WILL NEWFOUNDLAND COME IN?

The leading English and Canadian papers are discussing rather prominently, the prospect for Newfoundland. It is difficult to get news from that colony which we can have guarantee is perfectly reliable. One day we hear that the people of the old colony are quite set against union with Canada. And, again, we are told that there is no strong anti-confederate feeling. Probably opinion as to the future of the colony varies among those who will have most influence in settling her future. A change in the political status of a country must always be a matter of serious moment to its inhabitants. There are business interests which must be considered. If Newfoundland comes into the confederation there must be a change in the entire imposition of duties. It is almost impossible that some interests will not suffer.

Moreover, there should not be any disposition on the part of Canada to exercise anything like force in urging Newfoundland to come in. It is not extra territory we are most anxious for, but increased population, and while it may be patriotic, and in some sense a charitable duty to give a helping hand to Newfoundland, we must not be too willing to admit, that the advantages which Canada may derive from the union, will be as correspondingly great as the advantage that Newfoundland will derive from giving up her isolated position.

DEMOCRACY.

One of the unaccountable features in our modern political life is the failure of democracy to fulfill the expectations which were looked for when the dogma of the equality of all individuals was accepted beyond dispute. The Senate, a prominent journal in England, has this to say of the outcome of the democratic idea.

The old Manchester school had an excuse for attaching but slight importance to the empire. Free trade and the constant development of individual liberty, which characterised the prosperous Cobden era, were producing exactly the results that school desired. Besides, there was a fair prospect that the universal democratisation of the world's governments would lead to universal free trade and universal prosperity. If our present generation of manufacturers adhere to the anti-imperial principles of their forefathers, they do so from sheer prejudice and not on logical grounds. The ascendancy of the masses has, throughout the world, proved to be ascendancy of ignorance. Instead of universal free trade and universal prosperity, we have universal protection, universal economic fallacies, and universal misery. With the consumption of all nations reduced, with unnatural and ruinous production artificially stimulated, and with custom house barriers raised everywhere against British goods, only unthinking men would dream of maintaining the anti-imperial policy of the old Manchester school. If our present manufacturers could be induced to take a correct and unprejudiced view of the situation, and if they could be roused to display the same political energy as their fathers, guided by present needs, there can be little doubt that they would achieve results as satisfactory. But therein lies the whole difficulty. The spirit of pessimism which, like a moral influenza, has invaded so many minds, has planted its paralyzing hand on our mill-owners. Disgusted, perhaps, with the sickly turn which the political notions of their fellow-countrymen have taken, and with the stagnation produced by a return to state meddling, they have abandoned all hope of inspiring parliament with a prosperity-producing programme, and leaving the destiny of the empire in the hands of the professional politicians, they fell back on the only expedients left them—keener competition, smaller profit, and lower wages. They are like unto the crew of a sinking ship, who, in order to save themselves from drowning, waste all their energies at the pumps, never trying to stop the glaring leaks.

RAILWAY SUBSIDIES.

A great many people will be glad to see the statement made by Mr. Foster, to the effect that no railway subsidies will be granted this year. Where railways are built for the purpose of colonization of a new country, it seems to be a necessity to grant some aid towards the building of railways. But the difficulty is to know when to stop, and a government what has once gone in for the subsidizing of railways generally finds it a rather difficult matter to draw the line.

There comes a time in every country when it must consider the building of railways to be very much like any other financial operation; only to be taken in hand when the projectors are likely to be satisfied that there will be such a financial return from their investment as to make it a fairly safe project. There can be no manner of doubt that the indiscriminate giving of bonuses has been productive in the past of wild cat schemes.

What Delicate Flavor is Due to.

As a rule, the supposed delicate flavor of fresh butter just from the churn, says the New York Times, is due to the small quantity of buttermilk left in it, for perfectly fresh butter is wholly insipid and without any marked flavor at all. Very soon the buttermilk develops the usual strong flavor, and this is found in the butter, unless it has been thoroughly washed free of buttermilk. Then the true flavor develops itself in a few days, and at first it is very pleasant, and has a delightful aroma, but this soon becomes strong by the development of the fatty acids of the butter, and gradually increases to what is called rancidity. It is best to wash thoroughly, if it is to be kept more than two or three days, but for immediate use it will not need so much washing.

The cream must be thick to churn at any temperature below sixty degrees. If it has fifty per cent. of butter fat in it, it may be churned at forty-five degrees, if it has been properly ripened by the use of a pint of buttermilk from the previous churning, kept in a close jar, to each gallon of cream, and well stirred in it. In twelve hours the cream is ready for the churn.

Driving a Bargain.

The mean man occasionally overreaches himself in a way that is delightful to those who have no use for stingy people. A London journal tells a story of one of this class of persons which is most amusing. The man went into a butcher's shop and required the price of a soup bone.

"Oh, I'll let you have that for nothing," replied the butcher, a more or less generous person.

The customer was slightly deaf, and missed the answer.

"Can't you take something off that?" he asked, never supposing that the butcher had offered to give him what he wanted.

"Oh yes," replied the butcher, with a smile. "Call it twopence."

And the mean man paid the twopence for the gift, and departed thinking how clever he was.—Harper's Young People.

DEPARTURE.

Being determined that the working men of Carleton Co., shall know more about the sterling value, and reliable quality of the cloth made from our own wool, we have adopted a new plan. We are making the cloth up into trousers, the cut and finish is stylish and they are well made, and we have no hesitation in saying they are the best value ever offered in the county.

Think of all wool trousers—good solid heavy goods—well made up, selling for $2.55. Union goods wear a year for $2.18. Call and see us—and learn all about it. It doesn't make any difference whether you work in a saw mill—or foundry, bank or bakery—grocery store, or on a farm, you want good serviceable trousers—and you can find them at the

To Attract!
To Interest!
To Convince!

Three points which every man in business wishes to impress on the public. It is human for every man, woman or child to seek good articles for little money. Hundreds have already been attracted by the splendid offers we are weekly making. Interested in the straightforward way in which we do business, and convinced that we are giving them more clothing for a dollar than they ever before got.

Let us do you good, also.

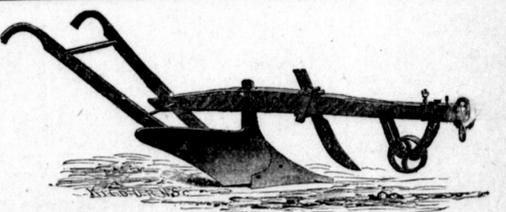

We have before mentioned our Youths' and Boys' Clothing. We wish again to call your attention to it, for our large stock varying in quality and pattern to suit the most critical buyer, and great bargains will bear us out in saying that we in this line are not equalled in this country.

Warm days are approaching, and perhaps our Galatea washable suits for small boy at $1.00 will interest the mothers.
