JUDGE EDWARD WINSLOW.

CONTINUED.

[No 62]

A pretty thorough investigation of all the documentary evidence available has satisfied the writer that Edward Winslow may fairly be considered the prime mover in the agitation which resulted in the formation of the Province of New Brunswick in 1784. In a letter to Ward Chipman (quoted in our last article) he alleges that the distressed situation of the Loyalists—for whose accommodation no adequate preparation had been made, led him to suggest to General Fox the division of Nova Scotia into two provinces, and the establishment of a separate government north of the Bay of Fundy as the best remedy for the chaotic state of affairs existing there during the closing months of 1783 and the early part of the following year. Referring to his exertions at this time, in a memorial written some years later, Col. Winslow said:

"The duty pointed out for me to execute in Nova Scotia was, of all that I ever performed, the most tedious and unpleasant. How it was executed; how far my representations contributed to the establishment of the Province of New Brunswick, how far I have been instrumental since in arranging the affairs of the government I leave to be explained by Col. Fox (who has repeatedly offered his services to me), by Alderman Watson, with whom I have constantly corresponded and by Governor Carleton."

There is abundant evidence to prove that Col. Winslow spared no effort that might promote the welfare of the new province. On the 9th February 1785 for example William Donaldson, merchant of St. John, wrote a long letter to Thomas Newland, merchant of London, England, in which after describing the resources of the St. John river at length he says:

"I am informed Brook Watson Esq. has the interest of this country much at heart. Tho' I know that gentleman I have not the honor of corresponding with him, I will therefore trouble you to communicate that part of this letter to him that respects this country, as I know it will give him pleasure, and I will send another copy of it to my worthy friend Ed. Winslow Esq., now at Annapolis who is as much interested in its prosperity, as any man existing, and who disinterestedly has taken more pains and done more for its happiness and interest than any man I know of."

Col. Winslow labored hard, both before and after the organization of New Brunswick to advance its interests in every possible way. Early in the year 1874 writing to his friend Ward Chipman then in England, he describes the towns at the mouth of the river St. John as containing many houses and stores all built in the course of the last few months, the building materials supplied in the neighborhood. If such a considerable quantity of lumber could be provided by the old settlers on that occasion without any great assistance from the loyalists what, he argues, may not be the possibilities of the lumber industry when a multitude of spirited men find it an object worth their attention.

He adds:—"The find of timber is literally inexhaustible. Take the map of the St. John and trace the river from its entrance, observe the prodigious branches from it, the vast lakes in the vicinity of it, and whence these streams run. I cannot speak or write of the country about the river St. John without making use of extravagant expressions which rather tend to lessen the weight of my testimony. I acknowledge myself to be a little romantic, but I can appeal to general Fox and others who are dispassionate and who have observed it without being so much in raptures, whether they ever beheld a more beautiful grass country, better cattle, or better grain, or more abundant crops."

The first agent for New Brunswick in Great Britain was the celebrated Brook Watson, who had been a merchant at Boston before the revolution, served at New York as commissary during the war and at the peace went to London where he was made an alderman, elected a member of parliament, afterwards knighted, made Lord Mayor of London and died a baronet of the United Kingdom. His was a romantic career from first to last (see Sabine's Loyalists of the American Revolution). Brook Watson was appointed agent for the province by the House of Assembly at its first session, January, 1789, and the Hon. Jonathan Odell and Col. Edward Winslow were appointed a committee to correspond with him. A few months prior to his appointment as Province Agent Sir Brook Watson wrote a letter to Edward Winslow from which we take the following:

"The general description of the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick which you obligingly sent me under date of April the 25th, is by far the most regular and perfect thing of the kind I ever saw; it's just the information I wanted, and arranged better than any ideas of mine could suggest, and carries more convincing proof on its face than fifty speeches made in the House of Commons from the most respectable information. You have thereby put a weapon offensive and defensive into my hands which may eventually entitle me to the honorable appellation of Champion for the remaining provinces."

When the division of Nova Scotia was determined on, some discussion arose as to the name of the new province and it was at one time proposed to call it "Pittsylvania" after the famous English statesman Sir William Pitt, but eventually "New Brunswick" was the name selected. In the formation of the government of the new province Col. Winslow might naturally have expected a position of equal honor and emolument to that he had sacrificed by his allegiance to the King's cause during the American Revolution, and appears he was emphatically assured by General Fox and Alderman Watson of his appointment as provincial secretary, and his friends in England tendered their congratulations accordingly. But he was destined to experience a severe disappointment and it was not until thirty years after he had been driven from his luxurious home at Plymouth that he received any fitting recognition of his important services. At the time of Colonel Thomas Carleton's appointment as governor, Gregory Townsend of the Commissariat department at Halifax wrote Ward Chipman:

"General Fox, not coming out as governor, is a great disappointment to Ned, tho' I endeavoured to console him with the assurance that Sir Guy Carleton will influence his brother Thomas Carleton in his favor, and procure the place he expected. We hear that Jonathan Odell is to be secretary, this we have construed to mean merely private secretary; I shall be heartily mortified if Ned should be left unprovided for."

The rumor that the office of provincial secretary had been bestowed upon the Rev.

John Odell which Gregory Townsend could scarcely credit, proved however to be well founded. Colonel Winslow failed to receive the appointment for which his talents and education eminently fitted him and was obliged to content himself with positions in which while there was honor and responsibility there was unfortunately for him little pecuniary reward. His losses in the rebellion and expenses incurred in the maintenance of his own large family and of his widowed mother and sisters involved him in debts which to use his own expression "hung like a mill stone round his neck" for many years.

THE ARMY.

Proclaiming Full and Free Salvation to All.

A SOLDIER TELLS HOW SHE WAS SAVED.

She Says: "I Thank God for the Wonders Paine's Celery Compound Accomplished for me."

General Booth and his vast army of Salvationists are now a mighty power in every quarter of the globe. Their drums, music, soul-inspiring songs and prayers are stirring up the cold, callous, indifferent and wicked in every country under heaven, and they are accomplishing a work that puts to shame the united efforts of all our Christian churches. The members of the Salvation Army endure trials, hardships and persecutions as did the valiant apostle Paul in his time. Many of these faithful Salvationists labor on from day to day, suffering from thorns in the flesh, no doubt of a like character to that endured by the great preacher to the Gentiles; but, a merciful and wise Rule has, through science, provided for His afflicted and diseased servant. Mrs. H. Harbour, of Winnipeg, Man., a faithful veteran of the great Salvation Army, was for a time obliged to give up active work owing to the agonies and sufferings of heart disease, kidney trouble and general weakness.

Knowing well that her great work demanded a strong and vigorous body, she wisely determined to use Paine's Celery Compound, after hearing what it had done for the tens of thousands in Canada. The results were surprising to herself as well as to her brother and sister soldiers. Mrs. Harbour's experiences with Paine's Celery Compound induced hundreds of other Salvationists to seek a new physical life from the same great medicine.

Reader, this same wonderful Paine's Celery Compound will do a like work for you, if you are ailing and suffering. Your friends and neighbors have tested it, and it has made them well and strong, after they failed with the common medicines of the day.

Mrs. Harbour writes as follows, with the view of benefitting all sick people:—

"It is with great pleasure that I write to thank you for your wonderful medicine, Paine's Celery Compound. Some time ago I was very sick and happened to see one of your publications, in which I read of others being cured. I concluded to try Paine's Celery Compound myself, and I now thank God for the wonders it accomplished for me. I was suffering from heart disease, kidney trouble and general weakness; and some days was not able to stand without experiencing great pain; my appetite was also very poor. Since I used the Compound I am able to get about the house and work, and can now eat anything put before me.

"I trust my testimony may lead many to try your valuable remedy."

DAINGEROUS CONSOLATION.

All Right in a Day or Two, But the Day Never Came.

"All right in a day or two" is the thought that consoles every one who is suffering from any indisposition that does not prostrate him. In the case of a person bed-ridden for months with disease of the Kidneys being asked, "Did you not have any warning of this condition you are now in?" "Yes, I was bothered at first with back-ache, with occasional headaches, but did not consider myself sick or the necessity of medicine further than a plaster on my back or rubbing with my favorite liniment. It was months before I began to realize that it was useless to further force myself to ignore my condition. The backache had become a pain in the back and sides, weak and tired feeling, high-colored urine with obstructions and stoppage, pain in the bladder, palpitation of the heart, poor appetite, indigestion, and a dull, languid feeling, with entire lack of energy." Had the first signal of distress from the Kidneys—Back-ache—received the assistance of Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, the after state of misery and suffering would have been avoided. A few doses dispel first symptoms; delay results in liver, heart and stomach becoming affected. It is useless to expect to overcome this complication without a persistent and regular use of Chase's K. and L. Pills. Price 25c., sold by all dealers. Edmansons, Bates & Co., Toronto.
