

THE WOODSTOCK DISPATCH.

WOODSTOCK, N. B., JAN. 22, 1896.

THE OLD MAN IN POLITICS.

It seems to be settled that Sir Chas. Tupper, sen., will enter the cabinet and in time become the leader of the Conservative party in the country. He will accept some constituency, and take his place on the floors of the commons.

It is rather funny to observe that in all the talk there has been about Bowell and the bolters, Sir Mackenzie has been referred to as the "old man." As a matter of fact the "old man" in the deal is Tupper, sen., who is 75 years of age to Bowell's 73. But Sir Chas. is one of those men who hold their age, and do not appear nearly as ancient as the figures show. Some men are old at fifty, and some at seventy-five. Sir John MacDonell was seventy-six when he died. Had he lived on he would, undoubtedly, have still been in active politics. He would not have been old as long as life lasted.

The psalmist who mourned that the days of our age were three score years and ten, might have added a score or so to the limit had he witnessed the contest at Ottawa, where the party is divided over allegiance to two leaders, one seventy-three, and the other seventy-five years old.

The Liberal leader in the senate Hon. R. W. Scott, must be well past the seventy limit but his ability and energy are not questioned.

This is often spoken of as the young man's day, and we hear that the old man is not wanted. But there is more fancy than fact in such an absurd assertion. Experience can only be found among those whose years are many, and experience breeds wisdom. The old man is with us yet.

The election of M. C. Cameron in West Huron is a gain to the opposition. Mr. Cameron was elected in the general elections of 1891. He was unseated, and Hon. J. C. Patterson, the present governor of Manitoba, was elected by a small majority. It is claimed by the Conservatives that West Huron is a Liberal riding, and that Mr. Patterson's election was owing to peculiar circumstances. Still when a fort has been won, no matter under what conditions, it must be held or its loss means a defeat.

Rubbing It In.

Never use a liniment for rheumatism, says a high medical authority. Don't rub it in—drive it out. Take something that removes the acid poison from the blood—take something that will improve your digestion, and build up the body to the perfection of robust health. That "something" is Scott's Sarsaparilla, a remedy that obtains the best results in the shortest time. $1. of all druggists.

What the Utlanders Want.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—While South Africa fills the public eye it may not be amiss to give briefly the demands of the Utlanders as formulated in a manifesto issued Dec. 26, and addressed to the people of the republic by the National Union, an organization of Britons under the presidency of Charles Leonard. The manifesto is as follows:

1. The establishment of a republic as a true republic under a constitution approved by the whole people.
2. An equitable franchise and fair representation.
3. The equality of the Dutch and English languages.
4. The responsibility to the legislature of the heads of the great department.
5. The removal of religious disabilities.
6. The establishment of independent courts of justice, with adequate pay for judges, which shall be properly secured.
7. Liberal education.
8. An efficient civil service, with an adequate pay and pension system.

Import Duty On Logs.

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 18.—How the tariff is to be adjusted between the United States and Canada in the new bill is a matter of vast importance to Bay City. Mr. Thomas Pitts, as the head of Messrs. Pitts & Co., also heavy importers of logs, says: "Between 260,000,000 and 300,000,000 feet of logs are annually imported from Canada. I am satisfied that, if our government puts an import duty on logs, we would have to shut down and throw our men out of employment. It would compel us to go to Canada to manufacture our lumber and, on account of the import duty here, we would have to seek other markets for our lumber than the United States. Michigan lumbermen have become largely interested in Canadian timber limits, and it would prove a serious blow to the state. Along this coast from Saginaw to Cheboygan it would turn 20,000 men out of employment that earn annually in the neighborhood of $5,500,000. One hundred and fifty feet of the coarse lumber is also worked up by factories along the coast annually that employ hundreds of men, all of whom would also be thrown out of employment. It requires no genius to foretell what the consequences would be."

The Wonderful Career of Dr. Jameson.

Nothing that Dr. Leander Star Jameson, would attempt in the way of daring adventure, or accomplish through his impetuous but thoughtful audacity, would astonish those who have closely followed his career.

Of all the men who have gained fame in Africa none is more picturesque than 'Dr. Jim,' Administrator for the British South Africa Company in Mashonaland. The news that with 700 men, six Maxim guns and other artillery pieces, he has invaded the Transvaal territory is not astonishing, and it is quite in keeping that the telegraph wires should be cut in order to make it impossible for orders from the Colonial Office to reach him.

If Dr. Jameson had failed in his many reckless undertakings he would be called a fool; he succeeded and thereby shows himself a man of genius.

In the first place, it seems remarkable that he should have gone to South Africa at all. He was born and bred in Scotland, of an ancient Scottish family. His father was a writer for the Signet. But those who knew Dr. Jameson in his youth tell strange stories of his dashy cleverness and adventures. He was educated as a physician. He had had an admittedly distinguished medical career, and had taken honors in arts when he sailed away to South Africa, settling in Kimberley. He speedily gained a large practice and a commensurate income. He was the leader in his profession. His fame as a medical man alone is very great.

That wonderful 'uncrowned King of South Africa,' Cecil Rhodes, saw the stuff of which Dr. Jameson was made and offered him the opportunity of playing a part in the opening of a new country. He embraced it gladly.

The fat, luxurious and cunning Lobengula, King of the Matabele nation, bitterly opposed granting the concession to the Chartered Company, and its budding operations were in danger of destruction. The first emissary sent to him, Thompson, saw Lobengula kill an Induna for advising the concession. The emissary was glad to escape with his life.

Dr. Jameson, alone and unarmed, then started for Lobengula's court. Few dared hope that he would return. None dared dream that he could succeed. The attempt showed the mettle of the man. He boldly sought the craftiest of South African Kings, who ruled 100,000 Zulu warriors.

The fame of Dr. Jameson's medical skill stood him in good stead in his journey to the King, but menaced him with additional danger after he arrived there. For the King was suffering from a malady which his medicine men could not check, and which threatened to kill him at any moment. If Dr. Jameson failed to cure, he knew he would be killed. But science conquered and Lobengula granted the concession and the permission for the pioneer force to pass through Mashonaland.

Dr. Jameson next explored and established a new route to the ocean, difficult enough, and which gained him supreme command of the South African Company, but not to be compared with that journey to the great chief Gungunyana through the worst country in South Africa. It was a two-months journey, practically on foot, through a marshy country, with compass alone to guide. At the start all provisions were lost. Jameson pushed on. He and his small band lived on fruits. It rained for eleven days. Fourteen days were passed in the gloom of a dense African jungle. During the whole journey the only 'game' that was seen was a skunk. The three white men were stricken with fever, yet they pushed on and accomplished the mission.

Since that time the Doctor has controlled Mashonaland, and he has risen superior to every crisis. He had much trouble with King Lobengula. He warred against the savage soldiers in 1893 with remarkable success. The natives attacked the Mashonas. Dr. Jameson gave warning. He was told that Lobengula could not control his young men. 'Take back those whom you can control and I will deal with the others,' was Dr. Jameson's message.

He ordered an invasion of Matabeleland and it resulted in the downfall of the great King.

The Boers are wonderful fighters, in the last war with England, about fifteen years ago, their marksmanship was the talk of the world. A party of Boers scaled Maguba hill, occupied by Sir George Colley and 400 men. They drove off the British in a panic, killing Sir George, six other officers and ninety men, wounding and capturing many others. The Boer loss was one killed and five wounded. On another occasion sixty-three Boers killed 258 British soldiers with a loss to themselves of only five or six.

Morphine Responsible.

The Collector of Customs, Clementi of Ottawa, has got in trouble by using public funds for his own benefit. He has fled to Chicago. A late dispatch from Montreal says: James Stevenson, M. P., father-in-law of ex-Collector Clementi, of Peterboro, when asked about the trouble at the Customs House, said that for a long time Mr. C. H. Clementi, Collector of Customs, has been a "morpheine fiend" and has been treating at the best sanitariums on the continent for the habit. None seemed to have the slightest effect on him. He is now in an institution in Chicago. The shortage will be made up by the bondsmen, just as soon as the inspector discovers the exact amount.

DISEASED LUNGS CURED BY TAKING AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

"I contracted a severe cold, which settled on my lungs, and I did what is often done in such cases, consulted a doctor, who, on examining me, told me that the upper part of the lung was badly affected. The doctor gave me medicine, but it did not seem to do any good, and I determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After using a few doses my trouble was relieved, and before I had finished the bottle I was cured."
