Joyful Words of Praise.

Read.

DR. THOMSON'S MED. CO.,—Dear Sirs;
 My wife having been a sufferer from indigestion and languor, was induced to try your Sarsaparilla. The result is miraculous. She was relieved by one bottle. Her appetite the best for years. As an alterative and tonic it has no superior. This statement, for the benefit of suffering humanity, we give freely.

Some Parliamentary Rules.

Never kick a man when he is down. It tends to create confusion, breeds animosity and muzzles up the floor. The better way is to let your opponent up to his feet, get him headed toward the door, and shoot him in the back just as he is going out.

Never pull your coat off hastily in the heat of argument and throw it on the floor. You are liable to break the bottle in the pocket. In rising to a question of privilege, pass your revolver to the man sitting on your left side, in order to show that you intend to take no undue advantage. A motion to table and chairman and pound him into a proper sense of his true position and what is due the convention is always in order.

A motion to put out the lights is the same as to adjourn, and, consequently, always in order. With the lights out obnoxious resolutions can be secretly destroyed, bills stolen for alteration and heads put on different members of the opposition.

Never play football with the chaplain's hat when he rises to open the proceedings with prayer. Remember he is not a member of your body, but appears merely ex necessitate, in a purely ministerial capacity, the same as he would visit any other set of cannibalistic heathen and in the same missionary spirit. If he pours any oil on the troubled waters, remember he may have saved a life, for that day, and give him due credit. A chaplain is always an important adjunct to a well-regulated penitentiary.

When you have decided to call another member a liar, remember that you must do it by proxy; that is, through the proper channel, which is the chairman or speaker of the house. You should do all this parliamentary monkey-work through the chairman or speaker something in this style:

"Mr. Speaker! Mr. Speaker! I say Mr. Speaker! Confound that measly hubbub, can't I attract that d--d speaker's attention? If you boys would only let up a minute, I'd like to catch the speaker's eye. He don't seem to know me nor want to recognize me, and the cuss knows he owes me $25 on that last jack-pot he opened last night. Mr. Speaker—ah—you see me, do you, you lunk-head? Well, I desire to call the attention of this house, through you, to the irresistible and self-evident proposition that the gentleman who has just completed a long and disgustingly vulgar and uncalled for address to this house is a white-livered whelp from away back, a man who will lie when the truth wouldn't convict him half so quick, and one who is so utterly devoid of the first pretensions to true manhood that the dogs in the street instinctively recognize in him a brother brute and sniff his heels as he staggers on between the gin mill and these legislative halls. Mr. Speaker, I desire you to communicate these honest expressions of supreme contempt to the alleged member who has just tumbled into his seat with my compliments. It is against the rules of the house for me to address him, and I'm d--d glad of it, Mr. Speaker. I will now yield the floor and call on the sergeant-at-arms to clear the gallery of ladies, as I am quite sure the ornery member to whom I have just casually alluded is going to shoot off his mammoth mouth."—Texas Siftings.

It Must Be the Best.

Rev. W. H. Madill, Alton, Ontario:—"I received the bottle of K. D. C. and have given it a fair trial, and I can say it has done me more good than the hundreds of dollars worth of doctor's medicine that I have taken." The mildest as well as the worst forms of indigestion need a remedy, and that remedy is K. D. C. Free sample mailed to any address. K. D. C. Co., Ltd., New Glasgow, N. What to do With a Profitless Field.

What to do with a profitless field is a matter of consideration by all farmers who are so unfortunate as to have such fields. The majority use these lands as pastures, upon which they turn the stock, but it will pay to aim to grow green crops on the land to be turned under. If this is done for two or three years and the land limed, it will be found that such method will restore fertility at a small cost compared with the increased value of the field.

An outlay sufficient to meet all demands and to afford the land a full proportion of plant food is not extravagance but economy, as greater profits will result when the crops are harvested.

Several men were talking about how they happened to marry. "I married my wife," said one, after the others had all had their say, "because she was different from any woman I had ever met." "How was that?" chorused the others. "She was the only woman I ever met who would have me." And there was a burst of applause.—Detroit Free Press.

NOTICE.

To the Heirs, Executors and Administrators of William Skillenlate of the Town of Woodstock in the County of Carleton, and Mary Ann Skillen, his wife, both now deceased, and all others whom it may in anywise concern:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain Indenture of Mortgage bearing date the Fourteenth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, and made between the said William Skillen of the Town of Woodstock, in the County of Carleton, Province of New Brunswick, gentleman, and Mary Ann, his wife, (both now deceased) of the one part and Louisa Fisher of the same place, widow, of the other part; and duly recorded in Book A. Number Three, of Carleton County Records on pages 387, 388 and 389 on the Sixteenth day of April, A. D. 1883, there will, for the purpose of satisfying the moneys secured by the said Indenture of Mortgage, default having been made in the payment thereof, be sold at Public Auction, in front of the office of Hartley & Carvell, Barristers-at-Law, in the said Town of Woodstock, ON THURSDAY the TWENTY-NINTH DAY of the MONTH of AUGUST NEXT, at the hour of three of the clock in the afternoon, the Lands and Premises mentioned and described in the said Indenture of Mortgage as follows:—

"All that certain leasehold lot, piece or parcel of land and premises situate, lying and being in the Town of Woodstock and County aforesaid on the North side of the Meduxnakik River, being part and parcel of a lot of land leased and assigned by one Hugh Harrison and George Jewett to one James Grover by a lease dated on or about the twentieth day of April one thousand eight hundred and forty six, and more particularly described as follows, that is to say, commencing on the western side of the main highway at the north east corner of the said whole lot so leased by said Harrison and Jewett to said James Grover, thence westerly along the northern boundary line of said whole lot one hundred and twenty feet, thence southerly and parallel with said highway forty-two feet, thence easterly in a parallel line with the northern boundary of said whole lot so leased by said Harrison and Jewett to the said James Grover one hundred and twenty feet to the place of beginning, being part of land and premises mentioned in the original lease from one James Grover to one Broadstreet Tompkins and part of that piece or parcel of land mentioned in an assignment from Charles Connell to John T. Allen, and subsequently assigned to the said Mary Ann Skillen by Indenture registered in Book Z. No. 2, said Carleton County Records on pages 45 and 46 the twenty second day of May A. D. 1892." Together with the buildings thereon and the appurtenances thereto belonging for and during and until the full end and expiration of the term of years in said original lease of said premises specified.

Dated this twentieth day of July A. D. 1895.

Military Lessons of the Chino-Japanese War.

Japan has leaped, almost at one bound, to a place among the great nations of the earth. From the very first Japan pushed the war with vigor, and her armies and her navy were handled with consummate ability. The issue was practically decided by two battles, one upon the land at Ping Yang on September 15 and 16, and the other upon the water off the Yalu on September 17. It does not follow as a natural conclusion from the results of this struggle that the Chinese are, as a people, incapable, under proper leadership and proper organization, of waging a great war. The disparity between the land forces of these two countries in training, equipment, arms, and in other respects was so great as to render it almost impossible to institute any comparison between this war and other wars, yet it should not be forgotten that quite often where the difference in these regards was not so notable, as in several of Napoleon's campaigns, one or two signal victories destroyed the power and struck a terror into the hearts of armies that greatly outnumbered, and sometimes absolutely ended, all further resistance. Within the memory of the present generation occurred a war between two of the greatest nations of the earth that teaches, in as striking a manner as does the struggle we are considering, the value of thorough preparation.

China had in this war a chance, and only one chance, to win, and that lay in her fleet. The ships of China, including armament, were, in offensive and defensive power, superior to those of Japan. Both the Chinese and Japanese fleets were modern. The Japanese navy was, however, like the Japanese people, one organized body. The Chinese navies were several independent organizations, each lacking in drill and discipline. It was apparent from the beginning that the control of the sea was vital to China, and on the sea was her only chance. The action off Yalu pronounced the doom of all unnecessary woodwork on naval vessels, and all navies are now dispensing with wood as far as possible.

There is nothing, so far as known at this writing, in the recent treaty of peace to prevent China from preparing herself in the near future for another struggle with Japan, just as France has been for twenty years putting herself in readiness for another possible test of strength with Germany. What if this giant nation should arouse herself, and through the influence of some great leader, shake together her loosely-jointed limbs, as Bismarck under William welded the disjointed German state into one? Her strength lies in three hundred and fifty millions of people, singularly patient, wonderfully industrious, and capable in a remarkable degree of enduring hunger and cold. United they could accomplish almost any result. If China begins to gird up her loins, Japan will respond, and indeed whatever may or may not happen in Asia, it may be confidently predicted that Japan will immensely increase her naval resources. She will not be slow to find in the events of the recent past many reasons for this course.—Hilary A. Herbert, in "North American Review."

Education and Crime.

Since 1870 the number of children in English schools has increased from 1,500,000, to 5,000,000, and the number of persons in English prisons has fallen from 12,000 to 5,000. The yearly average of persons sentenced to penal servitude for aggravated crimes has decreased from 3,000 to 800, while juvenile offenders have fallen from 14,000 to 5000. Some enthusiastic believers in the theory that as education is enlarged crime is decreased insist that the smaller percentage is due to the greater percentage of persons who have enjoyed the benefit of the instruction imparted in the schools.

The experience on one side of the English channel, however, is curiously at variance with the experience on the other side. In France the criminal statistics and the statements of the magistrates show that as schools have been opened prisons have been filled, and that the diffusion of education has been accompanied apparently with an increase of crime, especially juvenile crime. Keeping children in school ought, apparently, to some extent keep them from the commission of petty offenses by lessening opportunity; but if this be the case, the same effect should be produced in France as in England. A French journal offers the explanation that in France, as under the republic, education is simply intellectual instruction, while in England there is not only instruction but training; moral and religious influences are brought to bear upon the minds of the young.

There is not much soundness in Victor Hugo's contention that when you build a schoolhouse you close the door of a jail. The people of no other country spend more money for education than the people of the United States; but crime has more than kept pace with instruction, and it is worth our while to consider whether this result may not be in some measure due to the quality of the teaching.—Minneapolis Times.
