If a deduction is made, let it be on the par per day.

Mr. Coburn was of a like opinion. There should be no reduction on such bills as printing, as these were expenses that it was to any one who asks, why he supports the necessary to pay in full. The Board had a Government. He has no force of character right to talk about the pay, and he thought they should deal with that part of it, as if it was their own private business. He thought the pay per day claimed by the Valuators was King, asking no questions, but having a firm excessive, and should be reduced.

He knew Mr. Everitt to be the right sort of man, but did not take into account Mr. King's personal hostility. Subequently the Government endorsed Mr. Marshall, and then the Attorney General wanted Mr. Willis to back down, and deny the man who he had already nominated. Mr.

Willis would not do that, and this may be said to be the head and front of his offending Mr. Willis is so thoroughly out in the cold emain there.
