A LITTLE CHAIR.

BY MRS. MARGARET EYTINGE.

Oh! the children, happy children, Smiling everywhere I go; Some as brown as autumn's berries,

Some as fair as winter snew. Some with eves as blue as morning. Some with eves as dark as night, Some with faces strangely thoughtful,

Some with faces strangely bright. And the while I gayly greet them, Back my heart returneth where, In my room, amongst my flowers Stands a baby's little chair.

But alas ! the laughing darling, That in precious by-gone days Sat there, never more will cheer me With his pretty, naughty ways.

Cunning feet placed on the table-When his noontide meal was o'er-Cup of milk poured on the sugar, Spoon and fork dropped on the floor.

Then when "mother's" face grew cloud Little arms around me thrown, Little hands my cheeks caressing, Sweet lips pressed upon my own.

Oh! the children, happy children-Yes, I meet them everywhere; But at home, amongst my flowers, Stands a baby's empty chair. -Baldwin's Month

THE LAST WORD.

BY MATTHEW ARNOLD.

Creep into thy narrow bed. Creep, and let no more be said, Vain that onset! all stands fast! Thou thyself must break at last.

Let the long contention cease;

Geese are swans and swans are geese. Let them have it how they will; Thou art tired; best be still. They out-talked thee, hissed thee, to Better men fared thus before thee; Fired their ringing shot and passed; Hotly charged-and broke at last. Charge once more, then, and be dumb Let the victors when they come, comfort to me to find that what is called the season was nearly over; for the conventional tyrannies of London would scarcely pursue me in the tour I projected; and in the provinces, at least, I should enjoy those immunities of the land of liberty, so long the beau ideal of my imagination. Having encountered my cousin, Lady R., coming out of the opera a night or two before I left town, ventured to take leave of her, and as it perhaps went against her conscience to have been so inhospitable towards my father's son, she invited me to take her seat in Northamptonshire on my way to the north. It was not for some time afterwards I discovered the invitation was accorded only to engage me in conversation and prevent my offering my arm to Miss R., to assist her to the car-

"I was just the sort of Hottentot," Lady R. had observed, "who would have telt no scrup'e about appropriating the arm of one of her daughters, though Lord Alfred and the young Marquis of Walsingham were standing by, engaged in conversation with my cousins."

In the frankness of an unsuspecting heart, however to Hurst Magna I went, and having arrived by the mail at the neighboring post town before daybreak, s'ept there, and proceeded in a postchaise to breakfast with Lady R. As I stood paying the post boy under the portico, and seeing my portmonteau taken into the house, I preceived through the plateglass windows of an adjoining room that was an object of curiosity to a large party assembled there, all of whom were watching my proceedings, and seveaal aughing immoderately, from which I concluded that I had come either at an unseemly hour or in an unseemly mode of conveyence.. This made my entree into the crowded breakfast-room uncomfortable enough, especially as Lady R. while receiving me, observed, "Your letter anouncing the favor you intended me is probab'y still on the road, for !

PRINCE WILLIAM, May 19, 1876. dessrs, McFarlane, Thompson & Anderson GENTLEMEN,-In reply to your enquiry about your Mowing Machines in this place, we would say that last year when we received your Mowers offered them for sale. We, and others who where present, were convinced that your Mower would do as good work and was not so liable to get out of order as other Machines that are running here. We have had some experience in repairing Mowers for the last five years; we have always found that the Wood Mower runs with the least expense; there are not so many bolts got the best boxing—ALL BRASS; the journa's are well fluted and run very smooth; the strains are met with straight lines, and these are features worthy of notice in machinery. In fact we think you have the plainest, simplest, and most substantial Mower running. They are not only the best but the lowest in price of any of the same quality.
