

Business in England.

A late number of the London Standard says: The revenue is coming in splendidly. The improvement in the Income-tax may be attributed to the arrears of the additional penny, but that shown by the Post Office and Telegraph Services—which has been progressive for the six months, and now aggregates £260,000—is a sure indication of improved trade, quite as trustworthy as the income from stamps and drink, although not so large. As for the extraordinary improvement in stamps, it is, of course, not a thing to be looked upon as permanent, so far as it is not the product of the new Death Duties, if even then. But it will probably last long enough to permit the present government to rejoice in a surplus next April such as no chancellor of the exchequer has been able to dispose of since Mr. Goschen found the means to give £7,000,000 odd to local authorities, and to make primary education free. And discounting all the wealth poured into the treasury by the company promoter and by the stock exchange speculator, there is enough real improvement in the revenue left to prove to us that the business of the country is creeping out of its prolonged lethargy and depression. In doing so, it but follows the natural law of industrial progress. The more nations develop their productive power, the more they have to sell, and the necessity of each producer to dispose of his goods—to better them against the output of other producers—forces an extension of business in course of time, notwithstanding hostile tariffs, falling prices, and every other hindrance. Give the world continued peace, and business must revive and expand between nation and nation, come of doctrinaires and monopolists what may. Business is reviving now, moderately, quietly, with solidity, and the result of its improvement is a flourishing national exchequer, and the prospect of an unusual surplus.

Neglects and the Result.

Neglect cold in the head and you will surely have catarrh. Neglect nasal catarrh and you will surely induce pulmonary diseases or catarrh of the stomach with its disgusting attendants, foul breath, hawking, spitting, blowing, &c. Stop it all by using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure, 25 cents a box cures.

More than Her Money's Worth.

A little fellow who had his wits about him when the contribution plate was passed at church, administered a rebuke to his mother, who, on the way home, was finding fault with the sermon. "Well, mother," he said, innocently, "what could you expect for a penny."

Standard Time.

The following letter from Sandford Flemming was received by J. V. Ellis, editor of the St. John Globe. Mr. Flemming is a strong advocate for universal time.

OTTAWA, Oct. 16th, 1895.

John V. Ellis, Esq., St. John:

MY DEAR SIR,—I have the pleasure to reply to yours of yesterday. I have no end of printed matter on the subject of time-reckoning. Without actually deluging you with pamphlets and papers I will look up one or two which you need not return. The generally accepted theory is that time, the space, etc., is a unity; that it is a mistake to speak of more times than one, and that we are getting to that stage of the world's history when it will be most convenient to have as few reckonings of time as possible. The International Conference in Washington in 1884 was a turning point in the matter of time-reckoning. The theory was then accepted that there should be one standard reckoning for the world we live in, and that that standard should be the reckoning of civil time at Greenwich. That recommendation of the conference is gradually being carried out. Today when the clock strikes at the Greenwich observatory, clocks (properly regulated) strike at the same moment throughout the greater part of North America, Great Britain, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, Japan, New Zealand, Australia, etc. The hours only are known in different longitudes by different numbers, in order to approximate local ideas based on old usage; the minutes and seconds are identical wherever the new system of standard time is introduced. Some of the papers I will send you will show the rules for numbering the hours which have come into use. There are points, and St. John is one of them, about midway between "hour meridian" where it is somewhat awkward with respect to numbering the hours and this is generally settled by geographical or general convenience. It really makes no great difference to anyone what number is given to the hour. We have been in the habit of calling noon 12 o'clock, but in Scriptural times 12 o'clock was at sunset. St. John is a little nearer the hour meridian, which is 60°, or four hours slower than Greenwich, but St. John, and New Brunswick generally, is peculiarly situated. It has been found convenient in working the great trunk railway, the I. C. R., to reckon by the 75th meridian, or five hours slower than Greenwich. For that reason I would judge that it would be best, all things considered, to adopt the same reckoning throughout New Brunswick. By so doing your province would be brought into complete harmony in the reckoning of time not only with the world, but likewise in the numbering of the hours with the continent as far west as Detroit. I do not doubt if New Brunswick took this course in a few years Nova Scotia and P. E. Island, consulting their own convenience, would follow. But whether they do so or not, it seems to me New Brunswick would act wisely in following this course. It is quite true that in some parts of your province the clocks would require to be changed 30 or 40 minutes from the old reckoning. This is done in other countries, quite recently in France and also in Germany the unification of reckoning was carried out. Read what the grand old General Von Moltke said in the last speech he made in the imperial parliament of Germany. On this occasion he advocated the adoption of standard time in an old world and far more conservative country than New Brunswick, and where the clocks had to be changed quite as much. But Von Moltke saw the great advantage to result from uniformity of reckoning over wide areas. Frankly, my view is that you should adopt the standard of the world, Greenwich civil reckoning, and number the hours according to the 75th meridian west, that is, five hours slower than Greenwich. Yours faithfully, SANDFORD FLEMING.
