In the planet Mars the density of a cubic meter of water, earth, or any matter is only the seventeenth of what it is here, zand the weight is only 38-100ths. A kilogram transported to Mars would therefore only weigh 376 grams there, and a man or woman weighing 70 kilos would only weigh 26 there. At one place the road was cut through a hill honeycombed with rock tombs, which the haj said were Jewish. Every now and then we passed a tell, or great hemispherical mound, built up of the rubbish of a dozen ruined towns; for even as late as Roman times this was a well cultivated and populous country. There is now no lumber available for building purposes, and in a number of willages the houses are all built with conical roofs of stone. Where the rock happens to be of a reddish tinge the houses remind one of nothing so much as a collection of Indian wigwams, where the stone is white, as at Tell el-Bisch, it glitters and sparkles like a fairy city cut out of loaf sugar. ADVANCE IN SUGAR.

The body may bend with age
And the face may be marked by care:
Grim Time may rob the eye
Of the gleam which once flashed there;
But on the irnermost altar.
Burns a fire which will never die
Till the mortal shrine is fallen,
And the spirit retuns on high.

These hearts teach the young generations Of sympathy, hope and love, Of the things which bring very near The earth and the heaven above. The world will ever be grateful To the hearts that always are young, For the joy which they have brought, For the sorgs which they have sung.

And when to the golden twilight
Of life these hearts have come,
Shall they not find a blessing,
To carry with them home?
Will Death not bring a medley,
By happy voices sung.
To the spirits that knew not age,
To hearts that ever were young?
