

A Bride From China.

Wing Fat, a well-known member of the Chinese colony, was married at 5 o'clock Sunday morning to Miss Mow Sing Yu, niece of Li Hoy Hung, President of one of the Chinese Six Companies. Last night the bride and groom entertained their friends at dinner at the Hank Fer Low Restaurant on Dupont street. Some 200 Chinese and between 30 and 40 ladies and gentlemen were present.

The bride is a demure little Chinese woman, just 18 years of age. She is but a recent arrival in San Francisco, having come from her Oriental home for the purpose of marrying Mr. Fat, who is the foreman for Louis Meyerstein & Co., and is worth over $100,000.

There were but few at the wedding Sunday morning, and the peculiar Chinese ceremony was performed in one of the temples of the Six Companies. When the bridal couple arrived at the restaurant last night, there was a great display of colored lights and a perfect fusillade of bombs and fire-crackers. The banquet room was decorated in brilliant colors and aglow with the light of many Chinese lanterns. The white guests were seated at a different table from the Chinese, and at the table where the latter were seated the groom presided with his bride.

Mrs. Fat had on a light green silk costume trimmed with gold brocade and many precious stones. The groom was arrayed in a splendid silk suit suitable to his rank and fortune. The menu was most elaborate, and there was nothing to mar the festivities of the evening in the least. The white guests enjoyed the affair as much as any one who were present, and the groom was fully equal to the occasion, both in the dignity of his bearing and the manner in which he welcomed his guests in true Oriental style.—San Francisco Examiner.

How One Should Shake Hands.

Few of those who shake the hands of public men on occasions of receptions held in their honor realize the effect of this process if long continued upon the person who submits to it. Inquiry of them would often elicit the fact that there were swollen hands or strained muscles and badly afflicted nerves as its result. President Polk had an experience of this kind which led him to study into the art of shaking hands, for his own protection, and this is his conclusion with regard to it, set down in his private diary: "If a man surrendered his hand to be shaken by one horizontally, by another perpendicularly, and by another with a strong grip, he could not fail to suffer from it; but if he would shake and not be shaken, grip and not be gripped, taking care always to squeeze the hand of his adversary as hard as the adversary squeezed him, he would suffer no inconvenience from it. I can generally anticipate a strong grip from a stronger man, and I then take advantage of him, by being quicker than he, and seizing him by the tip of his fingers." This has the obvious advantage of demonstrating cordiality on the part of those who thus heartily grasp hands held out to them.—Boston Herald.

A Remarkable Cure.—J. W. Jennison, Gilford.—Spent between $200 and $300 in consulting doctors; tried Dixon's and all other treatments but got no benefit. One box of Chase's Catarrh Cure did me more good than all other remedies, in fact I consider myself cured, and with a 25 cent box at that.

Thoughts for Thinkers.

Life is like a book; fools scamper through it hastily, the wise man reads it with attention, because he knows he can only read it once.

Never speak anything evil of a man if you do not know it for a certainty; and if you do not know it for a certainty, then ask yourself—"Why should I tell it?"

Above all things, be kindly; kindness is a grace very near to the likeness of God, and one which disarms men above all else, gentle charitable thoughts of others gradually stamp the countenance and help to win hearts.

Sympathy, love and unselfishness give happiness. It matters not what our physical condition, what our material surroundings. With these as our ingredients we shall extract the glorious elixir of life.

To a farmer who went to market extremely anxious not to be cheated, a philosopher said that, when he became just as anxious not to cheat anybody else, his market wagon was as noble as the chariot of the sun.

"Who is the master of this house?" asked the agent of the man who answered the ring. "Well," was the curious response, in a resigned tone, "I am the husband and father."

The Two Policies Contrasted.

The difference between free trade and protection policy is well exemplified by circumstances which are now taking place in Toronto Junction. According to free trade principles, which the Liberals are urging Canada to adopt, we should not attempt to manufacture bicycles in this country, but should scour the earth to find the place where they are sold the cheapest. If a free trade policy prevailed in Canada today we should import all our bicycles, and as the United States is now the greatest producer of these machines it is from the United States we should obtain them. A manufacturer named Lozier, whose place of business is in Toledo, is said to manufacture a high grade standard wheel, and he is solicitous of obtaining a share of the Canadian business. Under a free trade policy we would find him manufacturing the machines he intended for Canada in Toledo and exporting them to this country. Even under a protectionist policy we must have recourse to foreign countries to obtain our bicycles, but instead of importing the individual machines and paying a 10 or 15 per cent. duty on each one, we import the idea underlying the mechanism of the machine; we import whatever tools are required and that are not procurable in Canada; and finally, we import such skilled labor as is necessary to start the factory and to educate our own workmen. On none of these do we pay a single cent of duty. Protection demands no tax on ideas, on men or any other things that are necessary for the successful development of this industry. Instead of importing individual machines and paying a duty on every one, we import men who have skill to produce these machines in this country. The Lozier firm that is about to locate in West Toronto Junction will have 300 hands employed there before long. Most of these will be present residents of the Junction, but in order to get the factory in operation at once it will be necessary to bring quite a number of skilled mechanics from the United States. Under a free trade policy we would have no Massey-Harris and no Lozier bicycle factories established in Canada. Under protection we find so many of these institutions springing up that next year we are bound to have a Canadian wheel as good as any made anywhere, else and that will reach the purchaser at as low a price as the same machine sells for in any other country.—Toronto World.

Care of the Wheel.

Cyclists do not always seem to realize how much the durability of a bicycle depends upon the care which it receives. By this I mean not only keeping it clean, which is necessary for appearance sake, anyway, but the using of some judgment as to the way in which it is ridden. Just as on horseback, a heavy woman, if she rides well, will not tire her mount so quickly as a lighter, inexperienced one, so an expert cyclist brings far less strain upon the machine than a careless rider, whose weight may not be nearly so great. If you have a rough piece of road to traverse, car tracks to cross, or come to any place where the riding is at all bad, do not rest your dead weight in the saddle, but rise a little and ease your machine, bearing harder than usual upon the pedals. Careful riding does not imply a slow pace. Those who make very fast time are often the most prudent and watchful cyclists. The outlook for obstacles becomes habitual, almost automatic, after awhile, and saves much hard wear and many a break down.

It is a rare thing to find a woman who understand how to use the implements which she finds in her bicycle tool bag. She is often very punctilious about carrying it with her on her rides, but if anything breaks down it might as well be at home for all she would be able to accomplish with it. Her idea is that there will probably be some kind person around who understands such things to whom she can appeal for help. But this is not always the case, and she might find herself in a situation where a little knowledge of her own would be very valuable. If she has no one in the family who can explain to her the uses of the several tools, the information could easily be obtained at any bicycle store.—Harper's Weekly.

The health of Sir Oliver Mowat, premier of Ontario, is causing apprehension to his friends. He is said to be suffering from a form of kidney disease which his medical advisers say may necessitate his early retirement from political life.

"Do you believe the theory that character is determined to some extent by what we eat and drink?" "I do." "Then a person who drinks sage tea is likely to develop into a philosopher, I suppose?"—Boston Globe.
