JUDGE EDWARD WINSLOW

AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

CONTINUED.

[No 63]

Judge Winslow's private letters, many of which are still in existence, afford pleasing glimpses of his domestic life. He was a devoted husband and a kind and indulgent father. His family included in all, six sons and five daughters. The oldest son Murray was sent to England in the year 1784 soon after the arrival of the family in Nova Scotia, where he remained a few years at school. He spent a roving and adventurous life which was brought to a close in one of the engagements on the Canadian Lakes with the Americans in the spring of 1814. He was serving at the time as lieutenant on board Captain Barclay's ship and was killed in action.

Edward Winslow jr., was a very worthy and excellent young man and his fathers letters to him are couched in the most affectionate terms. When quite young he left home to enter the service of the East India company and was purser on board the ship Cumberland in 1816. He afterwards engaged in business at St. John where he unfortunately was drowned.

We shall presently have something to say of a third son John Francis Wentworth Winslow, the first sheriff of Carleton County, but before so doing it will be best to bring our sketch of Judge Winslow to a close. After his appointment to the bench 1807 the judge brought to bear upon his office the same industry ability and fidelity that had marked his course in other spheres of duty. By the exertions of Judge Upham (who went to England for the purpose in 1808) the salaries of the Judges of New Brunswick were increased to $2,000 per annum. This proved very acceptable to Judge Winslow who writes to his son Edward, Oct. 25, 1809, "Since you left me I have paid off £400 or £500 of the old debts that tormented me so and I hope if I live to get rid of the remainder."

From this time until the end of his life Judge Winslow lived for the most part quietly at his country residence proceeding to town every day when court was sitting and attending also the meetings of the Executive Council. He suffered much at times from attacks of gout. On Monday November 25, 1811, he writes, "At present I am free from that tormenting complaint, and am surrounded by my five cheerful daughters in my comfortable habitation at Kingsclear. My duty on the bench is performed with as much punctuality as my health will allow. * * I wrote you some time ago and suggested to you that I am under the indispensable necessity of procuring some kind of carriage to convey me from my house to town. My limbs and particularly my knees are so crippled that I cannot mount a horse or ride without excruciating pain, and if the weather is wet I am very often prevented from attending my duty at the supreme court for two or three days together, a circumstance which, considering the liberal salaries we receive, is the source of great concern to me." Judge Winslow's loyalty to British institutions and dislike of republicanism continued unabated throughout his career. On one occasion he wrote in a letter to his son:

"I conceive it impossible that the British government can longer endure the insolent equivocation and provoking threats of these Americans who are just peeping from their shell and scarcely deserve the name of a nation." He adds, "I know not in what manner a war would effect us. An invasion of this province would be a bad speculation. They certainly would get a few hard knocks and I cannot discern what else they'd be likely to acquire."

Judge Winslow was a man of generous nature, warm hearted and impulsive and very outspoken in his condemnation of conduct he considered not manly and straight forward. He was a sincere friend and a sturdy antagonist, yet in disposition inclined to be charitable and forgiving. When, for example, he lost his position as Surrogate General through the action of Chief Justice Ludlow, he was highly offended, and the personal differences that ensued rendered their relations particularly delicate, in the year 1808 when Winslow was for a short time placed at the head of the government of the province as president and commander-in-chief, and when as a consequence Chief Justice Ludlow occupied a subordinate position for the time being. But such was the tact and good sense displayed by Winslow that the Chief Justice stated emphatically that his conduct as president and commander-in-chief met his most explicit approbation, and that moreover, he had displayed toward himself (the Chief Justice) "proofs of unexampled candor and magnanimity." Upon the Chief Justice's death, shortly afterwards, Winslow writes in a letter to his son that "his venerable and truly amiable widow in a manner which excited sensations that can never be described, transferred to me the Chief Justice's elegant silk robes, bands, etc., and asked me to wear them for her husband's sake."

Judge Winslow's health gradually failed him but so long as his strength permitted he was zealous in the discharge of his professional duties. He died after a short illness on the 13th May 1815, aged 69 years, surrounded by his daughters and his son, Wentworth, who had then but recently returned from the war in Upper Canada.

We now turn to sketch briefly the career of the first sheriff of the County of Carleton.

John Francis Wentworth Winslow was born at Kingswood in the parish of Kingsclear, a short distance above Fredericton, in the year 1793. He was named after his father's friend and patron, Sir John F. Wentworth, surveyor of the King's woods in North America, and at one time Lieut. Governor of Nova Scotia. He was a clever boy at school as appears from the fact of his having been employed as his father's amanuensis when only nine years of age; writing on one occasion at his father's dictation a letter of about 1,500 words to the Hon. Ward Chipman in a very creditable hand and with scarcely a mistake in spelling.

Eugene Field's Devotion.

Speaking of Eugene Field, The Central Christian Advocate says:

Mr. Field in his better moments, gave utterance to religious aspirations in poetry which are singularly reverent and devout, while here and there in the books of the departed singer there are prayers in versified form which are singularly suitable to be breathed forth in view of death and the issues which lie beyond the grave. For example, how apt is this plea:

"I hear thy voice, dear Lord,
Aye, though the sighing winds be still,
Though hushed the tumult of the deep,
My fainting heart with anguish chilled
By thy assuring tone is thrilled,
'Fear not, and sleep.'

"Speak on, speak on, dear Lord!
And when the last dread night is near,
With doubts and fears and terrors wild,
Oh, let my soul expiring hear
Only these words of heavenly cheer,
'Sleep well, my child!'

Again, in a dainty piece, "At the Door," after telling of the "timorous baby knocking," at his study door and finding admittance there, he goes on to say:

"Who knows but in Eternity,
I, like a truant child, shall wait
The glories of a life to be
Beyond the heavenly Father's gate?"

"And will that heavenly Father heed
The truant's supplicating cry,
As at the outer door I plead,
'Tis I, oh Father, only I?'

Surely there were breathings of the better life in the poet's soul when he wrote lines like the above, and when he rendered into English verse the twenty-third Psalm:

"My Shepherd is the Lord, my God—
There is no want I know;
His flock he leads in verdant meads,
Where tranquil waters flow.

"He doth restore my fainting soul
With His divine caress,
And when I stray, He points the way
To paths of righteousness.

"Yea, though I walk the vale of death,
What evil shall I fear?
Thy staff and rod are mine, O God,
And thou, my shepherd near!

"Mine enemies behold the feast
Which my dear Lord hath spread;
And lo! my cup he filleth up,
With oil anoints my head.

"Goodness and mercy shall be mine
Unto my dying day;
Then will I bide at His dear side
Forever and for aye!"

Money No Object.

The amount of money sufferers from catarrh will spend in attempting to cure that foul and disagreeable disease is almost incredible. J. W. Jennings, of Gifford, Ont., says: "I spent between $200 and $300 consulting doctors; I tried all the 'treatments' without benefit. One box of Chase's Catarrh Cure did me more good than all the remedies. Chase's Cure, with improved blower, 25c. It cures."

The Unreliability of Proverbs.

A visitor was lamenting the waywardness of a young friend, and concluded by saying: "After all, it but proves how true are our proverbs, 'One man can take a horse to water, but twenty men can't make him drink.'"

"You can't prove anything by a proverb," answered the lively girl who listened. "Or, rather, you can prove anything upon earth you wish. Here's a proverb that answers yours back, 'A bird that can sing and won't sing must be made to sing.'"

"Try it again," laughed the first speaker.

"A rolling stone gathers no moss." "Easy enough," answered her companion.

"A sitting hen never gets fat." When you tell me, 'A penny saved is a penny earned,' I answer, 'You may be penny wise and pound foolish.' And if you say, 'Speech is silver, but silence is golden,' I can reply, 'A word is better than a wink—to a blind horse.'"

"And what do you say to this?" asked the other, dumfounded. "Proverbs are the wisdom of nations."

"Easy enough," restored the other. "Borrowed wisdom is too cheaply got."

Keswick Cheese.

Councillor W. H. Lawrence, of Keswick, was in the city to-day, making arrangements for the shipment of 100 cheese from the Keswick creamery to Liverpool, England,

THAT ACHING HEAD.

What Causes It and How Overcome.

How often the remark, "Oh, my head aches," and there are so many varieties of aches and pains the head is subject to all along the line from the dull and heavy and oppressed feeling over the eyes to the persistent, racking and torturing misery of Sick Headache. The cause is in most cases the same, the overflow of poisonous uric acid is not extracted from the blood by the Kidneys, and accumulating in the blood, causes high and irregular pulse, headaches, mental depression and nausea. Chase's K. & L. Pills tone and restore the Kidneys, excrete poisonous matter from the blood, sending it on its way pure and health-giving, curing Headache, and removing all the attending symptoms from its wake. Mrs. G. Bird, Harrison, Ont., while attending the 1894 Fall Exhibition at Toronto, was taken very ill with Sick Headache and dizziness. She was subject to these attacks for years, compelling her to take to her bed. In this case by using Chase's Pills relief was immediately obtained, and the usual days of misery and prostration avoided. Thousands of such cases can be referred to where Chase's Pills have cured Sick Headache and its attendant symptoms. 25 cents a box, of all dealers, or by addressing Edmondson, Bates & Co., 45 Lombard St., Toronto.

direct by the Beaver line steamer, Lake Superior, which sails from St. John about Wednesday next. Mr. Lawrence will send the cheese to St. John by Monday's C. P. R. freight. They are a very fine quality, and average about 60 pounds, each. The total season's output from the Keswick creamery will be about 6 tons, all of which will be exported to Liverpool, provided Monday's shipment brings the right price. This is a trial shipment, but from quotations Mr. Lawrence has received from the English market he judges that the demands and price will warrant him in shipping the total output of seven tons there. If he succeeds in working up a successful trade in the English market, the creamery at Keswick will be enlarged and the business energetically pushed. He feels that the Keswick cheese will be eagerly sought after in the English market, as wherever they have been used the greatest of satisfaction has been expressed.—Gleaner.
