Nothing seemed to materially check their progress. Brick buildings had wooden cornices, wooden sashes unprotected by iron shutters or wooden outbuildings attached, affording an easy entrance to the fire, and when once within the flames were sucked up the flue-like spaces between the bricks and plaster made openings, for themselves at the top, and then roared madly as they fed on lath and beams.

EFFECTIVE ARTILLERY PRACTICE OF THE FIRE FIEND

Not satisfied with getting decidedly the best of the hand-to-hand encounter, the destroyer began artillery practice in an effective manner, kindling the roofs of numerous houses with his fiery shots. House after house in Germain and Horsfield streets caught from the air-borne messengers of destruction, and nothing but the constant watchfulness of men on the roofs prevented their burning. One volley of fiery particles, higher and of merly resided in the burnt district. longer range than the others, str. ck Mr. John E. Turnbull's factory and beautiful house at Lower Cove, more than a mile distant, and quickly wrapt them in flames. So quickly did Mr. Turnbull's stone house succumb that little or nothing was saved, and Mrs. Turnbull had to be taken out of the second story window; her escape by the stairs having been cut off by fire. This became the centre of another fire radiator, and the surrounding buildings were soon aflame, there being no engine to interfere with the progress of the devouring element.

Soon after this one or two buildings i Horsfield street were ignited, a building of two in Germain street next caught, and TRINITY CHURCH began to biaze, carrying consternation t every beholder. The flames ran up the tall steeple, danced merrily on its pointed summit, ran along gable-ends and roof ridge. I was a sad sight to see the noble old structure. which had pointed the way to Heaven for the Lovalists and the generations that have walked in their footsteps, burning to the ground. The neighboring buildings on Germain street soon caught fire, and the flames ran down the street to Notman's Studio, to the Germain Street Methodist Church, to St. Andrews Church, to the Forth side of the Market Square began to remove their goods in schooners, boats, truckand coaches, and articles of hardware thrown into the slip. The only damage apprehended on the South side was from sparks, and precautions which were considered sufficien were taken against this. But when the North Wharf buildings were on fire the forked tongues of flame formed arches across the water chasn, the blinding smoke and burning cinders weakened the efforts of the defenders and, after a hundred incipient fires had been extinguished the red-eyed monarch got a firm hold of the South Wharf, and merchants Lad barely time to save their books and effect a retreat by land or water, the fire raging on down Ward and Water streets. regular price. FROM MILL STREET TO KING.

Chipman's field stopped the eastward march of the York Point fire, after it had destroyed S. R. Fester's Tack Works in George street, and it was kept from further progress eastward on Union street. After a hard struggle, and by the judicions clearing away of rear saeds and rubbish the Chipman Hill residences were saved from the fire that swep down Dock street and devastated the rest of the block. Nothing, however, could stay its progress on Dock street, and it turned the corner, in its onward march, and attacked the Sheffield House, the London House, and other tall buildings on the north side of the Market Square. Those, with their large stock of goods, made a very powerful heat. and ignited McCullough's building and the Maritime Bark block. The Western Union Telegraph office next caught, shortly afterward Hall's tall building adjoining, and then the flame leaped King sireet and secured a firm lodgment in the Imperial Buildings and the Commercial Palace.
