its store of joy. There is a little bud also which has come." Mrs. Cunningham's reply was very interesting but the fact of the matter as learned by the Times, is that the message was sent by a skeptic in the audience who never had a little daughter and who had no one in spirit land with whom he desired to communicate. The article submitted with the message was a portion of a broken doll which had been used merely because it happened to be at hand when the message was written. The medium was quite sure that she had satisfied the questioner but the skeptic left the meeting more skeptical than ever. Three or four other messages were read and in no case did any one in the audience contradict the remarkable revelations of the medium even if their store of knowledge was not greatly increased thereby. Before the demonstrations Mrs. Cunningham delivered a brief lecture on spiritualism Dr. A. B. Walker presided. Several inquirers during the demonstration were informed that their questions could be best answered privately. Incidentally it may be remarked, that the medium exacts a fee for private readings.

APPEALS IN GOOD CAUSE.

To the Editor of the Times:—Sir—I'm pleased to inform the public that our institution is being well patronized by those for whom it is intended, and many of the men come to me asking for work, and so far I have been able to direct only a small percentage of them to where they could get it. We have in connection with the home, a Free labor Bureau and if any business people of the city, who at any time want a man to work would let us know by phone we would spare no pains in trying to secure help for them. The men who frequent the home are often very poorly clad and some of them have plenty of clothing but it is in such a filthy condition that it has to be destroyed. On the strength of this we would gladly accept any cast off clothing from those who are placed in more favorable circumstances, and we promise to faithfully distribute it amongst those in need. Your's in Humanity's interest, G. P. THOMPSON. Telephone, 814.
