SOCIAL DEMOCRACY.

A Speech By Eugene Debbs, The Labour Agitator.

Engine Debbs, the great labor agitator recently spoke in Faneuil Hall, Boston, before an immense audience. He is reported in the Boston Herald, to have said:

Mr. President, Friends and Comrades: The age in which we live is in many respects the most extraordinary in the annals of a time marvellous for its inventions and discoveries. The centralization of wealth in the United States in the last half-century is without a parallel in the history of the world, and this centralization has given rise to a power which dominates every department of our government, and has absolute sway in all the affairs of man. In proportion as we have amassed wealth, poverty has increased, and the lot of the laborer, the producer, has become more precarious, until now thousands of them have touched the very dead line of degradation. (Applause.)

Under our present system the man who does the world's work, who produces its wealth and pays its revenue, has nothing to show for it. (Loud applause and a voice. "Right you are.")

Multipled thousands of American sovereign citizens live by permission. (More applause.) They work under conditions imposed by corporate capital, at wages fixed by corporate capital, and their only alternative is to quit and starve. They have not even the right to protest. Corporate capital has power enough to silence them by the operation of the injunction (applauds and hisses), and there is no power under which they can be prosecuted.

The judge, the creature of corporate power issues an injunction as the Russian Czar does a ukase, and sends the protesting victim to jail. (Great cheers.) The only difference between Russia and the United States in this respect is that they have one czar, while here we have 100. (Loud cheering.)

And to protest against this judicial usurpation, by which the rights and prerogatives of American citizenship have been cloven down it to invite the charge of demagoguery,

No man has ever had the courage in the past to speak out and tell the truth without inviting that charge. When Lincoln went to New York in 1860, the press of Boston denounced him as a demagogue and a dangerous man. (Laughter.) And so with other men, every one who has espoused the cause of the oppressed, has been maligned, imprisoned, sometimes put to death, but for such men we never should have emerged from barbarism. (Great applause.) And today, if a man is willing to prostitute his brain and heart in the interest of corporate capital, the press is pleased to call him respectable. (Applause.)

But the people of this country are walking up. They are no longer being deceived and misled, because to a very large extent they are beginning to think for themselves, and this, to me, is the most cheering sign of the times. (Renewed applause.) Hitherto they have been blindly followed when others have led. They have been deceived and betrayed. Men are beginning to think, and thought is revolution. (Applause.)

Working men are beginning to ask why those who work the hardest should get the least, and why those who support and defend government should be oppressed and suppressed. (Loud applause.) Because workmen have always defended all governments. (More applause.)

In times of peace the Rockefellers, the Carnegies, the Morgans and the Depews talk of patriotism, but in time of war they go to the rear or to Europe. (Laughter.) They are patriots by proxy. (More Laughter.)

Now this industrious revolution will not cease until the shackles are stricken off from white and black slaves alike. (Great applause.) It behooves every manly self-respecting man to come to our side in this movement. If we are ourselves to die in slavery, let us, at least, make an opportunity for freedom for those who come after us. (Great cheers.)

We are living under a system in which liberty is impossible. We are in no proper sense civilized. Burns has sung: "Why has man the will and power to make his fellow mourn?" and the proletariat is going to ask that question of the plutocrat with ever-increasing energy. The democracy is an organism, and we want a system in which every man who produces shall enjoy, and under which only the idler shall go hungry. (Applause.) Under a proper system we shall not have between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 unemployed men in the country. Under the right system every one will have comfort and happiness. The present system is breaking down.

While the present extremes of wealth and poverty continue, there can be no social order or peace. There can only be peace when we realize the unity of the social organism—the oneness of the race—organized upon a fraternal basis—when men, instead of antagonizing one another, will be working together in a spirit of brotherhood, in unison and in harmony for the common uplifting of the race to a higher social, moral and intellectual plane.

The speaker here advocated the setting up of the co-operative commonwealth, urging that into that commonwealth the present system was destined to flow. He said the change could be brought about by peaceable and legal methods.

As a means of bringing on the new system, he urged as one of the means the economic education of workingmen. It was proposed he said, to totally overthrow the capitalistic system of production, to totally abolish the wage system, and to put in their place the collective ownership of all the means of production and distribution. In other words, he said, they wanted the economic democracy under which the people would be really free, under which the machinery of the courts would not be organized in favor of the rich.

Mr. Debs described the results which he anticipated from the co-operative commonwealth. Let us, he said, in closing, move forward side by side, shoulder to shoulder, to the heights of emancipation; and if there are those who are inclined to lose heart, let them remember the inspiring lines of Joaquin Miller on Columbus, and take as cheers the words: "He gained a world; he gave that world its grandest lesson—on and ever on." That is the motto of our social democracy. (Loud cheering.)

KIDNEY WAR.

How Insidiously it Wages, but how Quick the Surrender, and how the Flag of Truce is Hurriedly Hoisted when that Great General, South American Kidney Cure, Turns his Guns on the Disease.

This is what James Sullivan, of Chatham, Ont., writes: "For years I was a great sufferer from Kidney trouble. The disease became so acute that I was confined to the house, and was greatly afflicted with insomnia. I was persuaded after using many other remedies without relief to procure of South American Kidney Cure. I had relied almost from the first dose. I have persisted in its use, and after using six bottles I am well and strong again. I can work fourteen hours out of twenty-four and feel very little, if any fatigue. It is the best medicine I have ever used." Sold by Garden Bros.

A Rival of Munchausen.

The nobility easily take rank among story tellers. Baron Munchausen, of course, stands first, and now comes my lady Middleton, a very good third.

The noble lady has written for an English periodical publication an account of some remarkable recoveries of lost property. In one case a valuable ring was lost. Years afterwards, when a floor was removed, the jewel was found wedged tightly around the neck of the skeleton of a mouse. The ring had fallen through a crack in the floor; the mouse, half grown at the time, had thrust its head into it, had thus been caught and had grown until it was strangled.

Another case: A gentleman shot and wounded a sandpiper, which, fluttering across a pond, was seized and devoured by a pike. That afternoon the sportsman's brother, while fishing in the pond, caught a pike in whose stomach was found the identical sandpiper.

Another case: A lady who was visiting a relative lost a ring. Six years after, while visiting the same person, then living in a far distant locality, she slipped her hand thoughtlessly into the recess of the chair she was sitting in and found the missing ring.

Another case: A lady supped at a royal ball and one of the golden spoons lodged, unknown to her, in one of the pockets formed by the plaits on the front of her dress. The following year, in presentation to the Queen, she wore the same gown. As she bent in courtesying the plait opened and out fell the missing spoon at her sovereign's feet.

A Banker's Experience.

"I tried a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for a troublesome affection of the throat," writes Manager Thomas Dewson of the Standard Bank, now of 14 Melbourne Avenue, Toronto. "It proved effective. I regard the remedy as simple, cheap and exceedingly good. It has hitherto been my habit to consult a physician in troubles of this nature. Hereafter, however, I intend to be my own family doctor."

SCENES IN WINDSOR.

The People of The Town Seem Dazed by Their Misfortune.

It was a strange sight to see some of the people who applied for food. There were those who never knew what it was to want, coming forth from the store with a loaf of bread a can of corned beef, etc., under their arms. There were young ladies accustomed to be fashionable dressed, who had nothing but a shawl to cover their heads. Young men some of whom had the where-withal to buy a pair of boots, but could not obtain the same, and who were quite satisfied to appear on the streets with their footgear badly broken. The most remarkable thing to strangers was the quiet and easy way in which the Windsor people seemed to take their misfortune; those from Halifax seemed to feel worse than those belonging to Windsor; they seemed to console themselves with the fact that they were in no worse plight than others but the people of Windsor do not seem yet to fully realize what has befallen them; they are now all housed with friends or persons who have taken them in for shelter, but this cannot last forever. The people who have been fortunate enough to escape the fire cannot provide for these others always, the provisions will run short and there is not a place in town to get more; as for sick people there is not a drug to be had in the place while the people who were employed in the various factories are without any visible means of support. The dire distress in which the people of Windsor have been placed cannot be over estimated.—Sackville Post.

CAN'T YOU SLEEP.

Sleeplessness is one of the most frequent symptoms of heart and nerve troubles. It affects all classes and all ages. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills restore the nerves to healthy action and regulate the heart. Mr. Miles Boone, Fredericton, N. B., tells how they work. "I could never rest well and often woke up with a start, and then sleep left me for the night. These pills gave me almost immediate relief, giving me healthful, refreshing sleep, and I am now strong and well."

Swarms of grasshoppers, looking like streak of silver in the air, passed in a southeasterly direction over Wilbur, Wash., lately.
