

Joyful Words of Praise.

Read.

DR. THOMSON'S MED. CO.,—Dear Sirs: My wife having been a sufferer from indigestion and languor, was induced to try your Sarsaparilla. The result is miraculous. She was relieved by one bottle. Her appetite the best for years. As an alternative and tonic it has no superior. This statement, for the benefit of suffering humanity, we give freely.

TEA AS A BEVERAGE.

It Originated Through the Gift of an Infatuated Lover.

The antiquity of tea as a beverage is a favorite subject of discussion by confirmed tea drinkers. China claims the origin of the use of tea as a drink, says the the New York Mercury.

Of course there are various stories connected with it, among which, perhaps, the following is quite as interesting and believable as any. As the tale runs, one of the daughters of a reigning sovereign whose caste did not permit him to aspire to her hand; but they exchanged glances and occasionally he gathered a few blossoms and took means to have them conveyed to her.

One day the princess met her admirer in the grounds of the palace, and as the attention of her attendants was attracted in another direction the young man tried to put a few flowers into her hand, but all that she could grasp was a little twig with green leaves.

This she treasured, and when she reached her apartments she placed the twig in a goblet of water, here to remain for some hours, the object of her tenderest care. Toward evening she was seized with a sentimental attack, during which she drank the water in which the twig had been kept. It had a most agreeable taste, and then she ate the leaves and stalk.

The flavor pleased her greatly, and every day, in memory of her admirer, she had bunches of the tea tree brought to her, and ate them or put them in water and drank the infusion.

The ladies of the court observed her, and were moved to try it themselves, and did so with such pleasing results that the practice spread throughout the kingdom, and one of the great industries of China was thus established.

It is claimed that the date of the sentimental origin of tea drinking was nearly 3000 years before Christ.

What the Northwest Wants.

"I feel satisfied that the Dominion of Canada possesses two-thirds of the wheat-producing belt of the North American continent, and if the statesmen of the country will give us preferential trade with England, the Dominion's immense heritage in the Northwest will blossom like the rose. We should set the ball rolling by offering to lower the tariff at least ten per cent. in favor of the Mother Country."

The above was observed to The World yesterday by Mr. Robert Meighen, president of the Lake of the Woods Milling Co., who, having just returned from Winnipeg, gave his opinion as to the state of things in the prairie country.

"I have perfect confidence in the country," continued Mr. Meighen, "and all we want is more people."

He reports that the season is somewhat backward, and that the area which is being put under wheat will be about 20 per cent. less than last year.

"When will seeding be done? the correspondent asked.

"About 60 per cent. of the seed wheat was in on the 15th, and I expect the whole will be accomplished by the Queen's Birthday."

Proceeding, Mr. Meighen said that things in Manitoba were generally looking on the bright side. The farmers, he believed, were in a prosperous condition, and it is understood that the reduction of their liabilities has been very marked during the past year.

He visited the different points where the company's elevators are located, and stated that the latter's capacity would be increased according to the requirements of the crop. "Our Keewatin mill," he added, "is now running the 24 hours this mill having a larger productive capacity than any other mill in the Dominion or a daily output of 2250 barrels per day, and using 11,000 bushels of wheat every 24 hours.—Toronto World.

Red Hair All the Rage.

The days of the bleached blonde are numbered. When rapid young women took a fancy to this particular shade of hair there was a panic in the camp of the neutral blondes, and a stampede to the hair-dressing establishments of the town followed. The color that has succeeded the blonde, however, is of just as pronounced a shade and retiring women whose hair is of this particular hue will shortly find themselves in the same predicament as were the blondes. The new color is called variously, chestnut, auburn and bronze. In reality it is red, but not too deep a red. One application of dye, carefully put on, will give the proper shade and place the girl on an up-to-date plane of beauty. The new color is not at all difficult to obtain, but as it must be gotten by dyeing instead of by bleaching, as was the case with the blonde hair, the process must be repeated at regular intervals. Any shade of hair may be dyed that color so that the dye lasts for several weeks. One woman wanted to know whether or not the dye would wash out if she went out in the rain, and the dresser told her that if properly applied the dye would stand the ordeal of sea-bathing.

He will take no Risks.

Shrewdness of a wellknown City Merchant.

HE KNEW WHAT WAS GOOD FOR HIM.

In winter when Canadians spend a large portion of their time indoors and cannot have the same variety of fresh food as in summer and fall, indigestion and dyspepsia afflict a majority. "If anybody will tell me that dyspepsia in its advanced stages is perfectly curable," said a Toronto merchant, "I will take his word. Personally I run no risks. As soon as I feel a sense of weight in the stomach, after a meal, I know that my blood is sluggish in circulation. In my business I cannot take much exercise, and I fight the first sign of stomach troubles with Scott's Sarsaparilla. It has never failed me, and has saved me many a doctor's bill."

Scott's Sarsaparilla possesses medicinal properties superior to all other so-called sarsaparillas made. As a remedy for indigestion, rheumatism, pimples, scrofula and all blood diseases, physicians state that its equal was never known. Sold at $1 per bottle, of all dealers.

THE MUSINGS OF THE WICKED IMP.

HAS A CONTEMPT FOR EXCITABLE POLITICIANS.

And Will Make it Warm for Them By and Bye.—Mediates on Town Affairs and Gives Some Advice.—Borrows a Good Hint About Reading.

The election is on, and we are all enthusiastic partisans. This office is in a turmoil. The religious editor is talking religious teaching in the schools, the sporting editor is booming prohibition the exchange editor is cursing the N. P., the literary editor is quoting John Stuart Mill, and I have to listen to it all. Such guff, such nonsense, as it all is. Both parties rehashing the same old stories. Nothing new or original. It is enough to make one a cynic, and to exclaim with the wise dramatist "What fools these mortals be." Could a visitant from neighboring planet see us at present would he not be edified? Place, place, position, position, position, office, office, office—that's what they're all after. Is there a patriot in the whole gang of them? I won't believe it till the X ray is put on and the thoughts and desires of his innermost heart are revealed. "The whole race of politicians" as a keen writer of the past contemptuously termed them. It will be with real joy I will keep the fire burning around them, when I get them in my clutches as I surely will.

It is wise at night to read, if but for a few minutes, some book which will compose and soothe the mind, which will bring us face to face with the true facts of life, death and eternity; which will make us remember that man doth not live by bread alone; which will give us, before we sleep, a few thoughts worthy of a Christian man with an immortal soul in him. And, thank God, no one need go far to find such books. I do not mean merely religious books, excellent as they are in these days. I mean any books which help to make us better and wiser, and sober, and more charitable persons; any books which will teach us to despise what is vulgar and mean, foul and cruel, and to love what is noble and high-minded, pure and just. In our own English language we may read, by hundreds, books which will tell us of all virtue and of praise—the stories of good and brave men and women, of gallant and heroic actions, of deeds which we ourselves should be proud of doing, of persons whom we feel to be better, wiser, nobler, than we are ourselves.—Sel.

Why is it that in a town like Woodstock where the private citizens have such nice residences, and are beginning to display refined taste in the matter of neatly kept grounds and lawns, the appearance of the main business portion of the town should be so decidedly against it? Take the case of a traveller who comes to this town and puts up at an hotel for a day or two. He may have satisfactory dealings with the merchant, but his impressions of Woodstock can certainly not be such as they should be. There lies a duty ahead of the next town council to devote themselves to improving the appearance of the business part of this town. We must have asphalt sidewalks, and then we must keep our streets well cleaned. This has been done pretty well this year, and it must be done still better next year. If we cannot get enough money by assessment to fix up the streets, it must be borrowed. A corporation that can get money for 4 per cent, to invest in permanently attending to the streets, should not hesitate one moment in negotiating a loan. Of course it is useless to talk to the pack of lunatics, who are mouthing politics just now, but when they are fit to be set at liberty, they will find it worth while to think over the question of good streets for Woodstock.

THE IMP.

Bad Blood Between Them.

The ever-slaving farmer's wife, her delicate sister in the city, suffer more than they care to tell. The dark rings round the eyes, headaches, dizziness, palpitation or rheumatic twinges, betoken a run-down system. The blood is poor, and is a bar to enjoyment of life. Scott's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, strengthens and vitalizes the system, and speedily restores the bloom of health to the cheeks, features when all others fail.

"You are pretty small," said the captain, who engaged a man to go on an exploring expedition with him. "I shouldn't think you had enough endurance." "Endurance!" exclaimed the man of tiny stature. "I can give a record for that, sir; sure I put in a whole afternoon in a heavy rain at a football match with a girl six feet in height, and held an umbrella over her head all the time; if that is not endurance enough, I should like to know what is." "That's enough; you'll do," said the captain.—J. C.
