MINNIE MAY'S FORTUNE.

A DREAMY, radiant afternoon in mid-July, the clock pointing to the hour of four, the scent of newly-mown hay filling the air, and the crimson billows of the clover meadows rising and falling softly at the touch of the summer wind, and one brown-winged robin warbling his roundelay in the upper boughs that brushed the dining room windows at Merton Farm—this was the scene and season.

Miss Tabitha Merton during the months of July and August received a few friends, who were allowed to share the expenses of the household. And somehow Miss Merton continued to subsist very comfortably for the rest of the year, on the July and August contributions of her friends.

Upon this glowing summer afternoon, when the cherries winked at you from behind their leafy veils, and the currants hung like ruby fringes on the bushes that lined the garden fence, Miss Merton was making custards in her kitchen.

'Minnie,' said Miss Merton.

'Yes, aunt,' said Minnie May, with a nervous jump.

'Get me the nutmeg,' said Miss Merton, "and don't stare about you so.'

'Yes, aunt,' said Minnie, presenting herself with the nutmeg grater in hand, and a fine pink color on her cheeks.

'How old are you?' demanded Aunt Tabitha, transfixing her neice, so to speak, with the twin moons of her spectacles.

'Seventeen, Aunt Tabitha.'

'Then,' retored Aunt Tabby, 'you are a great deal too old to go trailing about the woods with Mr. Harcourt.'

Minnie grew pinker than ever.

'I didn't trail about, Aunt Tabitha. I only walked as far as the Rowtor Rocks to see the view, which he said was as fine as anything on the Rhine.'

'Fiddlesticks!' said Aunt Tabby. 'Look here, Minnie, you mind your business, and let him mind his.'

'Yes, aunt,' said frightened Minnie.

'Now mind what I say,' persisted Miss Merton grating savagely at the brown nutmeg.

'Yes, aunt,' fluttered Minnie.

And she went back to the tablecloth she was mending, and cried quietly over it, she didn't quite know why.

And all this time Mr. Earnest Harcourt, the gentleman in question, was strolling homeward through the woods, with Adela Brownson leaning on his arm, while Mrs. Brownson, a portly matron in black grenadine and a Spanish scarf, was making believe to read a novel on the verandah, and in reality watching restlessly for Adela to make her tardy appearance.

'It's too ridiculous for anything,' said Mrs. Brownson to herself, impatiently brushing a fly off her book. 'I believe Addy would flirt with a ploughboy, if she could find no one else. And the first thing she knows she'll be committing herself in some way or other. And Doctor Fenton's nephew coming here in August, too. It's outrageous, that's what it is.'

When Miss Adela at last emerged from the shadow of the woods, her broad gypsy hat trimmed with ferns and wild roses, her lips all wreathed with smiles, and Earnest Harcourt walking by her side, her lady mother received her with no particular graciousness of welcome.

'I thought you were never coming!' snapped Mrs. Brownson.

'We haven't been gone long, I'm sure,' said Addy, innocently.

'Not two hours,' said Mr. Harcourt.

'I should think,' went on Mrs. Brownson, politely ignoring the young man's interpolation, 'that you would know better than to go out on such a boiling day as this, and getting as brown as a berry.'

Adela laughed. She knew that a high color was becoming to her.

'I shall cool off directly,' said she, sinking gracefully upon a bamboo settee.

'And in the meantime,' said Ernest, who was one of those clear, dark brunettes, whom no rise of temperature ever seems to effect, 'I will go and get that volume of poems that we were talking about.'

Mrs. Brownson scarcely paused to hear the retreating ring of the young man's footsteps, before she opened all her verbal batteries upon her daughter.

'Addy,' cried she, wrathfully, 'I am astonished at you!'

'You're always being astonished at me, mamma,' pouted the young lady.

'To spend your time flirting with a mere travelling photographer!'

'It's so dull here,' retorted Miss Brownson, 'and one must do something!'

'Oh, yes! scornfully spoke the matron. 'But you'll find out presently, miss, that you're playing with edged tools. You'll fall in love with him.'

'I, mamma?' echoed Adela, contemptuously. 'What do you take me for?'

'Or he with you.'

'That's a great deal more probable,' interposed Miss Brownson, with a conscious toss of her head that set the ferns and roses to quivering.

'And then,' added indignant Mrs. Brownson, 'what is to be the end of it?'

'The end of it, mamma?'

'Yes, the end of it! and Mrs. Brownson, elevated her voice with some energy.

'Well, you needn't shout, said calm Adela, placidly fanning herself. 'The end of it will be that I shall amuse myself until Doctor Fenton's nephew appears on the scene, with his three hundred thousand pounds; and then—why, I shall go in for business.'

'Yes; but Adela——'

'Mamma,' angrily interrupted the daughter, 'don't be a fool! Ernest Harcourt is very good looking, and very agreeable, but I should no more think of marrying him than of allying myself to a chimney sweep. Love in a cottage never would do for me. I have been expensively brought up; my tastes are luxurious; I must marry well.'

And all this little family discussion went on under the open casement of the second story apartment, in which Mr. Ernest Harcourt was looking for the fugitive volume of poems.

'A chimney sweep, eh?' muttered Mr. Harcourt, with a comical expression on his face. 'And Doctor Fenton's rich nephew? I wish Miss Brownson joy of the wealthy match she has in contemplation—and I shall be most happy to make my bow and step aside.'

And he put the book back on the table.

'Yet, with all the philosophy one can muster, it is not pleasant to wake suddenly to the fact that one has been made a plaything of; and Mr. Harcourt, in spite of the off-hand way in which he took the tidings, had a little sting yet smarting in his inner consciousness.

As he went slowly down the back stairs a little sob reached his ears. It was Minnie, curled up in one corner like a wounded kitten.

'Why, Minnie, what's the matter?' kindly asked the travelling photographer.

'I'm going away,' sobbed Minnie. 'I've broken Aunt Tabitha's best china teapot, and she says she wont have me in the house another day; and indeed—indeed it was cracked before!'

'Where are you going?'

'I don't know,' said Minnie.

She looked so pretty and disconsolate, so like a rosebud that had been beaten down by the rain, that our hero paused in spite of himself.

'But you have no home?'

Minnie shook her head.

'Then what is to become of you?' questioned Harcourt.

'I don't know,' again uttered Minnie.

'Minnie, look here!' Mr. Harcourt's heart, in its rebound, was very tender and suspectible. 'I'll give you a home.'

'You, Mr. Harcourt? But you can't.'

'But I can, if you will consent to marry me,' asserted the young man.

'I?'

'Yes, you.'

'But I am only Minnie,' she persisted.

'You are as beautiful as an angel, and as innocent as a white dove! Nay, do not shrink away, my little love. Answer me, yes or no. Will you give yourself to me?'

'Oh, I love you so much, Mr. Ernest Harcourt—I love you so much!'

Of course there were various criticisms when it was ascertained that Mr. Ernest Harcourt was actually married to blue-eyed Minnie May, the old maid's neice and druge in general.

'Tastes differ,' said Miss Brownson, contemptuously.

'What can you expect of those low bred travelling tradesmen?' said her mother.

Just as the argument was waxing spirited, a carriage drove up, and a white-haired, patrician looking old gentleman descended therefrom.

'Doctor Fenton,' cried Aunt Tabitha. 'My dear sir, I am delighted to see you here.'

'Many thanks, I'm sure,' said the old gentleman, with an air of one who is accustomed to be made much of. 'But, pray don't trouble yourself, I've come to see my nephew.'

'Your nephew?' said the old lady, blankly. 'Is he staying in this part of the country?'

'At this very house.'

'But there is no one of the name of Fenton here.'

'Who said his name was Fenton? It's Harcourt—Ernest Harcourt. He's just got married, and I am here to welcome his wife into the family.'

And the belle of the establishment realized with a strange, stunned sensation, that the match of the season had risen and set forever upon her matrimonial firmament.

Great cures have been effected in cases of Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping-Cough, Asthma, or Phthisic, as well as for Deep seated Consumption.

Beware of the numberless cheap and worthless cough mixtures the Druggist or Dealer may offer, in order to realize a larger profit, for you cannot afford to trifle with yourself, if attacked with the above named diseases.

L. Scovil, M. D., of Cincinnati, says; I can truly say it is by far the best expectorant remedy with which I am acquainted.

Lloyd, M. D., (of the U. S. Army), says: I have no hesitancy in stating that it was by the use of Allen's Lung Balsam that I now live and enjoy health.

Such men as Dr. Nathaniel Harris of Middlebery, Vt., say: two bottles of Allen's Lung Balsam cured me of Bronchitis of two years standing. I could not speak aloud for six weeks when I commenced its use.

Many Physicians having consumptive patients and having failed to cure them by their own prescriptions, should try this Balsam. It has cured after all other remedies have failed.

Many certificates and volumes of evidence can be furnished by the proprietors certifying to the marvelous effects of this great remedy. Space forbids the giving more here.

For Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Eruptions and Eruptive diseases of the skin, Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, Lungs, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Blotches, Tumors, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa, arising from internal ulceration, and Uterine disease, Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, General Debility, and for Purifying the Blood.

This Sarsaparilla is a combination of vegetable alteratives—Stillingia, Mandrake, Yellow Dock—with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and is the most efficacious medicine yet known for the diseases it is intended to cure.

Its ingredients are so skilfully combined, that the full alterative effect of each is assured, and while it is so mild as to be harmless even to children, it is still so effectual as to purge out from the system those impurities and corruptions which develop into loathsome disease.

The reputation it enjoys is derived from its cures, and the confidence which prominent physicians all over the country repose in it, prove their experience of its usefulness.

Certificates attesting its virtues have accumulated, and are constantly being received, and as many of these cases are publicly known, they furnish convincing evidence of the superiority of this Sarsaparilla over every other alterative medicine. So generally is its superiority to any other medicine known, that we need do no more than to assure the public that the best qualities it has ever possessed are strictly maintained.
