Joyful Words of Praise.

Read.

DR. THOMSON'S MED. CO.—Dear Sirs:
 My wife having been a sufferer from indigestion and languor, was induced to try your Sarsaparilla. The result is miraculous. She was relieved by one bottle. Her appetite the best for years. As an alternative and tonic it has no superior. This statement, for the benefit of suffering humanity, we give freely.

LIFE.
 A warmth, a glow, a light;
 Smouldering embers, 'night.
 A seed, a bud, a bloom;
 A pod, a shell, a tomb.
 A spring, a summer, fall;
 A frost, a snow, a pall.
 A quiver, motion, breath;
 A song, a sigh, then death.

Winter Care of Farm Horses.

The best winter care for farm horses has long been a study with me, and in its pursuit I have investigated the methods of many stables. I got my best hints from the superintendent of the stables in New York where the horses used by the various express companies are kept. The horse has no large stomach like the paunch of ruminants; hence bulky feed, like hay and grass, must be gradually—that is, a portion must be taken to advantage. To distend the stomach with hay, especially dusty hay, is to put the horse into the worst possible condition for fast or hard work. Nothing so predisposes to heaves or broken wind as to stuff a horse with hay and then work him hard why it is I have never been able to determine yet that is a fact I have proved by wide observation. To best meet the conditions, then, I feed such an amount of hay at night as experience shows will be eaten clean before morning. If any horse has any left in the morning, it is taken out, and the mangers are brushed clean. Grain is then fed and again at noon, but no more hay is fed until night. By this means the horse can eat and digest the necessary amount of hay while they are quiet in their stalls, but while at work during the day they are not inconvenienced by having the stomach distended with it. After several years' trial I am convinced that horses keep healthier and in better condition, at less expense for grain, by this method of feeding than by the old fashioned way of continual stuffing with hay. The best arranged stables have the hay manger made with a rack bottom, through which any dirt or dust that may be mixed with the hay will drop to the floor. When thus constructed, the grain manger is made separately and so arranged with slats or wire netting that the horse cannot easily move his head to one side and slubber oats on the floor. With a little intelligent care in the management there is no reason why the farm horse should not be the healthiest and the longest lived horse we have.—Horse World.

The Housecleaning Habit.

Housecleaning is largely a habit. The thrifty housekeeper gets in the way of having a general unheaval twice a year, and she could not dispense with it, or she thinks she couldn't. And yet some authorities declare that the periodical housecleaning is an unnecessary infliction. Their plan is to give one room a cleaning every week. Thus, if there are seven rooms, each room gets a renovation every seven weeks and the house never has an opportunity to become dirty enough to need troublesome overhauling. Mirrors and looking glasses should be cleaned every time a room is done. A little spirit of wine judiciously applied with a soft rag will remove the most obstinate marks. Picture frames and books, too, should be well dusted and the cupboard shelves dusted and relined with clean paper.—Philadelphia Times.

IT SAVES LIVES EVERY DAY.

Thousands of cases of Consumption, Asthma, Coughs, Colds and Croup are cured every day by Shiloh's Cure. Sold by Garden Bros.

Steer Fattening.

Well grown steers will probably consume about 60 pounds of ensilage each. With this they will take from 15 to 20 pounds of grain. If the ensilage has very little corn upon it, I would mix the grain, for parts corn, one part oats and one part bran by weight. The mangels may well be used in small quantities as an appetizer from time to time, and the steers should have access to some dry fodder, preferably the clover hay, though the corn fodder, clover and timothy may be alternated with good effect. Care should be taken to bring the steers up to their full feed gradually, so their appetites will well always be keen. They should have each day all they will eat up clean and no more.—Exchange.

HAVE YOU CATARRH ?

But One Sure Remedy—Obtain It for 25 Cents, Blower Included, and be Cured. Catarrh is a disagreeable and offensive disease. It usually results from a cold and often ends in consumption and death. The one effective remedy so far discovered for it is Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure.

Physicians failed to cure Geo. Belfrey, toll-gate keeper, Holland Landing road. Chase's Catarrh Cure did it. One box cured William Kneeshaw and two boxes James T. Stoddard, both of West Gwillimbury.

Division Court Clerk Joel Rogers, Robert J. Hoover and Geo. Taylor, all of Beeton, voluntarily certify to the efficacy of Chase's Catarrh Cure.

J. W. Jemison, of Gifford, spent nearly $300 on doctors, but found no permanent relief until he tried a 25-cent box of Chase's.

Miss Dwyer, of Alliston, got rid of a cold in the head in 12 hours.

Henry R. Nicholls, 176 Rectory street, London, tried a box with excellent effect.

Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure is for sale by any dealers or by Edmansson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Price 25 cents including Blower.

Congas, colds and bronchial troubles readily cured by the latest discovery, Chase's Linseed and Turpentine. Pleasant and easy to take. 25 cents.

THE MUSINGS OF THE WICKED IMP.

A PATENT TO BE SECURED FOR A NEW INVENTION.

It Will Not be Necessary For Public Speakers to Deliver More Than one Oration.—Phonographs to be Utilized.—What a World Without Jokers.

I had a conversation today with one of the orators during this great campaign. The orator said that after this circus was over he was going to get out a patent for a machine which he would call "The Stumper." He contends that Edison's discovery of the phonograph must soon be found of vast practical use to politicians. He suggests that the candidates at the next general election, get phonographs; and at the beginning of the contest, speak into them, and then send them throughout the country. The phonograph will save the voice, and is in every way the same as the ordinary campaigner. To hear yourself telling the same old yarns, cracking the same old jokes, making the same old arguments, is decidedly monotonous, even if it is all new to your audience. To the proposal of having the phonograph there is an objection that the audience would prefer to see the candidate or the speaker. Here's where the orators invention is to come in. In each and every constituency, he is to have wooden or wax figures made, bearing as close a resemblance as possible to the speakers of the campaign. The phonograph will be put in some part of the wooden or wax figures' anatomy, probably when the brains are supposed to be in a real human being. You will press a button and the speech will be delivered. There's money in it. It will be a little inconvenient inasmuch as interruptions can not be successfully met, but, that is only a minor affair, and if the wax figure will not be able to reply to all embarrassing questions, he will at least preserve a grave and unruffled appearance, and if one man says "He didn't answer my question," another can say "Well, he didn't look much put out over it."

Bill Nye, the celebrated funny man has shuffled off the mortal coil, Bernard Gillam, chief cartoonist of Puck has been gathered to his fathers. F. M. Hutchins a comic artist on Puck has gone to his reward. Eugene Field the humorist has taken the air line and now C. H. Bunyar editor of Puck has fallen asleep, which means that all these comical men have gone and died. It is a sad thing to contemplate, the death of so many men who have contributed to the health, happiness and intelligence of North America. It will be a sad day for earth when there are no men left here to make fun of things, to stir up humanity with a shot of sarcasm, to run the poniard of wit into the stupid and heavy people. Half the goodness of the world is due to the laughter in it.

Reformed Courting.

An Atchison girl is writing a book which will be an attack on the present social system. Her principal objection to society is the manner in which young men do their courting. At present, when a young man goes to see a girl, she cannot tell whether he means business or is just amusing himself. What she wants to do is to have an understanding that if a young man goes to see a girl a certain number of times it is to constitute an engagement, and she advocates having the legislature pass a law making the young man liable to a damage suit if he breaks away after going the specified number of times. She proposes that the legislature authorize the printing of blanks or coupons, which every girl must keep at her house, and whenever a young man calls he must sign his name to one of them. When she has, say, ten signatures of one young man to ten different coupons, she can consider herself engaged to him, and she can recover damages if he refuses to do the right thing. If a girl is willing to allow a young man to come and see her more than the number of times required by law and not consider it an engagement, she must sign a release relieving him of all liability. The book will soon be finished, and she expects it to have big sale. She believes that if her idea is carried out it will result in less anxiety to parents, less trouble for the girls and a blessing to society.—Atchison Globe.

Rather Severe.

Rev. Dr. Brooke Herford one day was interrupted in the preparation of a sermon by a lady whose particulars had been the collection of preachers' autographs and favorite texts. Without complaint the good doctor wrote his name and the reference "Luke 1, 13." The collector went on her way rejoicing—but what was her chagrin to read: "And withal they learn to be idle, but tattlers also, and busybodies, speaking things which they ought not."
