

WONDERS OF HYPNOTISM.

Startling Results Obtained by a Pennsylvania Doctor.

The remarkable hypnotic experiments of Colonel de Rochas of l'Ecole Polytechnique, in Paris, have received startling confirmation through the investigations of Dr. Elmer Gates at his laboratory in Germantown, Pa.

Put a "sensitive" man in a dark room. Take a cat, or bird, or some flowers (in pots) into the same room. The man will see strange things after he has been in that dark room for several hours. Finally your sensitive man will begin to see you. Take your hands, for example; at first they will appear to him as a gray smoke; then each finger will burn with its own light. He will see a luminous protuberance at the end of each finger—sometimes as long as the finger itself.

When the surprise, caused by this luminous appearance of you, is past, ask your "sensitive" man to detail for your benefit exactly what he has seen. He will tell you that the colors of the lights which have grown for him are not the same on all parts of your body; that your right hand shows a blue light, and your left hand a yellow-reddish light. He will describe the same difference in color between the "luminous effluvia" of your foot. He will state that the right side of your body and face is bluish and darker than the left side, which is yellow-reddish and much lighter.

It has been known for some time that under similar conditions in a dark room a magnet emits a blue light at its north pole and a yellow-reddish light at its south pole. The strength of this light varies according to the power of the magnet and the sensitiveness of the eyes of the subject. It may be one or three feet in diameter, and appears like a fiery flood intermingled with sparks. Hypnotized subjects frequently speak of this effluvia from the poles of a magnet. That their very sensitive retinae do unquestionably see these phenomena has been demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt by eminent and reliable authority as Alfred Russell Wallace, Reichenbach, Deleuze, Despine, Charpignon, Luys and finally by the great Charcot himself.

Le Colonel A. de Rochas, the director of the Ecole Polytechnique in Paris, has quite recently published the results of his own personal experiments, showing that these "luminous effluvia" are real and objective, and not imaginary.

Colonel de Rochas hypnotized at different stages two different subjects at the same time and in the same room. Let us call them A and B. A reported that he could see a luminous phosphorous coating on B's body. He could see besides, that B's mouth, ears, eyes, nostrils and finger ends were emitting a blue-light light, blue on one side of the body, yellow-reddish on the other. These openings seemed to act like "escapes" for these flames, which were independent from the coating of the skin. Did A see them because he had a mesmeric illusion, or were this coating and the lights real?

A common glass of water was put within the radius of B's "luminous effluvia," as described by A, who could see how far they reached. After a few minutes A reported that the water itself had become luminous, add that it remained luminous for a long while, even if removed to the other end of the room, out of the reach of B's effluvia.

The sensitiveness of B's skin was made to disappear by the hypnotic process, but any touch or puncture of a pin or needle on the outside edge of the phosphorescent or luminous coating received by A's eyes was immediately perceived by B. His body did not feel the sharpness of the needle, but the outer edge of his "luminous effluvia," several feet away from the skin, had acquired that sensitiveness lost by the body.

And here appears a wonderful fact. The water in the tumbler, removed to the end of the room, had acquired the same sensitiveness, if you pinched the water with your fingers, or touched it with a pin, B screamed that you pinched him or pricked him with a pin. But B did not feel the action if performed by a person who had no magnetic relation to him. In other words, the action of the magnetizer alone in the water was felt by the subject.

Consequently the nervous sensitiveness of B's flesh had been carried further than the surface of his body and had been communicated to others duly soaked and impregnated by the "luminous effluvia," and finally, the sensitiveness of those objects remained in them a while, even when removed a certain distance from B's effluvia.

"The water," says de Rochas, "loads itself with sensitiveness, as calcium does with light and the energy received radiates from it till it has returned all it has received—in other words, till it is spent or emptied."

The extent of the luminous atmosphere around B and the force of the luminous flames which flew from his nose and eyes, and mouth and ears appear differently to A, depending upon the depth of the hypnotic sleep into into which A has been plunged. When the sleep is light his surrounding luminous atmosphere is very faint and shallow, but when he is thoroughly hypnotized, his luminous atmosphere is intense and extends far away from him.

Colonel de Rochas found that a glass of water placed within this luminous area of B was vitalized by the same life as B's, and became sensitive to B. The further away the glass of water was from B the less sensitive was he to disturbance in its substance, and vice versa.

The Colonel immersed a small wax statue of a man in this life of B that was surrounding his body, and found that when pricking this statue with a pin (concealed from B's eyes) B could exactly locate the pin pricks on his own body and would exclaim: "You are pricking my leg. You are pricking my face with a pin." The Colonel could not find that this sensitiveness of B extended more than 15 or 20 feet from his body except in exceptional instances.

The same investigator hypnotized a woman, then took her photograph and immersed it in the developing bath. At the moment of immersion the woman complained of feeling a cold chill. When he accidentally broke the plate in another room the hypnotized subject suddenly had convulsions and became desperately sick at her stomach. 'In still another instance the Colonel, awoke a woman from her hypnotic sleep by simply blowing on "her image" (photograph).

This so-called "exteriorization" and transfer of a man's sense of feeling to inanimate objects bears close relation to the subject of contagion in disease. Still another bearing of the same discovery was illustrated by Colonel de Rochas in an experiment with a magnetized metallic crown.

This magnetized crown had been originally used for the treatment of a patient in the Charity Hospital. When subsequently placed on the head of a healthy subject in a state of hypnotic lethargy, this subject showed every symptom of the disease from which the patient who originally wore the crown suffered. In other words, the "luminous effluvia" of the sick patient had utterly permeated the crown, so that when the crown was placed upon the head of a well man, and that man was hypnotized, he caught the same disease from the crown.

These investigations substantiate a theory of my own which I have been lead to form results attained in various directions. This theory is that a well man with a strong will is "positive," electrically speaking. I mean to say that his life principle, or his will, or his mentality, or whatever you chose to call it, exudes from his skin and flows out from his eyes and ears and nose and mouth like the long tongues of flame that we see burning out from high chimneys at night. But in the case of a man with weak will, or in the instance of a hypnotized subject, these flames or outward visible signs of a more strong burring fire are so weak as to barely leave the surface of the body and the orifices of the head.

One deduction to be drawn from this subject is that the contagion of a sicnic disease is much greater than that of a disease of an asthetic type. In one instance a whole room may be filled with the disease emanations, and in the other case they barely exude from the person of the sufferer.

So, too, I may contend that the will of the hypnotizer and the will of the subject to be hypnotized struggle together. The stronger flame beats back the weaker flame, and what was at first defeat becomes finally a hopeless retreat, and the flames of the hypnotizer's will find their way right into the brain centres of the hypnotized.

Money! Make it Yourself!

I have never seen anything in the papers about the People's Wind Mill; we call it the "people's" because the inventor never patented it, but let everybody use it free. Any farmer can make a mill himself and all the material complete will not cost over $10. It is a splendid mill, will pump the deepest wells, and will last longer than any mill I ever had. Any person can get diagrams and complete directions free, as I did, by sending 18 two-cent stamps to pay postage, etc., to Francis Casey, St. Louis, Mo.; he sells pumps also, and when you get your wind mill going would be glad to sell you a pump if you need it. It is useless to pay $50 or $60 for a wind mill when you can get one for $10. I think there could be big money made putting these mills up through the country as everybody would like them.

How to be a Man.

Truth, my boy, is the only foundation on which manhood can be entered; for otherwise, no matter how beautiful the upper stories may be, and no matter of how good material they may be built, the edifice—character, man-hood—will be but a sham which offers no sure refuge and protection to those who seek it, for it will tumble down when the trial comes. Alas! my boy, the world is full of such shams of manhood in every profession and occupation. I want you to be a man, and that you may be that, I want you first to be thoroughly true, I hope you would scorn a lie, but that is only the beginning of truthfulness. I want you to despise all sham all pretence, all effort to be otherwise than you are.

Another Smart Woman.

My husband is poor but proud and he does not want me to work; as I have nothing to do I get restless, and after reading in your paper Mrs. Russell's experience selling self-heating flatirons I concluded I would try it. I wrote to J. F. Casey & Co., St. Louis, Mo. and they treated me so nicely that I felt very much encouraged. As soon as I got my sample iron I started out and sold 8 irons the first day, clearing $12. I have not sold less than eight any day since, and one day I sold 17. I now have $225 clear money, and my husband does not know I have been working, but I am afraid he will be mad when I tell him. Have I done right or should I quit work and leave him to struggle alone?

AN ANXIOUS WIFE.

You are doing just right, your husband should be proud of you, go right ahead and show the world what an energetic woman can do. That self-heating iron must be a wonderful seller, as we hear of so many that are succeeding selling it.

Letter Writing.

There is nothing in this world that can be so sadly abused as letter writing. When one inscribes his name between the folds of a sheet of paper, and sends it out on its wandering, how careful he should be of what goes before it! If it be untrue, unjust, unkind, it is too late when it is gone to remedy the great wrong. It has gone on its unfriendly, hurtful mission, and who knows where it will end! Hasty, unkind letters are responsible for many broken hearts, for the alienation of friends, and for great hurt to the world in general.

Prof. Leonard, the famous reader of the unseen and unknown, has declared on the strength of his occult power that a whiskey informer was giving false evidence. Anyone who could not tell that on general principles without occult assistance would be too innocent to live in this age and generation. Prof. Leonard is like the mystic fortune-teller, who declares to an old man that he has had considerable trouble (who could go through the world without it?) and gained a reputation for disclosing the past.—Toronto Globe.

A Churn That Churns in One Minute.

I have been in the dairy business all my life and have many times churned for an hour, before butter would appear, so when I heard of a churn that would churn in a minute, I concluded to try it. Every day for a week I used it, and not only could I churn in a minute, but I got more and better butter than with the common churn. This is very important information to butter makers. The churn works easily and will churn an ordinary churning in less than sixty seconds. I have sold two dozen of these churns in the past month. Every butter maker that has seen me churn in less than a minute bought one. You can obtain all the information regarding the churn by addressing J. F. Casey & Co., St. Louis, Mo., and they will give you prompt and courteous attention. A DAIRYMAN.

He: "There is one word in the English language that is spelled atrociously." She: "What is that?" He: "Atrociously."

An honest man who stood upon the ragged edge of death, but was convinced of the truth.

John Boyd, mason, 61 years old, says: "Last Spring I was very sick and miserable, had no appetite, could not sleep nights, began to think my time had come, and that I was to join the great majority. I walked around the streets feeling entirely used up, was good for nothing, could not do a minute's work, until like a drowning man gasping for straws, concluded to try Dr. Thomson's Sarsaparilla, and began using it, as directed; it began to help me from the first trial. After using three bottles, my old-fashioned good health returned to me, and have been well and strong ever since. I cannot express in language the great worth of this wonderful medicine and what I think of it." Yours truly, JOHN BOYD.

HELP CAME AT LAST.

I have been a hard working man doing general work. Over one year ago I suffered a severe attack of LaGrippe. It left me in a helpless condition. I suffered with severe pains in my back and could not do any work. I was advised to try Dr. Thomson's Sarsaparilla. I used five bottles, and it is marvelous how quick it cured me. That is over two years ago, and my health since that time has never been better. LINDSAY SCOTT. Calais, Me., Jan., 1896.

PRINCETON, May 23d. THOMSON SARSAPARILLA Co.: Having the LaGrippe last winter, I was left near spring in very bad shape. I was all run down and I began to think I would never get any strength. F. H. Hall, of Calais, called at my place and advised me to take Thomson's Sarsaparilla. He said he would send three bottles if I would take them, and after taking two bottles I began to gain strength. I then took two more, and I must say of all the different kinds of medicines I have taken, it is with me one of the best. And I will say that I thank Mr. Hall and the Thomson Sarsaparilla Co. for what it has done for me. C. A. ROBBINS.

Given up in despair to die.

PATRICK MYERS, of Calais, Me., says: I was troubled with eruptions on the face and body, causing at times a burning and itching sensation which was almost unendurable; could do no work. I tried to get help from a number of our physicians, and paid them hundreds of dollars, which proved hopeless, was confined to my bed. I gave up entirely to despair. I was advised to try Dr. Thomson's Sarsaparilla, and I used eight bottles which entirely cured me. It purified my blood, restored my appetite, made me feel like a new man. Today am about my work, not forgetting to speak great words of praise for the above medicine.

Weak, Nervous, Sleepless, Tired and Run Down.

Nothing is so common today as the complaint of weak nerves. Read the testimony of MR. H. W. EATON, of Calais, Me.: My nerves were so unstrung that it was a burden for me to do any business, and sleep was out of the question, also had considerable difficulty with my stomach. I tried Dr. Thomson's Sarsaparilla, and it proved a blessing to me. I think everything of it, it is a great medicine, and it is a pleasure for me to recommend it.

There are numberless people who do not call themselves sick, yet who are not well. They feel weak, nervous, languid and tired. They have lost their vim, power of endurance and ambition to work. Most people have these feelings in the spring, because at this season the blood is impure, the nerves weakened, and the liver, kidney and bowels inactive.
