A POWERFUL LIGHT.

46 Million Candle-Power Secured by a New Arrangement of Lenses.

46,000,000 candle-power beacon light is to be located near Quimper, France, at a projecting headland bearing the name of Penmarck, says Locomotive Engineering. This enormous intensity of light is said to be obtained by an arrangement of the lenses of the lamp. In the ordinary lamp the lenses, consisting of a number of rectangular panels, are placed in steps in such a manner that the source of light occupies the principal focus of each of them. The rays of light then emanate from this part of the apparatus in a horizontal pencil. By reducing the number of panels, the quantity of light received by each is consequently correspondingly increased. At La Heve there are four panels, the total light emitted by the lamp being triple the amount received in an apparatus with twelve panels, each of them occupying a half square. Each lens will, therefore, receive half of the total light emitted by the lamp, and, consequently, will emit a pencil of rays of a power double that furnished at La Heve. Like the lighthouse at La Heve, the new lighthouse will be lighted by electricity. The lamp will be fed by an alternating current of 100 amperes at its maximum.

Cigars at the Dinner Table.

It is the Prince of Wales who is directly responsible for the spread of the habit of smoking at the dinner table, the London correspondent of the Sheffield Independent declares. When he first began to dine out, smokers were fain to wait the opportunity of retirement to the smoking room. H. R. H. began modestly enough with a cigarette, and has long ago reached the cigar. There are still one or two houses in London where cigars are not produced, and more where one is put off with the inadequate cigarette. But they are growing fewer. It is not usual to smoke at the table where Mr. Gladstone dines, but I have personal knowledge of a case in which the Premier, knowing the habits of the company he was to meet, begged in advance that the cheerful cigar might, at the usual time, circulate.—Westminster Gazette.

THINGS A WOMAN CAN'T DO.

With a Companion List Dealing With a Man's Shortcomings.

These are some of the things that a man thinks a woman cannot do: Keep a private expense account and have it balance.

Wear a linen collar or a linen shirt waist, starched stiff as a man's, and keep her temper.

Buy a pretty necktie, Order a dinner from a bill of fare. Tie a "four-in-hand."

Understand a game of baseball. Or a game of football. Go to church and not notice the other women's bonnet.

Abstain from talking fashions. Play whist and remember what's trumps.

Refrain from drinking ice cream soda in winter.

These are some things that every woman knows that a man can't do:

Build a grate fire and make a success of it at the first attempt.

Remember to wear his smoking jacket when he smokes.

Put his ashes in the ash receiver. Sit in a chair without taking the tidie with him when he gets up.

Refrain from tying the pillow shams into knots and throwing them into corners.

Abstain from drawing the curtains back as far as they will go and sending the window shades skyward with a bang.

Use his comb without having something to say about the long hairs he finds in it.

Listen to stories about other men's smart children.

To Brighten Blue Moments.

What word is that in the English language, the first two letters of which signifies a man, the first three a woman, the first four a great man, and the whole a great woman? Heroine.—New York Ledger.

He—My income is small, and it is cruel of me to take you from your father's roof.

She (anxiously)—I don't live on the roof.

Clara—Do you know, people are actually beginning to call me an old maid.

Maud—You mean that you are just beginning to hear them.—Vogue.

The next train for Chestnut Hill leaves at 5.17—17 minutes after 5. Train now ready, on track No. 5. Track No. 5 for 5.17 train to Chestnut Hill!

Those were the words of the guard, and they rang through the waiting-room in Boston with penetrating distinctness. As soon as he had uttered them a fair young thing rushed up to him and said:

Is the train for Chestnut Hill ready yet? And what time does it leave!—New York World?

A Rising Market.

Yes, said the old man, addressing his young visitor. I'm proud of my girls, and should like to see them all comfortably married; and as I've made a little money, they won't go to their husband's penniless. There's Mary, 25 years old, and a real good girl. I shall give her a thousand pounds when she marries. Then comes Bet, who won't see 35 again, and shall have two thousand; and the man who takes Eliza, who is 40, will have three thousand with her.

The young man reflected a moment or so, and then nervously inquired, You haven't one about 50, have you?

SHE WAS A HAPPY BRIDE.

And Right There the Blithe Young Thing Had the Advantage of the Groom.

A slim-built young man in clothes of a billigerent cut walked timidly into the marriage license office recently. He was followed closely by a resolute-looking young woman in holiday attire.

The young man glanced around suspiciously for an instant and then reached for the clerk's ear. His companion assumed an air of unostentatious preoccupation, turned her back and gazed far away at a corner of a ceiling, but she was careful to keep between her companion and the door.

Ssh, hissed the young fellow, bending far over the counter in his effort to prevent his companion overhearing anything. Ssh, say can't we duck out of sight somewhere? Ssh don't shout?

The clerk shook his head. The stranger continued his cautious whispering: Say, he said, ssh I'm in a hole see? It's agin me to hitch to that she devil, see? How can I jump the game, eh?

The clerk shook his head. There are courts all about here, he suggested: try 'em.

The stranger bent closer.

Say, he continued with an apprehensive glance at the back of his companion. She'll land me dead to rights if you don't give me a lift. She's swore to give me a divorce after we're hitched, but what good'll that do, eh? he concluded mournfully.

The clerk remained silent.

Say, went on the visitor in pleading tones, I row her; out, and I'll fix it with you. Run her in: do anything; anything goes.

The clerk shook his head.

Say, suddenly exclaimed the woman, wheeling about resolutely, what game are you puttin' up on me now? Scratch out that license lively.

This here man's been keeping company with me for two years and he's got to do some lively marryin' now, an' don't you forget it. Scratch along lively! His name's Westmure. James L. Westmure, an' he lives at 260 Jessie street, an' he's 26 years old, 'n' my name's Cora—C-o-r-a. Cora—Gale.

Monroe started. Bust me if I ever knew that before.

You'll learn lots when you've married me, was the answer given, with calm superiority.

'N' sometimes they call him West 'n' sometimes they call him Tommy White. Put 'em all in, if you want to, an' charge the bill to his nibs here.

The clerk made out his bill, and his nibs put it with a sigh.

'N' now start us for the nearest Justice, an' we'll get nearer marriage 'n this fellow's been since he was born.

They were started, and ten minutes later there emerged a happy, beaming bride and a woful, disconsolate groom.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Have You Thought of It?

For four thousand years or more the world groaned, suffered, and fumed about its corns, for there was no positive relief—no certain and painless cure until Dr. Scott Putnam gave to the world his great Corn Extractor. If there is suffering now it is a result of carelessness, for the remedy is at hand. Try Putnam's Corn Extractor. It is sure, painless and prompt. Beware of substitutes. N. C. Pelson & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

The man who delighted to mow the lawn, With a clickety-clickety-clang! Is waiting, now that the summer's gone, For snow shovel's reign complete to dawn, With its blinkety-bunkety-bang!

Teacher—Who can tell me what useful article we get from the whale?

Johnny—Whalebone.

Teacher—Right. Now, what little boy or girl knows what we get from the seal?

Tommy—Sealing wax.

A Story for Students of History.

I heard the other day a good—and true—story of a little girl; too good to keep and so I will give it away.

An old sister was hearing her lesson in American history, the subject being the capture of Ticonderoga by Ethan Allen—who demanded the surrender in the name of Jehovah and the Continental Congress. The sister asked, What was the Continental Congress? and the child gave a satisfactory answer. Who was Jehovah? Well, I don't exactly know. I think it was either Columbus or George Washington.

The Conclusion.

He—Would you consider it an impertinent question if I should ask you to marry me?

She—Certainly not. And would you consider it a pertinent answer if I should say No?

He—Certainly not.

She—Well.

He—Well?

And so they were married.

Loyal to Excess.

King Oscar of Sweden once passed through a little town, which was festively decorated for the occasion. Among the rest, a huge transparency, affixed to a gloomy-looking edifice, attracted his attention. It bore the inscription: Welcome to Your Majesty! in gigantic characters.

What building is that? the King inquired.

That is the county prison, your Majesty, replied one of the aldermen.

The King laughed and was heard to observe: That is carrying matters a little too far!
