VER'S Cherry Pectoral

"I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs, and I did what is often done in such cases, neglected it. I then consulted in such cases, neglected it. I then consulted a doctor, who found, on examining me, that the upper part of the left lung was badly affected. The medicines he gave me did not seem to do any good, and I determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking a few doses my trouble was relieved, and before I had finished the bottle I was cured."

April 17th, 1895. E. M. BOYER, AGENT. Up to Date Fashions.

Since my last chat with my friends in Canada I have been wandering, not, I confess, in quest of beautiful scenery and better climes to improve my health, but of brilliant society shows in various parts of France and England. These have always a great charm for me, and this year I have had no reason to be disappointed, for my lot has been cast in very pleasant places so far. But I am going to chat about smart clothes, of which I have seen quite a profusion. During my sojourn at Trouville and one or two other French health resorts of importance I have been struck with the intense smartness of French ladies as compared with English women's attire at similar places in England as a rule, for, of course I am not comparing the sartorial achievements I saw at Cowes with anything seen in France. I refer to the getup of the French woman at the seaside. There is a shade of coquetry and poetry, too, in some of the frocks one sees, which are often not so expensive as similar gowns in England, and the great charm in them is that, although they may be termed useful garments, this quality does not become so obtrusive as to be objectionable to good taste. For morning wear bright colors were much in evidence, while for the casinos and evening dress everything in the shape of a gown was attractively pretty. The plainest of beautiful cut skirts, with corsages set off with frills of mousseline de soie and pretty lace, with collar bands and waist finished with a bright color in velvet to contrast with the predominant hue of the dress. Some of the materials were lovely-the moire nacree, to wit, and the new makes of mohair; some of these are ribbed, and, I am told, will be much worn in the coming autumn season.

The hats I noted at Trouville were profusely adorned with plisse muslin, with a bright ribbon bow at the back or side to to heighten the picturesqueness. With all the toilettes, whether for the plage or the casino, the correct chassure and gloves were never forgotten. How many pretty gowns are utterly spoiled because women forget that to be bien gautee and bien chausse are the two finishing touches to the toilette. One does not miss this at Cowes, for there the thing is complete in every sense of the word, and it is only when one beholds such an assemblage of beautiful tailor-made costumes that we realize the true meaning of

The end of the present month I am going to Paris, and shall have somewhat to relate about my visit to that city another time. For the moment, I am in London, which, by the way, is not quite empty yet, owing to the interesting fact that many people are kept in town because of the re-assembling of parliament. It is quite astonishing what a difference such an event makes to the west-end modiste at this season of the year; at least, so they inform me, and very pleased I am. My present occupation is getting my owm garments ready for several special occasions, one of which is my visit to Kilkenny, whence I intend to go on to Dublin in order to be present at the State entry of the New Lord Lieutenant and Lady Cadogan on the 22nd inst., which promises to be a very smart affair. Indeed the appointment of Lord

Cadogan augurs well for the future of Ireland. Be it so. I have not got a long purse, but a dressmaker who can "set me up" to the best advantage for the prices I can afford to pay for my gowns; and as I think some of my readers may like to know of a modiste who not only does the very best Bond street work but is also established at 14 Old Boud street, London, England. Over Messrs. Trufit's the famous hairdressers, I am going to talk about Madame Bronte, who has got not only plenty of ideas but has the great quality of not refusing to amalgamate these with the whims and fancies of her large clientele. I had seen some very smart things at 14 Old Bond street in the early part of the season, and I then made up my mind that I would give this modiste a trial the first opportunity that offered. I have accordingly recommended her to several acquaintances, and she is making me a very smart reception gown in deep old rose satin entirely veiled in black broche gauze of very handsome design. The corsage is cut in a V in front and the neck is surrounded with a cascade of jet and black mousseline de soie, which crosses to the left side of the waist and there unites itself with a sash of exquisite ribbon, fringed with jet. She is equally successful with tailor-made garments, and I had a very handsome blue travelling or day costume made here, I wear a blue and white silk front to this gown, and the coat is lined with silk to correspond, while the cut of the latter is very smart, indeed, with the short, full basque and revers turned back with black moire antique. I have also a light cloth waist-coat I can wear with the same dress, and Louis Seize bow at neck in black plisse satin. A dress for another climate I saw here was in green floral taffeta glace; the godet skirt was trimmed with white satin, outlined with lace frillings. This same garniture was carried up each side of jupeen baby rope. The corsage had a yoke and stomacher-like tront, framed in the trimming, and had, in harmony with the sleeves, an 1830 effect. A black satin costume de visite pleased me much. It had a plain skirt, but full-pleated bodice, with centre of front in jewelled embroidered guipure. Bretelles of the same on grass lawn, finished with miniature buttons, gave a very unique cachet. As blouses are still much

There is everything here to please the most fastidious of young mothers; indeed there is a sort of fascination about the children's things here which tells one that every new idea about them emanates from a designer who dearly loves her work. Indeed, Madame Henriette does delight in her dainty novelties for the little ones. But Henriette does not only work for the children, but for their mothers, and she busies herself much with matinees jupons and smart lingerie of every description. Her millinery for the young is very lovely, and she is just now busy with felt hats, as well as sailors, for the present season. This house is under very distinguished patronage, and is most reliable, while the prices are very moderate indeed. Of other things more will be said anon. Cor. in Toronto Globe.

15 Years of Itching.

Wm. Golding, commercial traveller, 30 Estherst. Toronto, says: For 15 years I suffered untold misery from Itching Piles, sometimes called pin worms. Many and many weeks have I had to lay off the road from this trouble. I tried eight other pile ointments and so called remedies with no permanent relief to the intense itching and stinging, which irritated by scratching would bleed and ulcerate. One half a box of Chase's Ointment cured me completely.

Will Fatten Them in Manitoba.

Mr. Thomas Crawford, M. L. A., of the firm of Crawford & Hunnisett, cattle dealers, has made a contract with a ranching company in the Northwest, controlled by the Allans of Montreal, to deliver to them 2000 steers in the Province of Ontario, on the line of the C. P. R., for transportation to their ranch in Manitoba, for the purpose of fattening. Mr. Crawford is now making arrangements to buy these steers in different portions of the province, and will give on the average $19 and $20 per head. They must be at least yearlings, and two-year-olds would be preferred. These cattle will be taken to the Northwest and fed there for two years, when they will be sold for 4-year-olds to the English and Eastern markets. This is a comparatively new industry, but it is likely to expand. The ranchers in the Northwest have fattened most of the stock they have in hand, and are short in the way of young animals, and find it cheaper under present circunistances to replenish their herds in Ontario, rather than to breed them. Mr. Crawford stated to The World that he thought this industry might be greatly expanded, and said it would have an important bearing on the future of the farming industry of both provinces. There is an unusual supply of good feed in the ranching country this year. -Toronto World.

Temperance and Railroading.

The railroads of the country are becoming the most effective champions of the temperance cause says the Railway Agent. On most of the roads, at the present time, knowledge that an employee touches strong drink, in any form and at any time, is sure to cost him his position. Recently the Baltimore & Ohio discharged some trainmen-not for drunkenness, for they were sober men; but because it was understood that they took a glass now and then. A policy of this nature s severe, but it only needs a moment's thought to perceive that it is founded in reason. The railroad business is one of exceeding responsibility. The safety of life and property is constantly in the keeping of those who carry on this business. Mental clearness is all important in the performance of its duties, and strong drink tends to the confusion of the faculties. It is true that some men may use alcoholic beverages in such moderation as not to injure their efficiency; but the instances are rare, and it is hard to draw the line. The railroads are dealing with the matter in the most practical way of meeting it by instituting the rigid policy of having only those men in their service who "touch not, taste not, handle not."

Prompt Relief.

Rev. Thos. E. Archer, Saltsprings Island, B. C.: "From the package of K. D. C. you sent me, a quarter of which I have used, I can say with truth that I never tried anything that so quickly relieved the pains consequent upon indigestion. I shall always be pleased to recommend your cure to all and every person inclined to dyspepsia."

A Remarkable Railroad Accident.

A cablegram from Kobe, Japan, reports a most unusual railroad accident in which a large number of Japanese soldiers lost their lives. A train of twenty-three cars was conveying a detachment of Japanese soldiers, who were returning from China, where they had taken part in the military operations. A heavy storm was raging and as the train was running along the sea wall on which the tracks approaching the city named are laid, an immense wave leaped over the wall, separating the train and derailing the engine and eleven cars, which plunged off the wall into the bay. Most of the men in the cars were drowned. The accident occurred at about 1 o'clock a. m., and the night was worn, young ladies may like to know that pitch dark. The sea was running so high Madame Bronte supplies skirts to wear with that it was impossible to render any assistthe latter from 3 1-2 guineas, lined silk. DANGEROUS CONSOLATION.

All Right in a Day or Two, But the Day Never Came.

"All right in a day or two" is the thought that consoles every one who is suffering from any indisposition that does not prostrate him. In the case of a person bedridden for months with disease of the Kidneys being asked, "Did you not have any warning of this condition you are now in?"
"Yes, I was bothered at first with backache, with occasional headaches, but did not consider myself sick or the necessity of medicine further than a plaster on my back or rubbing with my favorite liniment. It was months before I began to realize that it was useless to further force myself to ignore my condition. The backache had become a pain in the back and sides, weak and tired feeling, high-colored weak and tired feeling, high-colored urine with obstructions and stoppage, pain in the bladder, palpitation of the heart, poor appetite, indigestion, and a dull, languid feeling, with entire lack of energy." Had the first signal of distress from the Kidneys—Back-ache—received the assistance of Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills the after state of misery and suffer-Pills, the after state of misery and suffering would have been avoided. A few doses dispel first symptoms; delay results in liver, heart and stomach becoming affected. It is useless to expect to overcome this complication without a persistent and regular use of Chase's K. and L. Pills. Price 25c., sold by all dealers. Edmanson. Bates & Co., Toronto.
