AGRICULTURE

Notes and Suggestions of Practical Utility
FOR THE FARM, FIELD, GARDEN AND DAIRY.

Gleanings of Interest for Our Country Readers.
Game fowls grow firm meat. Return all wastes to the soil. Sheep doctoring seldom pays. Don't overstock your pastures. Green-manuring is open to all. Early pullets bring good prices. It is better to be safe than sorry. Feed grain regularly or not at all. Cross-breeding may be up down. Growth calls for nitogenous foods. A hen with a blood needs good feed. Early beans are better than late corn. Eggs not regularly gathered get stale. A good horse soon recommends itself. Twelve feet are a good width for a gate. A thrifty pig rapidly increases in value. Slow maturing indicates long enduring. If you have a good milk cow, keep her. The soil needs accumulations from the air. Sheep are good feeders and good weeders. A poor breeder may have good breeding. Do at once the thing that needs to be done. Don't feed lambs too heavy grain rations. Timothy is not a profitable food for the dairy. Consider the conditions as well as the sheep. What never comes amiss as a food for fowls. See that no part of the farms runs to waste. The habit of promptness is a fortune in itself. Clean work at first means a clean field at last. Some old hens are better than some young ones. Just in time is the medium and safe course. It does not pay to sell off your best animals. Thoroughbred private dairymen are in demand. Give the cows a little dry feed while in pasture. Worry is as bad for domestic animals as for men. The polled breeds of cattle are growing in favor. Cleanliness is the best remedy for skin diseases. Don't pasture too closely; better mow the pasture. Eggs are concentrated food in small packages. Sick to the breed that you have done well with. Nature never ripens milk for feeding to the young. Corn is the foundation food for meat and the dairy. Full feed the year round is the most profitable. In some fields sheep are better gleaners than hogs. Sheep in good condition are rarely attacked by disease. Too much and too heavy harness is a disadvantage. An uneasy animal does not grow well nor lay on fat. Remember, whitewash is cleansing and sweetening. Feed only clean and wholesome food to any animal. The microbes are left out of the milk of the suckling. Animals as well as men have their individual tastes. Work performed at the right time is most valuable. Sell all unprofitable animals while yet running to grass. It requires but little money to start in the big business. Pulverized charcoal is pronounced an aid to digestion. Wherever the soil is mulched nitrogen will accumulate. Maintaining the fertility of the soil is of prime importance. Full feed is better than ringing to keep hogs from rooting. Allow no lime, ashes, plaster or other refuse to go to waste. Mechanical imitation is simply on the plane of the monkey. Fat is easily added after the frame and muscle are developed. Gloves with the ends of the fingers cut off are a good protection in picking blackberries, etc. A little turpentine in the slop is said to destroy worms in pigs; too much will destroy the pigs. If the producing classes were as united as the moneyed classes they would be the rulers of the land. To make hard leather limber and soft be sure it is well limbered with moisture before applying oil. Whether feeding grain to cows in pasture will pay depends much on the condition of the pasture. A machine that you are acquainted with is handier than a better one with which you are unfamiliar.

ANECDOTES, HAPPENINGS AND GENERAL COMMENTS
Clipped and Condensed for the Readers of The Globe.

Australia is estimated to contain over one million Irish people. Nearly 20,000 lb. of bread are daily eaten in the Sultan of Turkey's household. Every transatlantic trip of the larger of the ocean liners costs about £3,000 to £4,000. London's six principal railway lines carry annually over 200,000,000 people and the tramways about 150,000,000. The Director of Theatres at St. Petersburg has issued a decree strictly forbidding any hissing of artists during a performance. The daisy gets its name from "day's eye," because it unfolds its simple beauties at the "peep of day," and earlier than any other of Flora's tribe. The average rate of a sailing vessel in making a passage may be estimated at 100 nautical miles per day, and that of a steam vessel as 200 nautical miles per day. A Presbyterian church in Lancaster, Pa., gives a gold medal to each person who does not miss a service during the year. Last year the sexton received the medal. An actress was recently declared bankrupt in Vienna. She returned her liabilities of £14,000, mostly due to persons who made her dresses for a foreign tour. Her only assets consisted of those same dresses and some jewellery. A witty writer has observed with much truth that every man is, in a sense, three different men. In the first place he is the man he thinks himself to be; in the second place, he is the man other persons think him to be; and, finally, he is the man that he really is.

The Egyptian Climate.
Time suspends his ravages in Egypt, where the smallest marks of a knife on a piece of wood remain at the close of two thousand years as distinct as on the day they were cut, and you can see after twice that interval where a chisel slipped upon a block of stone. The climate there is antiseptic, and a manuscript, if untouched by the spoiler, might last as long as that most indestructible of the works of men, an inscription on a potsherd.

A Horrible Edge.
Living in the Wenatchee, a narrow valley jutting into the Upper Columbia River at a point called The Mission, because French priests years ago located there and taught the Indians, is an old Indian chief, La Pier by name, who has in his possession a remarkable souvenir. It is nothing less than a lasso of human hair, 50ft. long and of variegated colors, and is a mute witness of a terrible story of women tortured and scalped by Red-skin fiends. In the lasso are the dark tresses of women who once were perhaps brunettes. Farther along may be noted hair of brown and of auburn, and in half a dozen places of yellow. Hair straw colored and even red is shown, but the saddest of all to contemplate are the long tresses of grey and white which are twisted several feet long in the horrible rope.

JINGLES OF HUMOR.
A Little Nonsense Gathered for Leisure Reading.

Considering Mr. Gladstone's achievements with the axe, wouldn't it be more appropriate to call him the "Grand Old Feller?"
Examining Officer—How old are you? Recruit—Sixteen. 'You are too young.' 'Well—can't you put me in the infantry?'
The Ancient Beauty—Think of it, Celia, last night at the ball I listened to five declarations of love.
Her Friend—You must have been sitting behind a very pretty girl.
At the wrong Cell. Visitor (at the jail)—Poor, poor man! May I offer you this bunch of flowers?
Man behind the Bars—You've made a mistake Miss. The feller that killed his wife and child-en is in the next cell. I'm here for stealin' a cow.
Diawiddle (sitting at his friend's fireside)—I don't call this an artistic chimney.
Shing's (who is rather proud of some exquisite work about the mantel)—'On don't! What's wrong with it?
Diawiddle—It doesn't draw well.
'These'n' headed the beggar, 'I'm a chrysaltheorist.'
'A what?' asked the astonished old lady.
'A chrysaltheorist, ma'am, was the answer; haven't a cent.'
'I would I had nam' thee,' sang the buzz saw to the log.
Celia's Taker—A-y of the family religious! Head of Horse—You might put down one. My horse lives on a putie.
'Are any of the colors discernible to the torch?' asked the school teacher. 'I have often felt blue replied the boy at the head of the class.
'Tere's up,' as the workman announced when he next up the hanging clock.
The man at the masthead has a tiptop berth.
Living in the garret may be said to be a rheumatic difficulty.
The lumberman will 'split' with his best friend.

CURIOSLY CAUGHT.

Funny Ways of Fishing for the Finny Tribe.

Sometimes in quite an uncommon and unexpected way in the finny tribe fall victims to their captors. The writer has often seen mackerel taken with almost any bright object—even silver coins answering the purpose of a lure. When a yacht was on a fishing cruise, its owner was pulling in a gurnet which he had hooked on a 'spinner,' when suddenly a shark appeared and tried to swallow the gurnet, but the smaller fish fought hard to escape the jaws of the huge creature, now diving under the boat, and now swimming on top of the water. All the while the shark was making great rushes at it, and once or twice got it in his mouth. One of the men got the gaff, and when the opportunity offered, by a dexterous stroke sent the gaff into the shark, which was hauled on board, where its frantic efforts to escape threw all into confusion. A few well-applied blows with a marline-spike soon placed this curiously captured creature out of harm's way.

Another unexpected double capture was made in this way. A gentleman fishing for jack from a punt hooked a three-and-a-half pound fish, which was immediately seized by a thirteen-pounder, and so determined was the hold of the large pike on his victim, that the angler succeeded in landing the brace, although the larger fish had no hook in him.

The next sporting incident was of a somewhat similar nature. Whilst fishing in an English river a piscator hooked a quarter-pound dace in a pool, which whilst being landed, was seized by a pike of about ten pounds weight. The pike presently made down stream, where a friend of sportsman number one was bottom fishing for barbel, and ran across his line, knotting the first line fast to it; consequently, every run the fish made, both fishermen had to play him, the two reels going off at once, and both taking slack at the same time.

This sort of thing went on for twenty minutes, the fish occasionally being seen swimming about with the dace crosswise in his mouth. Then both lines were suddenly relieved of the strain, and on bringing them to the bank they were found to be minus the pike, but the dace was still on the cast—quite dead and much mutilated.

Another angler once caught a fish in a very peculiar way. On casting the fly a moderate-sized trout rose to it. He struck and as he thought, hooked it. For its size it gave an unusually strong and strange pull, and when landed it appeared that the fish was not hooked at all, but that the gut had formed a loop with the hook, which had thus snared the fish by the middle of its body.

A gentleman fishing a river one day during a heavy gale had to cross it by one of the swing bridges. While doing so his hat—a soft one—blew off into the river, and it was only a marvel that the owner did not follow it. He got safely across, however, and saw his hat floating down stream.

As luck would have it, several of his best flies were round the hat. He gazed after it, hoping it might float to the side, but to his astonishment he saw it instantly disappear under the water. What could have done it? It was no use looking after it now, so the gentleman returned home bareheaded. The mystery of its sudden disappearance was explained a few days afterwards, when it was found stranded considerably further down the river with a fine salmon of ten pounds weight attached to one of the flies.

An extraordinary catch, it will be acknowledged, was made in the following instance. A gentleman was rowing a lady in a boat on a park lake. The fair passenger held a bouquet, a string attached to which was dragging in the water. Whether the bright color of the flowers was the cause, or a fly alighted on the string, is not known, but a magnificent jack sprang at the string. The rower, with admirable presence of mind, seized the bouquet and jerked the fish into the boat.

An extraordinary mode of taking fish is practised by Indians on the Orinoco, who drive horses into the water, swarming with electric eels, and capture the fish when they are exhausted by repeated discharges of their batteries on the poor frightened animals.

But the strangest example of a fish curiously caught has yet to follow, for the accuracy of which, however, we do not vouch. A veteran angler was crossing some stepping stones in the bed of a river, when he fell into the shallow water and got thoroughly drenched. When he scrambled up, to his amazement he found a three-pound trout flapping in the pocket of his overcoat—the only fish he caught that day.

No man ever smoked "Myrtle Navy" tobacco for a fortnight and then took to any brand in preference to it. It bears its own testimony of its qualities, and it is testimony which is always convincing. The smoker who uses it is never annoyed by getting it sometimes of good quality and sometimes of bad. The arrangements of the manufacturer for keeping its quality equal are very elaborate and complete, and are the results of many years of experience and close observation.

Crippled With Rheumatism.
Ronald McKay, Murray Harbor Road, P. E. I., writes: "I was crippled with rheumatism and could get no relief until I used your Pink Pills. I am now well." Of all dealers or by mail at 50c. a box or 6 boxes for $2.50. Dr. Williams Med. Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schneckstadt, N. Y. Beware of imitations.

A Feeling of Reflection.
'Dogs may have their day, if they want it; but the night is plenty good enough for me,' said Tommy Ticklemonse, feline his way carefully along the backyard fence.
