WHERE ALL ARE EQUAL.

These are great times, politically, in the United States as well as in Canada.

The Republican National Convention opened in the city of St. Louis, Miss., yesterday. The favourite in the race for the Republican nomination for president, is Gov. McKinley, although there is yet some talk of Morton of New York and Reed of Maine. Nevertheless the general idea is that McKinley will get the nomination. Our politicians are sometimes accused of "hedging," and McKinley is carrying on similar tactics with regard to the currency question, which is so vital across the border. The Western delegates want him to declare in favor of bimetalism while the Eastern Republicans are against any such policy. So far, Mr. McKinley has refused to commit himself.

There are many interesting incidents connected with the great gathering at St. Louis. Among the delegates are sixty colored men from the South, and as many more substitutes. It was found out the other day that the hotels and restaurants had refused to take in these colored people. The New York World says, "Every hotel and boarding house came out flat-footed today and declared that it would entertain no negro as a guest or customer. Money is no object. Threats of prosecution have had no effect."

Speaking of the matter, National Committeeman J. G. Long, of Florida, said to-night: "I have been looking all day long for a hotel, boarding-house or cafe that would admit the negroes, but it has been a fruitless search. I even went so far as to try to charter a steamboat, but when the owners learned for what purpose it was wanted they found an excuse for refusing me the use of the vessel. It is the first time in the history of the republican party that such an embarrassing predicament has arisen."

There is some talk of the colored delegates prosecuting the hotels for damages.

This is a peculiar object lesson for the freest country in the world to afford to be-nighted lands, where class and caste hold sway.

THE RESULT.

THE DISPATCH is very sorry that it cannot exactly foretell the result in the coming election, either as it will affect this county or the country, at large. In this it differs from the mass of the electors, for each individual in the county who takes the least interest in politics is already proclaiming with true prophetic insight just the way the contest is going to end.

It is very difficult to find out any thing very reliable from the newspapers. The story journals are sure that the government is safe, and the grit paper thinks a miracle only will save the overthrow of the conservatives. Sir Chas. Tupper claims a majority of 50 in the new house, and Mr. Laurier says he will have 50. Both being reliable prophets, it is likely that we will see the unique result of the conservatives and liberals each, with a majority of half a hundred.

THE DISPATCH makes a promise to its subscribers. It will tell them all about the result after the 23rd of this month. It is a great journal in every sense of the word, excepting in the line of prophecy. That divine gift has been denied it, and is only to be found at present in the party organs.

British Boards of Trade.

The third congress of the boards of trade of the British Empire has been held in London. Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, colonial secretary, in welcoming the delegates, said he was rejoiced at every fresh indication of the essential unity of the empire, upon which was founded all their hopes. The omens were never more favorable, and he trusted the deliberations would result "in an advance towards the goal to which all patriotic aspirations tend."

"The same note for closer union rings in all the resolutions," he said, "but all the proposals are dwarfed into insignificance in comparison with the proposal to secure the commercial union of the empire. Such a union will necessitate a council of the empire to which will be remitted all questions of commercial law in which the whole empire is interested. But this is not all. Imperial defense will also come within the deliberations of the council of the empire, and this question is the root of a problem with which we have to deal. So far there has been a deadlock. The proposal of the British free-traders has been rejected by the colonies, and the proposal of the colonial protectionists has been rejected by Great Britain. Consequently we must find a third course, and in give and take on both sides will be found the terms for such a proposal."

"Have you any o' that bear's soap here?" said the old farmer to the young man in the drug store. "Yes, sir, scented?" "I didna think ya wad hae sent it; oh, I'll jist tak' it wi' me."—W. Spence.

Raid on the Queen Hotel.

The Scott Act Inspector took a look into the Queen Hotel on Monday afternoon after the gentleman who had been fined for selling liquor. He could not find his man, and in the evening he returned to the search accompanied by officers McCarron and McKinnon. The inspector broke open the front door and after looking through the office tried the door of the bar. This was fastened and had to be broken in with the help of a battering ram, when a curious sight was exposed to view. From the counter to the ceiling there extended a row of iron rods about six inches apart. These were crossed by other bars all carefully secured, making a perfect network of iron to prevent anyone who might enter the room from getting his hands on the bartender. It is supposed the good elegant stimulant is handed through the irons and the money handed back and a good business kept up while the bartender runs no risk of being arrested. Officer McCarron turned on the electric light and the Inspector with his improvised ram proceeded coolly to pound the iron rods out of place and go in behind the counter. He couldn't find anything, nor anybody and gave up the search. On looking over the Hotel register he found that someone had registered his name on the strength of his afternoon visit, a piece of thoughtfulness that caused him a hearty laugh. After the officers went out of the Hotel a young fellow got some what gay with the King's English and Officer McCarron generously gave him his choice between getting inside the hall and keeping quiet, or going up to the cooler to spend the night at the expense of the town. The crowd that had gradually collected around the scene, dispersed along toward midnight, slightly disappointed that there had been no riot. There was a doctor and a lawyer in the crowd, apparently looking for business.

Fresh Fish of All Kinds.

Jackson's Fish Market is evidently an institution that has come to Woodstock to stay. It is on the south side of the bridge, opposite Grant & Birmingham's factory. In order to keep the fish fresh there are six refrigerator tanks, into which the finny denizens of the sea are put immediately on their arrival from the cool waters of the Passamaquoddy. Shipments are received every day. One of the features of the fish market is that the fish are cleaned and made ready for the table just as ordered. They are in just as good condition as if the master of the house had fished them himself from the salt water. Mr. Wilson has charge of 'he fish, and having been in that trade for years on the Passamaquoddy islands, he knows just how to handle them. A large sink has just been put in the building for the purpose of cleaning the fish. In connection with the fish market Jackson keeps a full line of groceries, this department being under the charge of Mr. Daggett. Produce of all kinds will be taken in exchange. Since coming here the firm have purchased a suitable wagon for carrying around its orders. A telephone has been put in and thus fish can be delivered a few moments after ordering. They have constantly on hand fresh salmon, haddock, cod, mackerel and pollock, as well as salted and canned fish. This is something which Woodstock has long needed.

Yarns.

This notice is intended especially for Farmers. Those who have yarn made to order by us have been exceedingly well pleased, and 'tis a very frequent expression, "We will spin no more at home." Think of one machine spinning as much as one hundred women. We don't wonder farmers' wives are tired of it, besides it will cost very much more to do it at home than it will cost at the mill.

Send along your wool soon as it is dry and your orders. We can make any size for you. Be sure and send samples of sizes. By sending your wool and orders early you will be able to have your yarn at hand more promptly, for all along the summer months we are rushed with this work.

We make single for you for 15c. and double for 18c. per lb.
