THE TELEGRAPHIC TRIFLE.

In the busy office,
When the wondrous wires
Click incessant marvels
From electric fires;
Waiting for a "message"
From a brown-eyed maid,
Telegraphic knowledge
Hastens to my aid

"Mother died this morning,
Heaven help us all!"
"Nellie's just been married,
Don't forget the ball;"
"Track and racing splendid,
Flying feather wins;
"Hurry home to Emma,
New arrivals—twins,"

"John, I'm out of money,
Nothing for the rent;"
"Uncle's just been planted,
Didn't leave a cent;"
"Your divorce is granted,
Quitely—no noise;'
"House eleven hundred,
Show this to the boys."

"Send along your witness,
I'll convict the lot"—
"Off for San Francisco,
Things are getting hot"—
"Tommy's had the measles,
Gave us such a fright"—
"Time and terms accepted—
Open Monday night."

"Cannot pay at present,
Business very slack;"
"How about that widow?
Wait till I get back."
"Charlie's got religion,
Signed the pledge to-day"—
"I'll be cross-examined,
Tell me what to say!"

Thus with rapid action
Hatred and desires,
Pleasures, hopes and sorrows,
Crowd along the wires;
Plans of cunning schemers—
Loved ones far apart—
Holding up a mirror
To the human heart;

The Drunkard's Farewell.

Take my hand in yours, Tom.
And bid me a good-bye,
For the hours are quickly fleeing—
You know that I must die—
And the death-dew is standing
On my brow, so thick and cold,
While billows of terror
Sweep over my soul.

For I've been very wicked, Tom,
In misery, and strife,
And sin, you know I've spent
The best years of my life;
And an outcast I've roamed
In my bitter unrest,—
And my heart is a stone
In my poor drunken breast.

But 'twas not always so, Tom,
For in years fled away,
I was innocent and happy,
And knew how to pray,
I was taught by my dear mother,
To bow down at her knee,
In the joyous days of old
So long unknown to me.

How well I remember, Tom,
The very words which fell
From her lips,—they now ring
In my ears like a knell—
As she read from the book
That the Savior has given,
"No drunkard shall enter
The kingdom of heaven."

From the way of temptation,
She tried me to win,
But I turned from her counsel
To the warfare of sin,
And I plunged in each folly
Yet again and again,
So little I cared, Tom,
For her grief or her pain.

'Twas not long till her heart broke,
From my hard, sinful way,
Then she left me alone
In my folly to stray.—
Now memories come o'er me,
Of the days that are past;
Bitter grief and remorse
Are my portion at last.

Oh! come nearer to me, Tom,
Wipe the damp dew from my brow,
Take and hold my hand in yours
For I know I'am going now—
With a shuddering sigh his spirit fled
And he was numbered with the dead.

Select Story.

The Reward of a Kind Act.

It was a cold, wild windy night, and the light snow filled the air with fine, cutting particles—a night when a good fire and the society of friends become vitally essential to a man's comfort and happiness.

Margaret Edgarton rose from her seat by the scanty fire, and opening the door, looked out upon the night. She stood a moment, then with a shudder, closed the door, and returned to her husband's side.

"Heaven pity those who are exposed to the storm this night," she said fervently. "Amen!" responded her husband, in a deep, solemn voice. "Though we are very poor, Margaret, there are many poorer than ourselves."

The man raised his dark, serious eyes upward, and the youthful head of his pale wife leaned down to his shoulder.

"Yes, William, I tremble to think of the future. The rent due, our stay here is only an act mercy on the landlord's part—oh, Willie!"

The feeble voice broke down in tears.

"Take no thought of the morrow what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink, Margaret. If it hadn't been for misfortune," and he glanced at the mutilated and bandaged arm which hung powerless at his side, "we might have been enjoying the fruits and comforts of my labor; but it is all for the best, I suppose."

There was a short silence in the room which was interrupted by a knock at the door.

"Who can it be out on such a night?" and Mrs. Edgarton, started up hastily to admit the visitor.

He was an old weather beaten man of some three score years, shabbily dressed, and carrying in his hand a lean, meagre bundle.

In reply to her kind invitation, he followed Mrs. Edgarton into the house, and took a seat by the smouldering fire. After a few commonplace remarks, the stranger said;

"It's a rough night, friends, and the traverling is none of the best—can you let me stay all night here? A man has just told me that it is a good four mi'es to the village."

Mr. Edgarton looked at his wife, and in her symphetic face read her consent.

"Yes, my good man," he replied immediately, "you can stay it you will; but I am afraid you will find our accommodations none or the best. We are very poor and destitute, but such as we have we offer you freely."

"Could you give me something to eat? I have traveled far to-day, and have not tasted food since yesterday night. Food can't be got now-a-days without money."

The eyes of Mrs. Edgarton filled with fears as she thought of the quarter loaf of bread—their earthly all—which she had reserved for breakfast.

"Heaven will take care of us,' she said throughtfully, and rising, she placed the scanty store upon the table.

The stranger ate the bread without comment, and when he had finished he seemed wonderfully invigorated, and conversed quite intelligently with Mr. Edgarton.

"You have a bad arm there, sir; may I ask how it happened?"

"Certainly; an unlucky fall from a high building has crippled me for life."

"You were at work on the building? A mechanic, eh?"

"A bricklayer. The staging on a new warehouse where I was at work gave way, and I way precipitated some twelve feet.'

"The werehouse of Mr. Morgan?"

"The same, sir. It was a sad accident for me, but I have tried hard to be reconciled."

"Well, this is a hard life for us all! But if I am to stay with you to night, I may as well retire. It's getting toward eleven."

The poor, clean bed appointed to the stranger guest was made more comfortable by additional clothing taken from the poor couch of the poor couple, and the man in apparent thankfulness bade them good night and retired.

They, too, leaning on the everlasting arm, took no thought of the morrow, though it was to them homeless and without food. Verily, the faith which can thus sustain the soul in the most trying moments is no delusion.

Morning came, and to the surprise of Mr. and Mrs. Edgarton, their guest was missing. Gone, and when or how they could not imagine, but gone he certainly was.

They wondered over the circumstances but in trouble and anxiety of their utter destitution, the strange man was soon dismissed from their thoughts to make room for their own immediate affairs.

Ten o'clock was the time given them by the landlord for removal, and with heavy hearts they prepared to go forth. Through the kindness of a neighbor they had been allowed the use of their building for the storage of their little furniture, and a room until Mr. Edgarton's health should be sufficiently re-established to admit of his performing some light labor.

Nine o'clock pealed from the bell in the neighboring church tower—but one short hour of home life remained for them.

Fifteen minutes more there came a quick imperative knock on the door of Mr. Edgarton's house.

Mrs. Edgarton sprang to open it, and a well-dressed man put a large package into her hand and turned half hastily away.

The package was addreseed, in a bold, masculine hand:

"Mr. William Edgarton."

William tore it open, and there dropped out two papers, one bearing an official, the other a private seal. He examined the former, and fouud it to be a deed, conveying to him and his heirs a certain piece of land with a large and handsome house thereon, and all its appurtenances.

Transfixed with surprise, he broke the seal of the letter, and a hundred pound note met his eye, accompanied by those brief words:

"Last night you freely gave your all to a poor wayfarer, who now begs you to accept the accompanying deed and money, in reward for your noble kindness. A conveyance will come immediately to take you to your residence. When you are fairly established there, your friend, the writer of this, will do himself the honor of calling upon you.

Respectfully yours.

HOWARD MORGAN."

William Edgarton looked at his wife as he finished, reading and both burst into tears. Well did they know the name of Howard Morgan; it was one of the wealthiest men in the city; the upright and high-minded but singularly eccentric old bachelor. It was in his employ that William Edgarton had received the serious injury which had disabled his left arm for life, yet strange to say he had never seen the rich man, his business being carried on principally by an agent. He had now no doubt that his visitor of the previous night was none other than Mr. Morgan.

True to the promise contained in the letter, a conveyance came for the Edgartons, and they were driven to their handsome and pleasantly situated house. They found it prepared for immediate occupancy, even to the burning of the plentiful fires and the smoking breakfast upon the table.

They had scarcely had time to admire the rich taste which had furnished the spacious rooms, when a ring at the door announced a visitor. It was the old wayfarer of the night before.

He received all the thanks the bewildered Edgartons tried to make him, and taking a seat upon the sofa, he drew them down on each side of him.

He was well dressed now, and Mrs. Edgaraon wondered that she did not no

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

The reputation it has attained, in consequence of the marvellous cures it has produced during the last half century, is a sufficient assurance to the public that it will continue to realize the happiest results that can be desired. In almost every section of country there are persons, publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs, by its use. All who have tried it, acknowledge its superiority; and where its virtues are known, no one hesitates as to what medicine to employ to relieve the distress and suffering peculiar to pulmonary affections. CHERRY PECTORAL always affords instant relief, and performs rapid cures of the milder varieties of bronchial disorder, as well as the more formidable diseases of the lungs.

As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of Childhood, it is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued and restored to health.

This medicine gains friends at every trial, as the cures it is constantly producing are too remarkable to be forgotten. No family should be without it, and those who have once used it never will.

Eminent Physicians throughout the country prescribe it, and Clergymen often recommend it from their knowledge of its effects.

Five Years' Sickness Cured by Four Bottles of Constitutional Catarrh Remedy. Pain in Shoulders, Back and Lungs, and Droppings in Throat Disappear.

ST. ARMAND, P. Q., Sept. 12, 1876.

MR. T. J. B. HARDING.

DEAR SIR,—Being desirous that others may know something of the merits of your CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY, I wish to inform you what it has done for me. I am 28 years old; had been out of health for about five years. I had employed three or four different doctors, and tried various medicines, without receiving any permanent benefit, but continued rather to grow worse, until last fall, when I had become so bad as to be unable to do an hour's work at a time. Had severe soreness and pain under the shoulder blades and through the shoulders, with very lame back, and a feeling in my right lung as though there was a weight bearing it down, with continual dropping in the throat and down upon the lungs. Such was my condition when I commenced to take your Catarrh Remedy, one bottle of which eased my pains and gave me an improved appetite, and after taking four bottles I was restored to health, so as to be able to endure hard and continued labor, such as chopping and clearing land, at which I have been engaged the past season. My recovery I attribute solely, with God's blessing, to the use of your Catarrh Remedy. Yours truly, Price $1 per bottle. HENRY SNIDER

MANUFACTURERS OF THE Celebrated Singer Sewing Machine.

Perfection Means Success.

THE perfection and great simplicity of the Williams Singer Sewing Machines, have placed them ahead of all other makers, and notwithstanding that, all other sewing machine companies find their trade constantly reduced being now not one-half of what it was in former years, and give as a reason hard times. The C. W. Williams Manufacturing Company find their trade rapidly increasing. Their sales in the month of May, 1877, were one-third more than they ever made in one month since the Company had an existence. What does this mean? Simply this, that the Williams Singer is the best Sewing Machine made. The ladies find it out, tell their friends and neighbors, and so sales are increased.
