DR. THOMSON'S MED. CO.—Dear Sirs: My wife having been a sufferer from indigestion and languor, was induced to try your Sarsaparilla. The result is miraculous. She was relieved by one bottle. Her appetite the best for years. As an alternative and tonic it has no superior. This statement, for the benefit of suffering humanity, we give freely.

Divided Honors in Railway Propulsion.

The burning question of the day in electrical and railroad circles is the relative part which steam and electricity are to play in the railroad traffic of the future. Out of the engrossing and exhaustive discussion of this subject which has lately been in progress the public is, at length, beginning to form a definite idea of the outlook. The problem for which a solution has been desired is "Steam or Electricity." The solution reached is "Steam and Electricity." As Frank J. Sprague puts it, the question narrows itself down to the number of train units operated between terminal points. Make that number sufficiently large and the electric motor is the best means of propulsion, whether for high or low speed. Decrease this number and you must rely on steam. In other words, electricity will but partially take the place of steam locomotive for railway service, and then only when the number of units operated between terminal points is so large that the resulting economy will pay a reasonable interest on the combined cost of a central station system of conductors and the motor equipment, and the traffic existing is commensurate with the needs of such a system. Mr. Sprague urges the putting aside of "some of the visionary prophecies concerning electric railways." The future of the electrical railway is not in the wholesale destruction of existing great systems. It is in the development of a field of its own, with recognized limitations, but of vast possibilities. It will replace the locomotive on many suburban and branch lines; it will operate almost all street railway systems and elevated and underground roads; it will prove a valuable auxiliary to trunk systems; but it has not sounded the death knell of the locomotive, any more than the dynamo has sounded that of the stationary steam engine. Each has its own legitimate field in the traction work of the future.

A Bicycle Will Carry Twenty times Its Own Weight.

It seems absolutely impossible that a wheel thirty inches in diameter, with a wood rim and wire spokes, so light that the whole structure weighs only twenty ounces, should sustain without permanent distortion the weight of four men standing on its side, with supports at four points only under the rim, and no hub support whatever. It also seems incredible that a cycle capable of carrying a man of 160 or 175 pounds in weight can be made so light that the whole structure weighs less than nine pounds. Yet this has been done; even at the roadster weight of 22 or 24 pounds, the cycle carries a greater load with safety than has ever been put on any other vehicle. The influence of cycle on social life is already great and will probably constantly extend, as it provides an out-door sport and amusement for women which did not previously exist in any form in America. American women are not walkers, but the cycle is perhaps even better suited to woman's use than man's and seems destined to add an outdoor element to the life of woman the world over which was not possible without the "winged wheel." The miracle of the bicycle lies in its birth, death and resurrection; in its incredible load-bearing power in proportion to weight; in its displacement of the horse as a means of pleasure, and in the selection of its mechanical details of compressed air support, tubular framing and chain driving. All these are details often before introduced in machines, but never before permanently retained. That these cast-offs are undeniably power-savers is convincingly proved by the continued use under human muscle driving power. Finally, the one great achievement of the bicycle is to increase the human powers of locomotion so that the slow-footed man is made one of the swiftest of all running creatures.—Engineering Magazine.

A Rusty Nail Causes Death.

ST. THOMAS, July 29.—The death occurred at her residence, near Fingal, yesterday noon of Mrs. Clara Belle Ann Meek, wife of Robert Meek, in the 39th year of her age. A few days ago Mrs. Meek stepped on a rusty nail, which, piercing the ball of the great toe came nearly through the top. On Sunday stiffness of the jaws set in and the victim found difficulty in swallowing. Dr. Luton was summoned and found her suffering from lockjaw. Although the doctor made every effort to save the unfortunate woman's life, it was in vain, and she passed away in terrible agony.

Corn.

Now that the corn crop is the main one, and requires attention, it is as important to make some arrangements for properly utilizing the fodder as well as the grain. Machines are now in use which completely tear and shred the entire cornstalk, reducing it completely. Cattle will not eat the whole of the shredded material, however, unless the corn-fodder is harvested at the proper time. An advantage in shredding the fodder is that it may be fed to cattle and the remainder used as bedding or as an absorbent material in the manure heap.

THE ILLS OF WOMEN.

Constipation, causes more than half the ills of women. Karl's Clover Root Tea is a pleasant cure for Constipation. Sold by Garden Bros.

Summer Chicks.

Chicks hatched in the summer should be sold or consumed at home, as the young pullets from such late broods will not mature in time to prove valuable as layers in winter or early spring. It will pay to hatch chicks during this season, however, as it costs but very little to raise them in the summer season, so far as food is concerned, but lice, hawks, rats and cats should be guarded against in order to avoid loss of chicks.

Best Bear Story.

The Manitoulin Expositor has the following in a late issue:—Mr. Henry Coulam, who lives near Little Current, had quite an experience with some bears last Sunday afternoon. He had been sleeping for a time, and upon waking heard a terrible noise in the bush just in front of his house. He went out and found his hogs squealing most terribly. He clinched his old musket and started, telling his 9-year-old boy to bring powder, caps and a ball. His dog, anxious to enter into the fray, tried its best to get past Mr. Coulam, and in order to keep him back, he struck the dog with his gun. The gun was cocked, and the jar discharged the weapon, the charge going into the ground and barely missing his foot. The report frightened the bears, and they dropped the pigs, which were terribly torn and started off. Mr. Coulam, fearing that the old bear would attack his little boy, went back to meet him. He took the ammunition from the boy and loaded the old musket again. Once more, ready for the fray, he set out in search of the bears. It was but a short time before the old bear put in her appearance. Waiting until she came up very close to him, he let fly and down she came. The ball entered her head, passed through her brain, down her neck, and lodged in her shoulder. By this time Mr. Lilloco, Mr. Becks, Mr. Connors and a number of ladies who had just returned from church put in their appearance to see what all the noise was about. Mr. Lilloco discovered one of the cubs, and immediately took chase. After a considerable chase he succeeded in catching it. Thinking to take his prize alive, he threw himself upon it. Then the struggle began. First Mr. Lilloco was on top, then the cub, then again Mr. Lilloco, and this rough-and-tumble was kept up until young Bruin became enraged, and struck and bit at everything within its reach. The cub at last got Mr. Lilloco's hand in its mouth, and sent its teeth right through the hand, lacerating the flesh terribly. Nothing daunted, Lilloco held on until he succeeded in killing it. The other two cubs, which were half-grown, got away, and some time may return to provide another day's sport. The old bear Mr. Coulam shot weighed nearly 300 pounds. Mr. Coulam had eight sheep and one hog killed this summer by bears, and has made up his mind that bears will get no quarter near him in the future if he knows it. The whole section is now prepared if a Bruin shows his nose there again.

Keep the Sheep.

The following good advice is from the Farm News: We have taken occasion before this to advise against sacrificing the flock of sheep that ought to have a place on most farms, because of the low price of wool. Sheep cannot always be held down, for their wool is one of the necessities of civilization and it can never be kept so low in price that it must be produced at a loss for any great length of time. Sheep can be made profitable aside from the production of wool, if care is taken in their management and the right breed is kept. Just at present the fine, heavy woolled breeds are under the clouds of low prices, and thousands of farmers who have well-bred flocks are selling them at a price that is offered. This sort of a panic always has the result of reducing the stocks to a point that brings about violent re-action in prices and those who are wise enough to hold on and keep their stock up and give it good care will profit by it in the end. This has been the history of the sheep industry time and again, and fortunes have been founded on wise foresight in this direction. The heavy woolled breeds are just as good for mutton as any other, and there is no reason why every breeder of them should sell them and invest the money in other lines of stock or breeds of sheep. Fine wool is a necessity and the time will come when merinos will be again in demand, and the man who has spent time, skill and money to perfect a flock of any of the merino breeds will receive a price for his stock that will make them profitable.

Death Came Before Good Luck.

All Europe, especially Paris and London, is suffering from an epidemic of suicide, which is greater than that of two years ago, and therefore quite unprecedented. Ten or more per day is a low average in each city this week. The most romantic suicide story comes from Brunn, where a journeyman baker and his sweetheart determined upon suicide by drowning in the Schwarsar river. The young man was out of work and saw no prospect of being able to get married. The couple carried out their resolve and their bodies were found in the river. The pockets of the young man were searched, and in them were found a florin and a lottery ticket. A few days afterward the drawing in the lottery took place and that ticket was the winner of 20,000 florins, or about $10,000.
