THE WEATHER.

If the weather is such a popular topic of conversation as it is, why should it not form a good subject for a newspaper editorial? Any subject which is popular should be dealt with by the papers.

The weather has given almost universal satisfaction, certainly, as far as the good people of Carleton County are concerned.

We, in our plural capacity, have been all around; we have talked with merchants, with professional men, with "laboring men," with farmers, and however much they may differ on other subjects, however widely they may be separate as to politics, they all agree that the weather is everything that can be desired. To be sure some of them say "they never saw the like," "it beats all I ever knew," but such like remarks are made in a complimentary mood.

As a general thing a day's rain has a depressing effect, but Monday's rain was the cause of more smiling countenances than a whole week of sunshine. "It was a beautiful rain" the people said, and the people were right, as they always are. The foliage on the trees, which had already made its appearance, burst forth into full loveliness. The grass took a greener hue than the most verdant of countrymen, and all nature went in for a regular jubilee.

It is with no feigned satisfaction that this journal finds all people so well agreed on the weather. To have one person complaining that it is too hot, and another that it is too cold is unpleasant and hard on the nerves.

We ought, indeed to be thankful for the good weather, but still more thankful that our citizens are so unanimous in being pleased with it.

HARTLAND'S QUANDARY.

Now that even ferry communication is stopped between the village of Hartland and the opposite shore, there is a louder murmur of complaint than ever, that no bridge has been, or is likely to be built. The position of the Hartland people is certainly unenviable in this regard, and that they should vent their outraged feelings upon the local government, is natural, at least, if not justifiable.

The fact is that the Woodstock bridge has been such a weighty topic for conversation and debate, has become so thoroughly advertised through the length of the land, that if a further appropriation for a bridge across the St. John in this county were now asked for, it would elicit opposition from the representatives of all the other counties in the province. A time may come when a local government will be in need of support and when the people of Hartland and vicinity may hold the balance of power, and then they can take the government by the throat, and thus get their bridge, but the time is not yet.

There is an absolute necessity of cutting down all expenditures on public works, dominion and local. Mr. Foster has refused to grant any railway subsidies, not because he would not be willing to do so, if circumstances would permit, but he finds himself absolutely compelled to call a halt. And it must be the same with the local governments. Reckless expenditure must end some time. It is hard on Hartland, if this all-too-long-delayed economy becomes a necessity just at its time of need, but there seems little help for it.

A first class ferry accommodation Hartland is entitled to, and will no doubt have. At present there seems a hitch about getting the ferry boat used here before the bridge was built.

THE DISPATCH is well assured that Mr. J. T. A. Dibblee has done all in his power to assist the Hartland people in this regard. He is using the influence, at his command, with the government, but a representative cannot have everything all his own way.

The local government, however, should bear in mind that the river is, now, rather cold and high for good swimming between Hartland and Summerville.

Over the Falls.

Mr. N. O. Strumberg of Caribou, visited Aroostook Falls last Sunday to enjoy a picnic dinner with Fort Fairfield friends, while returning to the main road with Mr. Homer Fisher of this village, in the buggy with him, he ventured too near the bank and the wheel went over the bank; both men were thrown from the carriage and barely saved themselves from a fall that might have cost them their lives. Horses and carriage went down into the swirling water, a distance of more than fifty feet, and on over the Falls to certain death. While the loss of a valuable team is to be regretted, truly both of the gentlemen have great reason to be thankful that it did not cost them their lives.—Fort Fairfield Leader.

Graham's Opera House.

Messrs. "Spike" Hennessy and "Kid" McCoy, the illustrious ex-burglars so well known in connection with the popular melodrama "The Stow-away", having for five years conducted themselves as respectable citizens worthy the confidence of their fellow men, were restored to citizenship by Gov. Flower, of New York, on May 20th last. The stage experience of these celebrities assures them of profitable employment in future, and the public in general will congratulate manager Thos. H. Davis upon having accomplished such great good to both the community and the immediate friends of Hennessy and McCoy, to say nothing of the personal benefit to two fellow beings.

Weird Possibilities.

"I'm glad of one thing, anyhow," said the boy, whose father had been talking about the income tax.

"What's that, Hiram?"
"I'm glad they didn't get up the income tax in time to give the man who wrote the algebra a chance to put in questions about it."—Washington Star.
