MEN WHO WOULD BE KINGS.

Rudyard Kipling, a very delightful writer of short stories in which the interesting and the amusing are very intimately combined, tells us in one of his stories of two characters who started out to some of the little investigated portions of Asia, with the intention of being kings. They succeeded virtually in their strange mission, and having got a mysterious hold upon the people of this strange land were crowned in due form, and to a certain degree, anglicised the natives. A time came however when rebellion broke out and one of the monarchs was forced to commit suicide, while the other having been treated to a punishment common in earlier days than at present, was finally allowed to return to India, and just survived sufficiently to relate his experiences, when death overtook him.

Truth, they say, is stranger than fiction, and while Kipling's story seems incredible as to the facts, things quite as astonishing even if not more so have occurred in real life. Men become kings, but their downfall is as complete and sudden as the downfall of Right Worshipful Brother Dravot, the king of Kafiristan with his crown upon his head, or Peachey Carnehan commander-in-chief of the emperor's forces. People who read the newspapers cannot have failed to have noticed the prominence of South African affairs of late, and the career of Mr. Cecil Rhodes. He was called the uncrowned king of South Africa. His wealth was supposed to be almost beyond the human conception, and his influence in the council of the British Empire was supposed to be something unknown of before, in a colonial magnate. But it all looks as though the king's sceptre was about to depart from him, and if the latest reports are correct, Rhodes will soon be in England, to suffer a worse mortification and punishment than he, who apparently was his tool. Dr. Jameson.

So the men who would be kings, have their little triumphs and as he, clad with a little brief authority for a season, but like comets they shine vividly for a time and pass away, and are quite forgotten, amid the steadfast brilliancy of the firmament.

COLD STORAGE.

He would be a bold individual who would write anything, with the thermometer 90° in the shade against cold storage. THE DISPATCH cannot but regard anything that would tend to do away with such oppressive heat, as an unmixed blessing to mankind.

Cold Storage has agitated the civic mind of this town of Woodstock, and even the sad tragedy of last Saturday night has not so seriously affected the public. One affects the senses, the other the pocket, and business men have little time to be sentimental, when there is a prospect of a dollar to be made or lost.

Business must hold the board.

No one objects to a person opposing cold storage, any more than to their objecting to the National Policy, or Free Trade as it is in England, and no sensible body thinks it unnatural that the people dislike taxes. THE DISPATCH doesn't like taxes, for it knows they are a nuisance and bother, but like hot days, they seem to be a necessary evil.

In deciding this matter there are a few things to cogitate about. If we heard that a company was coming here to ask nothing from the town and establish cold storage, would we likely object to it? That is, on principle, is anyone opposed to cold storage? Again, this is an age of competition, and if a big concern sees about equal facilities in two places, for an investment, it is not unnatural that they should make the best bargain they can. Now what this cold storage company ask, is free water, free light, and free land. But they do not ask that the land shall be given them. The town may buy it, and let it at a nominal fee to the company. If anything happens to the company the town has the land. It is an investment for the town, and land is not worthless in Woodstock. Will the free water really be missed? Will any opponent of cold storage explain how much each individual will pay in extra taxes if the concern comes here? They should be able to state their views. If they cannot, how can they expect the ordinary mind to believe that a patriotic motive inspires them.

There is a very popular old melody, suitable to the occasion.

"I do not love thee, Dr. Fell,
The reason why I cannot tell
But, I do not love thee, Dr. Fell."

Woman Rules.

Under the regime of the old fashioned cook stove a wife was a slave to her cooking utensils. The advent of the Home Comfort Range places woman in a position of mistress of all she surveys. The old stove was a wood burner, hot in summer and cold in winter, in fact, a woman killer. The Home Comfort burns less wood, can be made to thoroughly heat a place in winter, and in summer can be so adjusted that a minimum of heat is dispensed through a kitchen. One has but to see Mr. Brashear handle one of these ranges to understand their many transcendent advantages. They are of malleable iron and will not break or warp. The drafts are so arranged that the best results are given for any class of work which a woman desires. All the hollow-ware that goes with a Range is of finest steel, light and durable. These Ranges are sold from the waggons of the company only and these will call at every house in the county.

Under the management of Mr. Brashear, the company has already sold 300 ranges in Carleton County, and they are giving every satisfaction. Of course there are one or two kickers, but some people wouldn't be satisfied with perfection itself. What the company can say, is that not two purchasers in a hundred are dissatisfied with their bargain, and even those two can't deny that the range is first class and all the salesman recommend it to be.

Mr. Geo. Wrigley Publisher of the Canada Farmers Sun, the organ of the patrons of Industry writes as follows:

130 Peter Street,
TORONTO, ONT., AUG. 1-96.
Gentlemen: Last July I purchased one of your Home Comfort Family Ranges, and I am able to say, after having used it since Oct.-94 that it is exactly what its name implies. It affords comfort in the home both as a heater and a cooker. It provides hot water for constant use in bath room and elsewhere. We have used both wood and coal with satisfactory result, and have every reason to feel pleased with our investment. The purchase of an article so durable as the Home Comfort Range needs to be made only once in a lifetime. Yours sincerely,

GEORGE WRIGLEY,
Publisher Canada Farmers Sun.

Dandruff is due to an enfeebled state of the skin. Hall's Hair Renewer quickens the nutritive functions of the skin, healing and preventing the formation of dandruff.

Bane
of Beauty.

Beauty's bane is the fading or falling of the hair. Luxuriant tresses are far more to the matron than to the maid whose casket of charms is yet untried by time. Beautiful women will be glad to be reminded that falling or fading hair is unknown to those who use

Ayer's Hair Vigor.
