Home Truths.

Bishop Huntington, of Central New York, was recently interviewed by Clifton Johnson. The following is an extract from a report of the interview:—

"The church itself is not free from gossip-mongers. The sewing societies are frequently famous places for a most unchristian tearing-to-pieces of neighborhood happenings and reputations. The church is a public affair. All kinds of people are a part of it, and all kinds of people busy themselves with its various work. Those who are willing to work the hardest often do so because they want to be first—they like to be conspicuous, to have power. The church is an exhibition-room that serves to show off their prominence. These people are useful, their work is excellent, and the pity is that their spirit is not better and their talk more controlled. These church societies are very likely to be the places where a cabal will start against the minister. A careless or intriguing woman's tongue can do a good deal of damage.

"People make serious mistakes, too, in their attitude toward the schools. What you are to do when a teacher has been selected is to place all responsibility in his hands, support him. Don't mix up governments—that is pernicious. If the teacher says one thing and the parent another, the school is hurt and the child is hurt. It is a great mistake to discuss school rumors before the children. Don't censure the teacher in their hearing. They will go back to the school with a different feeling toward the teacher, and whatever power he had for helping them will be lessened. If you have complaint to make, go to the trustees or committee—they have the power. Lay your case before them, and stand to it—see that it gets attention. If you haven't a good teacher, get one that is, and then uphold him. When your boy comes home and complains, don't take sides with him. You've heard only his version and his point of view; his anger or indignation is pretty sure to color what he tells. It must be an affair of great seriousness in which you are not bound to support the teacher.

"That makes me think of a prayer of the elder Beecher's. Times were dismal and things were getting pretty bad, and he said, 'Lord keep us from despising our rulers; and, Lord, keep them from behaving so we can't help it.'

"It is just the same with regard to ministers as with teachers; fault-finding and personal criticism in a general company and before children is harmful. To discuss what the minister says in its ideas and principles is all right, but be careful about going further.

"We have had hard times for the past year. The notion is frequently put forward in such emergencies that we are to stop purchasing, that we must economize and spend only for necessities. In reality we should not reduce expenditures unless we are obliged to. If we do, some one will suffer. If we only buy food and clothing that we absolutely need, and cut off our natural outgo in other directions, employment will very soon cease for all workers in the useful and ornamental arts, and in whatever other departments of labor curtailment is made.

"The passion for accumulation is an immense peril to this country. The appetite for gain is not a healthy one. Speaking morally, I don't think a man has a right to be worth fifty million dollars or twenty million dollars, the income from such an amount is so much beyond what any family can spend, except squanderingly and wastefully. I don't like the monopolizing tendency of our times, and the heaping up of enormous fortunes, and the distressing poverty at the other end of the scale.

"The epoch of reconstruction or reform is coming, but it hasn't come yet. It is frequently said in ridicule of reformers that they have no scheme, no plan, on which they can agree to help us out of our difficulties. If you find fault with the present system, and preached the need of change, they call you anarchist, communist, or some other name. Well, there is no definite scheme, as yet, but we are working toward it. We have agitations. There must be such. Let us listen to them. I'm willing to hear any earnest, sober thought on the subject. There have to be fanatics, even. They all come in the order of Providence. They are not to be regretted. First there must be a general realization that something must be done, then something will be done. It will be some of the agitators and fanatics that in a future day we shall honor as the saviors of their countries.

I wish the church was not so silent in this matter. But the minister is to apt to be curtailed in his independence. He is the mouthpiece of his rich parishioners, he is the hired man of that millionaire who sits in one of the near pews. The church will lose its power if it lacks courage and dares not assert its moral leadership. The Roman Catholic Church sees this. Such men as Cardinal Gibbons and Archbishop Ireland show a great deal of wisdom in bringing their Church into sympathy with the masses, in making friends with the people. If our old Churches—the Protestant Churches—keep on preaching theology, metaphysics, casuistry, there will continue to be more and more reasons for solemn Monday meetings of ministers to bewail the vacant pews of the day before. The Church ought to be able to speak on these National topics. It was just such that the old Hebrew prophets talked of. It is not necessary that the preacher should anger his people or lose his temper, but he should speak."

Two Stories of Two Queens.

The following is an interesting story of the little Queen of Holland. It must be a bewildering relation for a little girl to be her mother's queen. It must take a very wise woman to be a mother and a subject of the same little girl. Her Majesty Wilhelmina, the girl queen of Holland, is at present only fourteen years of age, and she is credited with an even larger measure of caprice and precocity than is usually granted to less exalted young ladies at that interesting period of life. Her mother, the Queen Regent, therefore thinks it well at times to deal somewhat severely with Wilhelmina's little ways. Lately the young queen, desiring to speak to her mother, knocked—not, perhaps, in the most dignified fashion—at the door of the room in which the Queen Regent was engaged. "Who is there?" "It is the Queen of Holland!" (imperiously). "Then she must not enter!" (peremptorily). At this rebuff the little queen suddenly changed her tactics, and softening her tones, said, winningly, "Mamma, it is your own little daughter that loves you and would like to kiss you." "You may come in."

The story is pretty, but it is doubtful if it is true. It bears a close resemblance to a story that is very old, told of Queen Victoria and her husband, Prince Albert.

The Queen was Prince Albert's wife, but she was still his queen. It is said that when they had been married a short time they had a little dispute. It ended in Prince Albert going to his room. The Queen, it is said, was the first one to be sorry. She went to the door of her husband's room and knocked. "Who is there?" he asked. "The Queen," was the answer. "She cannot come in," was the response of the Prince. The Queen, it is said, waited a few minutes and knocked again.

"Who is there?" was asked. "Victoria, your wife," was the reply; and the door was opened.

You see how closely the stories resemble each other.

I prefer to think of the little queen of Holland as the sweet little girl, always dressed in the pretty white dresses her mother chooses for her, playing with the sons of the Emperor of Germany, her visitors, and other playmates, a happy, free little Dutch girl, greatly bored when she must attend court ceremonies.—Ex.

On the Dark Road!

A St. John, N. B., Lady
Who was Nearing the Grave.

SHE DECLARES THAT PAINE'S
CELERY COMPOUND
SAVED HER.

The case of Mrs. William Irvine, of St. John, N. B., was a sad one, and caused her family and friends great anxiety for a time. Overwork, watching, loss of sleep and intense agony from kidney trouble made life almost unbearable. Effort after effort with medicines and doctors' prescriptions proved futile. The grave and its terrors were becoming more realistic, and death's hand seemed to be firmly fastened on the victim of disease.

There flashed a bright inspiration,—Paine's Celery Compound!—a thought of a medicine that had wrought wonders for others. The marvellous life-giving medicine was used, and the results are briefly set forth in Mrs. Irvine's letter as follows:—

"I think it a great pleasure as well as a duty to put on record what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me. I have been troubled for the last ten years with kidney complaint, and have tried a great many preparations and doctors' prescriptions, but with little or no benefit.

For the last six months I have had a great strain upon my system from night-watching and overwork. I was breaking down; my friends said, "I was going fast to death." I resolved to try your Paine's Celery Compound, and used four bottles. My kidney trouble disappeared; nervousness and sleeplessness are troubles of the past, and my general health is greatly improved. In a word, I am cured; and I wish you to publish this so that the world can read it.

I AM GLAD in the interest of any, who may be suffering from Dyspepsia, to bear testimony to the fact that I have been greatly benefited by the use of K. D. C., when other medicines prescribed as remedies afforded no relief. (Rev.) JOSEPH HOGG.
