Of this gentleman, let me say better thing

were expected. He came into the House member of the Government, with three for le vers. To-day, he stands alone, his colleague having turned their backs upon him. N better evidence is needed than this, that I now stands in a false position. In losing the confidence of his colleagues, he has evident Lost the confidence of his county, and h proper course would have been-and he could have done it honestly-to resign his seat the Executive, and worked in consort with the men he brought with him. These me were not disposed to be troublesome, and M McQueen knew it. He knew too, that a honest and clear-headed men, they could no quietly submit to be tame followers, or win! at the mal-administration of the Government It has been to his County, as well as to the Province, a great surprise that Mr. McQueen so well known, and so deservedly respected as he is, should have difiled his garments a well as injured his reputation by remaining to long where he is. He had but to ste. down and out, to have received the thanks a suffering p-ople, and take from the Govern ment the only moral support it had. Had! but done this, Crawford and Willis woul have also resigne!, and no patching up b either King or Kelly would have saved from well-merited doom. As I believe this would have been the case, Mr. Editor, I hole him responsible for all the villiany that exists. I do not charge him with being a party to it for he is too high-mindel and honest. He could not but have known something of what was transpiring, although no doubt much of it was hid from his view by his Executive brothren, yet he could not but be aware that many things were wrong, and that if allowed to remain wreng, he would be hopelessly in volved in the scrape. That is just where he is to-lar, and while I think it is now too late for him to recover himself, yet if he will bu step into the opposition boat, his companions probably, by dipping him into the river investigation and truth, may cleause him the political leprosy that fouls the Government, and stinks in the postrils of the people Mr. Humphrey knows he is doing wrong whenever he feels inclined to favor the Government. He is not clearly in opposition but his convictions are that he should be. II: votes last session did not place him distinctl on either side. He was trying to preserve middle course, which he found it hard to do When the House was about closing, he felt and spoke like a man dissatistied with him self, and I have no doubt but that at the nex session he will be prepared to get on one cther side of the fence.

Mr. Pickard is an odd fish, but not a seal one. Some people wondered how Westmore land, with its big men and bigger cattle, eve thought of sending so small and queer looking a specimen of humanity to represent then His head, which is the biggest part of bin is not destitute of brains, and if he had only less nonsense about him, he would do much better. He is quick at observation an readily detrets any attempt at imposition, but almost always spoils what he has said, by re lating some anecdote, the off ct of which to make the House laugh, and at the same time forget any point he has made. He true as steel, and when he save "he won't, he won't, you may depend on it. He has but little faith in the opposition, as now constituted, and very much less in the Government. He would vote for their overthrow now or a

Mr. Smith is not altogether clear-headed in some things, and does not readily understand when he gets the worst of it in argument. I he does no one is the wiser for it. He i ready to take up anybody, and would as soon fight as let it alone. He is not a politician and never was cut out for one. His language is very strong, anreasonably so at times, and he does not appear to have a clear concep'io of the force of words. Mr. Smith oppose the Government might and main, as an really right-thinking man should.

Albert sends two men, and there is not much in either of them.

Mr. Ryan has the faculty of getting mad almost every time he speaks, and then I rolls the words out so thick and fast, and tied together that the most approved specime of a Pailadelphia lawyer, can neither make head nor tail, nor sense, nor anything be nonsense out of what he says. He is bound to the Government through thick and thin and piously shuts his eyes to all their fraud and rascalities. It is reported that he ha the sympathy and support of the Governmen throughout his election trials, and that not his gratitude is so great that he does no refuse, when asked, to sacrifice his manhoo on their account.

Of Mr. Rogers I know but little. I shoul think he means well, but as he is altogethe influenced by his colleague, who is an olstager, very little that is of value may b expected from him.

Kent sends the great O'Leary and th know-nothing Johnston. The one is an Irist man, the other a Frenchman.

Mr. O'Leary is deadly opposed to the Government, and always wants to know " at's fair, if it's honest, if it's just," that th spalpeens should remain in power and squan der the public money, and he and othe gintlemen just forninst them, who don't be lieve in them, nor in their School law. M. O Leary is just the broth of a boy that cuddle the girl, and then did at marry her, and whe is ready anytime to do so over again, barring the wife don't know it. Mr. O'Leary woul do better by attending to his clam and oyste business, than attempting politics, and the County of 'Kint' should invite him to stay a home. Mr. Johnston is a played out old nobod: who all the time wants money, and don't see why the Government should'nt give it to him whenever he asks for it. He hates the Government with all the French hatred that is in him, but he knows so little why he hates them, that he could not tell if asked. I canno afford either time or paper on this man. And now for Northamberland, with it four members. I have not language forcible enough to paint in proper colors, my opinion of the Leader in this County, Mr. Kelly. 1 would be a perversion of the English language to put the title of " Hon." before this name. Even Mr. is more than it can bear, on "Bill," which savers of cock-pits and gambling saloons, would be a much more fitting handle. His experience would be a fortunin the hands of a sensational novelist, or a literary magazine. How taking the serial would be, with such a title as " Bill Kelly, or the Adventures of a Stage Driver;" " Bill Kelly the Boxer;" " Bill Kelly the Bragart.' But if instead of any of these, it should happen to be " Bill Kelly, or the Adventures of a Highway "man," the publisher's fortune would be made immediately. Bill's forte is

That is one of the investigations the Government shut down on. The Highways and the Breways have been a great lever in 3.11's hands, and often he has helped himself y a resort to one or the other. Many a poor llow, who would have told the truth, has been silenced by applying this lever in the nick of time. Our highway man, it is stoutly affirmed, has a lien upon every contract or b weich passes through his hands. He has he better. The biggest jobs are always surounded with "extras," and here it is where he "vouchers" figure prominently. They ire turned out by machinery as occasion may equire. Who pays the piper? The Province. Who pockets the ill-gotten spoils? Our outhful Bill with the vouchers. While I m asking these questions, somebody or something says softly in my ear-Ask this quesion: Who stole the linen? Mr. Kelly is a remarkably pompous man when on the floors of the House. He puts r rather tries to put on what he looks upon is dignity. Ha! ha! I can't but laugh, Mr Editor, when I think of it, and I am only oing just what others do, when they look at im. When a member makes a thrust at the Commissioner, Mr. Kelly gets up in a bluster, and no matter how important the subject, he ells his accuser that he can satisfy him in ess than half an hour, if he will only step nto his office. It is almost wonderful what Mr. Kelly can do in the short space of half n hour, but what is more wonderful still, he ever finds the half hour to do anything in. Chere is nothing that so alarms the Prov. eretary and Attorney G-neral, as M. celly's attempt at explanation, for he never peaks without, as the boy says, " putting his oct in it." He is sure, as a general thing, to take matters worse, and is sure also to say mething, that involves his colleagues, or amages his side of the question. Usually ther Mr. King or Mr. Fraser have to speak or him; and when they do, Mr. Kelly snally takes the credit to himself of naving ained the victory, and made a telling speech. f he anticipates an attack, he has always ome pressing call at his office, and when ornered, he goes in for the half hour system gith might and main. THE PRODIGAL. Inheritors of vast wealth are proverbially spendthrifts. The golden ore is dug from th mine, refined, and coined, by the labor of other hands and the sweat of other brows Like children playing with an expensive toy they can form no just estimate of its value. When the donor weighs it, he cast into the balance so many days of unremitting and fatiguing toil, so many anxious and sleeples nights, so much self-denial, and so much care But the inheritor into his balance throws only-pleasure. The one, values it by what it cost him; the other, for what it will purchase. Like the prodigal in the Scriptur parable, he thoughtlessly expends it to gratify tre caprice and cravings of his nature. Then comes the last scene-the misery, the re morse, and the long and wearisome journes back to the home of fragal industry. Bu there are other prodigals. On her favorites To say that the performance was good, would our bounteous parent, Nature. has lavished her richest treasure-health. But the prodigal values it lightly, for it cost him naught and recklessly squanders it in riotous living. Present pleasure obscures future want. Soon the curtain rises on the last scene. We see him helpless, impoverished, -the rich trearich voice, and is a natural actor. Mr. Hatton sures of body and mind all lost, -in misery has a fine tenor voice, and plays the violin and dispair. Remorseful Conscience holdwith spirit and feeling. Mr. Maynard ex- up to him the mirror of memory. In his own reckless follow he preceives the cause of is present pain. He resolves to return. The journey is long and tedious, but if he perseveringly follows the right road, he will at length see the haven of his hopes in the distance, and Nature, seeing her invalid child afar off, will come out to meet him. and receive him back with love and blessing. To find the right road homeward, the suffer ing prodigal should read "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." Therein it is completely mapped out, its landmarks all indicated and its milestones all numbered Read it. Price $1.50 (postage prepaid) Address the author and publisher, R. V. Pierce, M.
