MYSTERIOUS OCCURENCE.

Considerable curiosity has been excited in a little town not a thousand miles from Leeds by the arrival of a genteel youth apparantly of foreign extraction, a total stranger in the place, who has taken up his abode in the principal inn, and is supposed to be seeking temporary concealment either from creditors or the pursuit of justice. He leads a secluded life, rises early, spends his days entirely alone in his chamber, dines moderately and retires early to bed, giving not the smallest clue to his projects or connections. We may perhaps forward the ends of justice by stating that he is about five feet eight inches in height, aquline nose, light hair be confronted with the gray headed the statement from a provincial paper. I august assembly got into a new quarrel and was again "A pickpocket! Not he," cried one fined 40 shillings for upbraiding in some | really to trust that I had found a friend justice room by the constable in so com. manner, evidently watching his opporpulsory a way as to render it impossible tunity to steal in." for me to take off my hat to the magis | "And steal off, no doubt, with whattrate, I was voted insolent and disorderly, ever else was to be stolen," added a and the words "swell mob" were dis- facetious idler who stood by. tinctly whispered. I had often laughed Excellency. I now began to perceive I lost my temper and my liberty! that the information of my poor parents was scarcely less deplorable, and sadly out of conceit with the country of my forefathers, resolved, at the conclusion of a three month's tour in the Highlands, to make the best of my way home-

Already I had reached London, mean ing to embark from the docks; but be fore I left England I could not resist the temptation of a peep at Windsor Castle: and a peep it was fated to be, Her Majesty and the court being in residence, which, bars all possibility of access. However I had heard so much of the majesty of the site that even a glimpse was something."

Arrived by the train one Saturday evening I contrived to see as much as could be examined from without, from the various quarters accessible; and next morning attended divine service in St. George's Chapel, with a view (is it to my shame to confess it ?) not of saying my prayers but of obtaining sight of the Queen.

I know not what instinctive feeling of deference instigated me to assume an evening dress on the occasion; for, once in the chapel, I saw that what I knew from my parents, who where travelers in their youth, to be exacted from attendants upon the royal mass at the Tuileries was out of place at Windsor. I was the more provoked from perceiving that so slight a deviation from the routine of custom sufficed to fix upon me the eyes of one of the least reverent congregations of which I ever formed a part.

When the service was over I was surprised at the highly indecorous manner in which disapproval of my costume was testified by the Windsorians. Even the police came and stared in my face as if I were guilty of a misdemet nor. Unless I am much mistaken, one of them accompained me to my inn!

On arriving in town, the first person I happened to meet was my cousin W. in answer to whose inquiries I informed him whence I was come and whither I was going.

"You need scarcely have gone to Windsor for a sight of Her Majestry," said he. "Two days hence the Queen will open Parliament in person, and will take care to procure you a ticket of admission for the interior of the House of Lords."

It was indeed the least he could do in expiation of his preceding neglects. The ticket and the day arrived, and I set off towards Westminster in my usua? morning dress. But lo! as I proceeded through Whitehall I perceived that the I shall feel strongly inclined to add, sotto ladies in the various carriages going in voce, "or omit an opportunity of making the same direction were attired in dia- slaves of other people." monds, feathers and all the paraphernalia of court dress. I had still time to rectify my error, and hastening home, assumed the costume which had been made for me with a view to the levee which I was fated never to attend. The delay had so unsettled my arrangements that I arrived at the door of the House just as the Queen was entering. Contrary, 1 fancy, to regulation, and thanks to my But I thought the exon of the guard 333 Boxes Window Glass, assorted, from 7x9 inches up to 35x50 bag and sword, I was suffered to go in. seemed surprised when he took my ticket, which, like all the rest, was a printed card, bearing no specified name. After following the royal cortege, I found myself standing nearer the throne than was altogether agreeable, for several personages with white wands and other insignia of office looked hard at me, as if cogitating the distich of Audibras:

The thing is neither rich nor rate. But how the devil got it there?

In the interest of the scene before me. however, I soon lost all consciousness of the awkwardness of my position, and so long as the Queen was engaged in reading her speech was riveted, eye, ear and heart to her right royal performance of that right royal duty. My interest may, indeed, have been a little too apparent, for as the Court was leaving the House of Lords at the conclusion of the speech, I saw an ill-looking man in a red roque laure, having a white wand in his hand address a few words as he went out to an usher of the House who stood near. As soon as the last of the royal train had disappeared this individual, seeing that I did not stir, addressed to me the startling inquiry of " whether I belonged lowing notice in a London paper, to the household?" I suppose my conin the negative, for he next took the liberty of asking me" why, in that case appeared in court-dress and had folhad been closed to the public?"

Somewhat nettled at what appeared just then an opprobrious disignation, I 25 Extra Fine Mixed Cards, with name, 10 cts., post-paid. L. JONES & CO., Nassau answered that I had come in with my ticket; of which he denied my possibility, as the exon would not have received a ticket from any person entering with the Queen. F and Droppings in Throat Disappear.

St. Armand, P. Q., Sept. 12, 1876.

Mr. T. J. B. HARDING.

Dear Sur,—Being desirous that others may know something of the merits of your Constitutional Catarrin Remembr, Iwish to inform you what it has done for me. I am Myears old; had been out of health for about five years. I had employed three or four different doctors, and tried various medicines, without receiving any permanent benealt, but continued rather to grow worse, until last fall, when I had become so bad as to be unable to do an hour's work at a time. Had severe (soreness and pain under the shoulder blades and through the shoulders, with very lame back, and a feeling in my right lung as though there was a weight bearing it down, with continual dropping in the throat and down upon the lungs. Such was my condition when I commenced to take your Catarrh Remedy, one bottle of which eased my pains and gave me an improved appetite, and after taking four bottles I was restored to health, so as to be able to endure hard and continued labor, such as choping and clearing land, at which I have been engaged the past see son. My recovery I attribute solely, with God's blessing, to the use of your Catarrh Remedy. Yours truly, Price $1 per bottle.
