FEDERATION AND FREE TRADE.

The advocates of Imperial Federation (few and far between) are heard from occasionally, but without plan or principal, only sentiment and that of a very rapid character. In fact it is a British and Colonial Tory emanation, which has its origin in the "fair trade" fake. But is it not most singular, that there should be a class of persons whose opposition to extended trade with the United States, is based chiefly upon the assumption that by trading with our neighbors we must necessarily discriminate against England? And yet when our federationists ask England to discriminate in favour of her colonies, she turns her back upon them, and perhaps wisely too. Any one who studies the signs of the times should know that England's free trade policy is firmly fixed as the rock of Gibraltar. In a recent speech Mr. Gladstone remarked in reference to this subject: "The Liberals will stick to their flag in support of a cause which tends to the welfare of the people and the strength and prosperity of the empire. The Liberals never had a greater, a more sacred or a more hopeful cause than that to be decided at the coming elections—Free Trade and Home Rule."

Why then Federationists, waste your time and breath in asking for that which it is impossible to obtain—for without discrimination in trade matters favorable to the colonies' federation is an impossibility. Then why such nonsense as to cry out against a measure for reciprocity with the United States, because England is likely to suffer thereby? She says she wants no closer trade relations with us, why be so solicitous about England? Is it not all humbug? Verily we really believe she only laughs at us. Her disposition is to allow her colonies to do the best they can for themselves, and she will never throw a stumbling block in their way, even with our open trade relations with our neighbors, and shutting out British manufacturers altogether although it could not possibly come to this—for with their great wall of protection in the United States, English productions enter and flourish.

BRITISH FARMER DELEGATES' REPORTS.

The reports of Messrs Davy and McQueen, the British Farm delegates, were presented to parliament on Wednesday and the reasons for such a long delay in bringing them forward was quite apparent. The reports, especially that of Mr. McQueen, must be anything but interesting reading for the Tories. In it he says: The reports of former delegates to Canada are misleading and overdrawn. Agriculture has for a number of years been on the down grade and in a very depressed state. Mr. McQueen asks: What is the cause of this? And can I recommend brother farmers, laborers or artisans to emigrate to the Maritime provinces. In answer to the first question, he says:—from my own observations, and from all I could learn and hear, it is from want of better trade relations with the United States natural market for surplus produce. Some may say you have nothing to do with this question, it is interest of your province and touches on politics, but I hold it so closely associated with our mission and object of our report that we are bound to bring it forward. In answer to the second question, as to the recommending of emigrants to go to the Maritime Provinces; until there is unrestricted reciprocity with the United States, so that farmers would have a better market and be able to command higher prices for their produce, I must decidedly say no.

FOREST HILL CEMETERY.

The directors of the Forest Hill Cemetery company met on Tuesday afternoon in connection with the business of the cemetery which was found to be in a very satisfactory state. During last fall a drain was made running the whole breadth of the cemetery—from McKay's line to the Deaf and Dumb Institution line to a depth of 6 feet and spread out 12 feet on the top. This drain has proved of immense service, and rendered comparatively dry all the buried part of the cemetery. Two bodies were placed in the Receiving Vault during the winter, and brought out in May and interred as fresh as if only laid in the day before. This Receiving Vault will be found to be highly useful as persons become better acquainted with its utility. Instead of being subject to the terrible exposure attending the burial of a person in dead of winter amidst piles of snow, the friends may deposit the body in the Vault free from care or anxiety, and removed when the earth is suitable for burial. In Bangor and all other places where such great conveniences are at hand, the rule is that every dead body shall be so treated.

PROMISED RAILWAYS.

A year or two ago Fredericton seemed destined to be a great railway centre, several lines then were subidized and for months engineering parties were at work on the hills back of the town locating those lines; among them the much-talked of Short Line which then appeared as great a certainty as if the road were really almost completed—but all that has blown over and the prospects for such a road being built now are not even spoken of. At the same time the central road and the St. John Valley were quite as near a reality, but these roads also failed to materialize. The talk of constructing the latter two has just now been revived, and from reports which we read in the papers it will be only a short time before the iron horse will be running. We hope the reports will this time prove true—but we were just as near, and the prospects then seemed fully as promising, as now—yet it all ended in smoke. We will hope for the best, however, and when the roads are completed the GLOBE will take pleasure in announcing the fact.

NO GREAT TALENTS WANTED.

It would seem as if the United States people, consider the political status of their leading men as of greater consequence than great talents, or moral and executive excellences generally. For example such men as Henry Clay, John C. Calhoun, Daniel Webster and finally James C. Blaine are men of lesser consequence in a struggle for the Presidency than Harrison, Cleveland, Pierce, Buchanen, Grant, each of whom won his spurs by dint of party affiliations more than by talents of a high order in themselves. How different under the English system. The men of great talents in England are sure to make their mark in the government of the country and no political scheming of friends or foes can prevent them becoming Prime Minister the equal of the President of the United States. Take the whole range of Presidents from Washington down, and with perhaps two exceptions at the beginning of the century, they have all been mediseries, not men of great brilliance. But the GLOBE is satisfied and perhaps that is enough.

BLOWN TO PIECES.

A Mining Superintendent Coolly Places Giant Powder on His Stomach and Lights the Fuse.

"When I die I want my body to be scattered to the four winds of earth" is a remark said to have been frequently made by Alexander Sharpe, superintendent of the Arnott gravel mine, at Brandy City Sierra county.

There was evidently more meaning in his words than his neighbors imagined, as is evidenced by his tragic death, the full details of which reached the city yesterday.

Sharpe was a successful business man and had a happy home. Early this week his wife went to San Francisco for the purpose of making a visit of several weeks with friends there and in Oakland. She was visiting in the latter city when a telegram came one afternoon, stating that her husband had committed suicide. She immediately started home, but the shock she received after arriving there unnerved her to such an extent that she is yet prostrated.

On the morning of the suicide Sharpe rose early and set the day ship to work as usual, but it was afterward remarked by the men that he was unusually kind to them. He then went into a cabin near by and prepared a cartridge of giant powder. Afterward he lay down on the floor, and as near as can be ascertained placed the cartridge on his stomach at a point where it would be exactly halfway from head and foot, and also midway from side to side. Then taking some handfuls of wet mud which he had prepared he covered the cartridge and plastered it down, evidently with the thought of preventing the cartridge from rolling off his body should he become nervous. Men who know the amount of fuse that was on hand state that he must have attached a long piece to the cartridge and cooly watched the fire creep up the fuse to the deadly powder. There was a dull roar, and the miners rushed in only to find Sharpe's body literally scattered to the four winds of the earth. Detached portions of the flesh were found on the walls, ceiling and on the mantel over the fireplace. Although the face was frighfully mutilated a smile seemed to rest on the features as if the man had taken delight in the act.

That the self-destruction was premeditated is evidenced from the fact that Sharpe left letters addressed to his wife and friends, in which he bade them all farewell and disposed of his earthly goods as he deemed best. He had carefully posted the books of the mining company to date and had ascertained that he was not in debt one dollar. The cause of the suicide is a mystery.

Running Comments on Passing Events.

Sundry Ebullitions in Prose and Rhyme.

How the Domestic, Social and Literary World is Wagging.

The man whose motto was 'Take care of No. 1.' was awfully perplexed when he was made the father of twins. He was obliged to take as much care of No. 2 as he did of No. 1.

Lawyer Skinem: 'A burglar broke into my house last night.'

Friend: Lose anything?'

'No; he got away before I had a chance to go through his pockets.

An Irish editor, being unable to obtain a sufficiency of news for his daily paper, made the following extraordinary announcement: 'Owing to an unusual pressure of matter we are to-day obliged to leave several columns blank.'

Teacher: 'In China criminals are frequently sentenced to be kept awake until insanity and death results. Now, how do you suppose they keep them from falling asleep?'

Little Girl (eldest of a small family) 'Perhaps, teacher, they give 'em a baby to take care of.'

It was in a third-class carriage on the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway. The talk all the way had been about foot-racing. One young fellow had crowed so lustily as to what he could do on the cinder track that an old fellow sitting in one corner of the compartment thought he would take it out of the youngster.

'So tha con run a bit, con tha?' he said.

'Aw reckon aw con,' was the reply.

'Aw'll tell thi what aw'll do wi' thi. Aw'll race thi for five peawnds if tha'll gi' me a yard start.'

'Done; wheer will tha run?'

'Up a ladder!' came the answer, amidst roars of laughter.

The celebrated French poet, Saint-Foix, who, in spite of his large income, was always in debt, sat one day in a barber's shop waiting to be shaved. He was lathered, when the door opened and a tradesman entered who happened to be one of the poet's largest creditors. No sooner did this man see Saint-Foix than he angrily demanded his money. The poet composedly begged him not to make a scene.

'Won't you wait for the money until I am shaved?'

'Certainly,' said the other, pleased at the prospect.

Saint-Foix then made the barber a witness of the agreement, and immediately took a towel, wiped the lather from his face, and left the shop. He wore a beard to the end of his days.

Sir Robert Ball, Professor of Astronomy discussing the question, 'How Long can the Earth Sustain Life?' inclines to a belief that the human race is probably doomed to extinction in about five million years.

Mr. Edward Bulwer-Lytton Dickens no longer enjoys the distinction of representing the largest constituency in the British dominions. His electorate in the far west of New South Wales is about half the size of England. But one of the new constituencies of Western Australia is said to be approximate closely to the area of the whole of England.

Here is a story of Mr. Albert Chevalier. The clever comedian lives on the river, and often has to cross by the ferry-boat. One of the boatmen has experienced great difficulty in pronouncing Mr. Chevalier's name—he has tried all ways. A short time ago the owner of the name was just getting into the boat, when the boatman looked at him and emphasized his customary greeting in a manner which showed he had mastered it at last.

'Good morning,' said Mr. Chevalier.

'Ah! good morning, Mr. Shillalah!' came the reply.

In addition to the magnificent collection of jewels enumerated in recent issues Madame Patti has, for many years been the possessor of a fan upon which nearly all the Sovereigns of Europe have written. The following are the inscriptions:—

The Czar: Nothing is so calming as your voice.'

The German Emperor: 'To the nightingale of all time.'

Queen Christina: 'To a Spaniard, from a Queen who is proud to count her among her subjects.'

Queen Victoria: 'If King Lear was right in saying that a sweet voice is a precious gift in a woman, you my dear Adelina, are, of all women; the richest.'

In the middle of the fan are these words:—

'Queen of Song, I offer you my salutations.—A. Theirs, President of the French Republic.'

In front of a shop in Colerado there is a sign bearing the following inscription: 'Money is the root of all evil; give us a few roots.'

'I wish I was twins,' said Willie.

'Why?'

'I'd send the other half of me to school, and this half would go fishing.'

Ye Terrible Fate of Ye Olde Mister Browne.

CHAPTER I.

Ye olde Mister Browne goeth to ye popular theatre and heareth ye girl singeth ye song called 'Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay,' and it pleases him greatly.

CHAPTER II.

Ye next day, as ye olde Mister Browne walketh down ye street he heareth ye organ-grinder playeth ye Ta-rr-ra-boom-de-ay,' and he giveth him one copper coin and smileth.

CHAPTER III.

Ye olde Mister Browne walketh farther down ye street and heareth all ye people whistlingeth 'Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay,' and then he sigheth.

CHAPTER IV.

He goeth into ye bank to cash ye cheque and ye cashier hummeth ye 'Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay,' and ye olde Mister Browne frowneth.

CHAPTER V.

He goeth into his office and heareth all ye clients singingeth ye 'Ta.ra-ra-boom-de-ay,' and he getteth very weary.

CHAPTER VI.

He goeth to bed at night and his wife singeth ye 'Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay,' in her sleep, and he groaneth.

CHAPTER VII.

He goeth into ye office and heareth ye office boy whistlingeth ye 'Ta-ra.ra-boom-de-ay,' and ye olde Mister Browne grabbeth him and shaketh all signs of 'Ta-ra-boom-de-ay' out of him.

CHAPTER VIII.

Ye office boy hath ye olde Mister Browne arrested, and ye police officer whistleth 'Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay' as they go along the street.

CHAPTER IX.

Ye olde Mr. Browne is put in ye dark cell, and ye other prisoners singeth ye 'Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay,' and he becometh insane.

CHAPTER X.

He grabbeth a knife, and is now in a lunatic asylum.
